WOMAN LASHED TO BABE LEAPS TO DEATH OFF PRECIPICE

Grandmother, Fearing Loss of Child or Suicide of Its Father, Hurls Both Into the Water of Old Quincy Stone Quarry

Bereaved Father Took Family to Old Home in Finland a Few Months Ago; Baby's Mother Ended Suffering in the Sea

FEARING that her beautiful grandchild would be taken from her Mrs. Maria Nisis lashed the fifteen months' old baby girl to her waist, clasped the little one in a death embrace and leaped into the brackish waters of Wilson's old granite quarry in Quincy. The bodies of the woman and child were found yesterday afternoon. They had been in the water probably since Friday afternoon.

This strange tragedy follows the suicide of the child's mother last year, when the little one's father, Felix Erickson; the child, the mother and grandmother were bound to Finland from Quincy. Erickson's wife, in ill-health, crept from her stateroom in the night, slipped out on the deck and plunged into the ocean.

Felix Erickson is a quarryman of exceptional education. He is twenty-six years old and lives at No. 22 Buckley street, Quincy. With him last year was his wife, their baby and his wife's mother, aged fifty. The wife had been sick since the birth of the child and they all resolved to return for a visit to Finland. The sick woman found rest in the ocean depths.

Controversy Over Child.

The broken, sorrowful family continued to Finland. Erickson left the grandmother there and his child, Triarii, with the grandmother. Erickson returned to Quincy. He supposed that the child and the grandmother were still on the other side until Friday afternoon when he was walking along the street in the neighborhood of his home and was astonished to meet the grandmother and the child.

"Why, what does this mean?" cried the father. "I did not know you were here. How did you come—when did you come? —I don't understand this!"

The woman explained that she had reached this country on Thursday and that she had gone to the home of Oscar Jerfo, a prominent member of the Finnish colony, who lives at No. 19 Nelson street.

"Well, give me the child," said the father.

"No," replied the grandmother, "I'll take her."

The grandmother and the little one then disappeared and Erickson went about his business.

No Chance For Escape.

Wilson's old granite quarry lies off Centre street. The great excavations made by the removal of rock fill with water sometimes many feet deep.

Three boys peered down from the precipitous rocks yesterday afternoon, now and then pegging stones into the gloomy depths. The trio were David Lanhion of No. 9 Station street, Albert A. Norling of No. 19 Wilson street, and Fred Kelly of No. 15 Kent street. It was 4:15 o'clock when one of the boys cried out that there was a woman in the water. They caught sight of her head and hair. All took a peep and then they ran wildly for help.

As they raced through the streets the boys spread the news that a woman had been drowned in the waters of the quarry. They found Policeman Jeremiah Hinchson. He hurried to the quarry. Other men had rushed to the scene.

Babe Tied to Grandmother.

The men procured a long pole and with that moved the floating body so near the edge of the water that one of the men was able to lot himself down over the rocks in such a manner that he could grasp the clothing. Gradually the body of the woman was hauled out of the pool.

When the body was turned on the back, the men were startled to find the body of a dead little girl clasped in the woman's arms. The long golden hair of the dead child lay in a silken mass about the little head, which nestled on the woman's breast. An old silken scarf had been used to make the child safe to the body of the woman.

The news of the remarkable tragedy now swept through the settlement with the swiftness of an unchecked conflagration.

The tragedy was reported to the police

Gov. Gillett Tells Jeffries He's Sure The Fight is Fixed

California Executive Stands by His Original Assertion and Doesn't Care a "Continental."

ROWARDANNEN, Cal., June 4.—The following telegram was received to-day by James J. Jeffries from Governor Gillett regarding the interview recently published in which the Governor gave it out that he believed the fight would be a fake.

"Statement credited to me yesterday substantially correct. I did not expect its publication at this time. It was a private conversation, but since it has been published I do not care a continental. I will stand by my remarks."

In a long interview given out in Chicago, Governor Gillett said he was positive the coming fight between Johnson and Jeffries was a "frame up." He ended his interview by saying: "I am sick and tired of the whole busines, but I cannot interfere since the law permits fights. Only fools will take it seriously."

TAKE 1000 OFF LINER.

Scandinavian-American Craft Runs on Norway Rocks.

CHRISTIANSAND, Norway, June 4.—The Scandinavian liner United States, bound for New York with more than 1,000 passengers, went ashore near here to-day. The vessel was not badly damaged, but as she will be delayed for several days all of her passengers were taken off and will be sent forward on another boat.

It was at first reported that the United State was in a bad way and leaking, but later advices showed that such was not the case, and that not only are the passengers all safe, but also the steamer herself will be floated, and towed into port.

TEDDY, JR., GETS LICENSE.

Ex-President's Son to Marry Miss Alexander on June 20.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander to-day obtained a marriage license. With the issuing of the document it became known that their marriage, originally set for June 18, has been postponed to June 20. It is believed that this was done to make sure of the attendance of the bridegroom's father and other members of his family now in Europe. They are due in New York on June 16.

"GRAND CENTRAL" CLOSES.

Boston Express Last Train Out of Famous Old Terminal.

NEW YORK, June 4.—When the midnight express for Boston pulled out of the Grand Central station on the last stroke of 12, that famous terminal closed its doors forever.

The Boston train was the last train to be called in the old station To-morrow not a single engine will puff its way into the Grand Central, and Monday the work of razing it to the ground will begin

TAWNEY DEFEATS LABOR.

Minnesota Man Blocks 8-Hour Bill in Congress.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—An amendment to the sundry civil appropriations bill providing that all contracts for public works shall limit the hours of labor to eight hours was defeated in the House to-day when Representative Tawney made a point of order which was sustained 90 to 61. It is possible that Representative Tawney's action will stir labor men in his district and result in further losses to the Republican party in the West.

"AVIATOR TO RACE TRAIN.

New Yorker Will Go Against Express on Long Island.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Charles K. Hamilton, the aviator, said to-day that he intended to race an express train over the Long Island Railroad from Jamaica to Montauk, a distance of about 105 miles, and that he would fly over the tracks all the way. He is confident that he can outstrip any train for that distance.

ROME HONORS O'CONNOR.

Bishop of Newark Is Elevated to Princely Rank.

ROME, June 4.—The Tribuna says the Pope has appointed the Right Rev. John Joseph O'Connor, Bishop of Newark, N. J., assistant at the throne, with the rank of Prince.

The paper adds that a similar honor has never been conferred on a foreign prelate before.

MR. HINDS IS GAINING.

WESTBROOK, Me., June 4.—Eleven delegates favorable to the nomination of Asher C. Hinds for Congress were chosen yesterday. Windham elected five for Hinds and four for Edward C. Reynolds were chosen in Scarboro. The delegates now stand: Hinds, 91; Hale, 54; Reynolds, 18.

CHARLESTOWN WOMAN SHOOTS MAN AND KILLS HERSELF

Double Tragedy Takes Place in Front of the Casino at Hough's Neck.

FIVE SHOTS TAKE EFFECT

Fires Three Bullets Into Victim And Two Into Her Own Breast.

MISS ELLA LAWSON of Charlestown shot Theodore Shannon of Cambridge last night, while both were standing in front of the Casino at Hough's Neck, Quincy. The girl then turned the revolver to her own breast and killed herself.

The man Shannon is desperately wounded. Physicians who were hastily summoned declared that he had scarcely a chance for recovery.

Just as the man fell and a crowd began to rush toward them at the crack of the revolver, the girl deliberately turned the revolver, pressed it to her breast, and pulled the trigger.

Miss Lawson was twenty-three years old and a very pretty girl. She was the daughter of Mr. Hannah Lawson of West Quincy. Theodore Shannon is twenty-eight. He is employed as a bookkeeper for the Puritan Brewing Company of Somerville.

Tragedy Was Premeditated.

That murder and suicide was fully decided upon is believed from the fact that she fired three shots into Shannon's back and two into her breast, the second grazing the heart. One week ago last night, it is believed, she told Mrs. "Bride" Meadows of Winthrop street, Hough's Neck, that she was going to shoot Shannon.

"I have no idea why Ella did this," said Mrs. Meadows last night.

Friends of the young couple who had gone together for the last four years said that they were accustomed to visit their Quincy and Hough's Neck acquaintances almost every Sunday during the Summer. They usually went there Saturday nights as they did last night.

Shannon and Miss Lawson went to Hough's Neck on the car from Quincy which arrived at 11:30. The girl was riding on the front seat, and the man on a rear seat, where he was enjoying a cigar.

Fled From Girl on Car.

At Tabor avenue and Sea street Shannon alighted. The girl looked around and saw Shannon stepping from the car. As it started she jumped off and ran toward him. His back was turned. This was directly in front of the Casino, a public dance hall, which was crowded at the time.

Three shots were fired by the girl into Shannon's back. As an alarmed crowd of men came rushing up she fired two bullets into her own breast, and managed to stagger a few yards, when she fell.

Henry Donovan of No. 8 National street, South Boston, followed the girl and found her prone on the ground. He called for help and she was borne back, dying, to the Casino.

When Shannon fell a crowd gathered around him and half carrying, half supporting him, took him into the Casino. As he entered he glanced around and saw Mrs. Thomas Ryan of Winthrop street, a friend of Miss Lawson and himself.

Dying, Blames the Girl.

"Mildred," he cried weakly to Mrs Ryan, "if I die you know that Ella shot me. Don't forget it." Then he became unconscious.

Dr. William H. Ferris arrived, but the girl was dead. He sent Shannon to the Quincy Hospital, where it was said his chances for recovery were very poor.

"I cannot imagine the cause for all this," said Mrs. Ryan, later. "I never knew of Theodore or Ella having any trouble. They have been friends for years."

KING GEORGE PROMOTED.

England's Sovereign Now Ranks as Field Marshal of Army.

LONDON, June 4.—King George to-day assumed the rank of field marshal. A reception at Marlborough House followed the reception at Marlborough House followed the ceremony. Lord Kitchener presented the baton to Lord Roberts, who, with a short speech, to which the King replied, handed it to the new ruler.

BANKER GETS 5 YEARS.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 4.—The Old Colony Trust Company of Boston to-day foreclosed a mortgage of three and one-half million dollars on the Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern railroad in the United States court here.

CAP'N PERKINS, HIS IRE COOLED, WON'T PLUG HARRIMAN

And, Say, if You're a Friend, Don't Joke Him, or He Might Plug You!

SORROW FOR HASTY WORDS

State Street Lawyer Explains Penitently His Threat to Puncture Engineer's Anatomy.

ALL you had to do yesterday to get action was to walk into the law offices of Hopes, Gray & Gorham, on the tenth floor at 60 State street, and inquire nonchalantly if Mr. Thomas Nelson Perkins was in.

Whereupon a small boy in large buttons would usher you into a cozy side room, decorated by pictures of Ten Eyck, Hanlor, Courtney and such, and a handsome young gentleman with great broad shoulders would up and say, in an make-yourself-at-home manner:

"I am Mr. Perkins; what paper do you represent?"

You see he expected it. It had been brought out before Judge Robert Grant, in the Probate Court on the previous day, that Mr. Perkins, who, in 1891, captained the Harvard crew which whipped Yale, but who from that day to this has fallen steadily and steadily, until to-day he is nothing but a State street lawyer, and once expressed his willingness to shove a bullet through one J. Emery Harriman, some fine day, and calmly surrender to the sheriff of Norfolk County.

Mr. Perkins Confesses All.

So, one just said he was from the Boston American, and Thomas Nelson Perkins gave a start, like that, and then decided to make a clean breast of it.

"For goodness sake," he pleaded, "why do the newspapers persist in keeping this thing going? Don't you know what a fool I, I-I-he, he, Federated? I was only joking this duffer, and, thunderation, he had to go right in before Judge Grant, and say:

"'Do you still feel like shooting me, as you said you did at the hearing before the Attorney-General, the day before yesterday?'

"And I said 'I'd be glad to shoot you, at any time.'

"Well, you know it didn't sound at any time, when I was asked the question formally, the way it did when I said it to Harriman on the first occasion. And in cold type it looks like murder and pillage, and O, Lord, I shall never hear the last of it."

Perturbed by Fool Friends.

Captain Perkins, of the victorious '91 crew, glanced at the State street windows, as if anything would be better than this.

"Then, "say," he said, "honestly, I don't see why the newspapers should keep harping on this thing. All the morning I've been rung up and rung up by fool friends who want to know which, after all, is really the best cartridge, what I know about the Ned Buntline books, whether Buffalo Bill is related to me on my father's side, what makes the Wild West wild, who is my favorite undertaker, and—you know what fool friends can do when they let themselves out.

"Please take it from me, old man, I am not a murderer. I wouldn't shoot anybody. I wouldn't shoot the morning paper chap who called me to the telephone last night from my bath. I wouldn't burn barns, or anything. I live thirteen miles out of town, in the village of Westwood, and I can refer anybody who wants my police record to Constable Fred Fisher, my dire record to Chief Willie Baker, and my general behaviour to Chairman William Schlussemeyer, of the Westwood Board of Assessors."

But, Oh, He Loves Harriman.

"And how do you feel about Harriman?" "For purposes of publication?"

"Th-huh."

"For purposes of publication," said Captain Perkins, thus showing the good side of an education at the law. "I love Mr. Harriman as a man and brother."

In the plot to the play it appears that J. Emery Harriman is a civil engineer at No. 53 State street, who reads the evening papers in Brookline.

Mr. Harriman is about forty-two years old. He is the inventor of a rotary engine which, it is said, has solved problems that had baffled inventors since the days of James Watt.

Harriman was a warm friend of the late Henry O. Peabody, who owned the King Cay estate at Westwood, and oodles and oodles of money, and who, in his will, directed the trustees of his estate to put up there a school for the education of girls, in various branches of art, science and industry.

MAMIE C. HIGHTOWER'S OWN STORY OF HER LIFE AND LOVE FOR COLEMAN

Miss Mamie Cordelia Hightower, from photograph posed yesterday especially for the Sunday American.

Convicted Youth's Fiancee Declares She Will Remain True to Him Till He Serves His 15-Year Sentence.

THE pathetic and tragic story of the life of Miss Mamie C. Hightower, the fiancee of George W. Coleman, sentenced to serve fifteen years in prison for looting the National City Bank of Cambridge, is told to-day in the Boston Sunday American for the first time. In order that certain phases of her life may be properly presented to the public, because of the publicity that has attended her, this little girl from the West has frankly bared the secrets of her breast to the world.

Born and reared in Kansas City, educated for four years in a convent, engaged to be married to a banker who died suddenly, it was the strange fate of Miss Hightower to meet in another man connected with a bank the person who was to bring her greatest sorrow into her young life.

"I am still in love with George," declared Miss Hightower, "and when he gets out of prison we are to be married. He will come West with me, where we will get a new start and try to forget the heart-breaking weeks through which both of us have passed in Boston."

This is the story as the little girl told it with no effort to conceal a single fact in her life history:

By MAMIE CORDELLA HIGHTOWER.
Written Expressly for the Boston Sunday American.

I SHOULD like to begin this story by telling how much I like Boston and some of the people whom I have met here, but the circumstances will not permit me to say more than that Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Coleman, at whose home I am living, have been most kind to me, and I shall never forget their hospitality as long as I live. I am going home within a very short time to take up a new life. As best I can, I shall try to improve my mind. I have some talent for music and have put in a good deal of time in study of the piano. I shall devote myself to the piano. I have a taste for china decoration and painting. I expect to give a good deal of attention to that.

But all through it my heart will be in the East, for I want the public to know that, whatever opinion it has formed of George W. Coleman, I have never found him to be anything else than a boy with a big, good, generous heart. I love him. I will be true to him. I will marry him when he is ready.

I was born in Kansas City ,and my first recollection of my girlhood days was when I was attending the primary public school. I went to the Woodland School. My father's name is Matthew Hightower. He and my mother were born in Texas. They lived in Houston before they were married. Then they came to Marshall, Mo., and were wedded there about twenty-two or twenty-three years ago. My father is a manufacturer of bedsprings. There are four girls and one boy in our family. I am next to the oldest. The other four are now at home. We lived on Admiral boulevard, in Kansas City, and it was from my home there that I and my oldest sister, Ora, who is eighteen months older than I am, attended the Woodland School.

I and the rest of my family were constant, church-going people. I attended St. Paul's Church, on the corner of Ninth and McGee streets. Father Dunn is the pastor there. I recall Father Dunn as I was a little girl, and I know that he is still there.

From the time that I was big enough to go about I had a taste for music. I liked the piano better than any other instrument, and my father decided to give me a musical education in that direction. Mrs. Gardner, a well-known teacher of the piano in Kansas City, instructed me for some years at my home.

ALWAYS LOVED MUSIC.

While I was a little school girl I read the newspapers and the magazines, but I cannot remember that I read any novels. My mind ran to the piano more than it did to love stories or anything of that kind. My sister Ora, however, is a great reader. She is also a prominent worker in the church with which she is connected. She has musical talent, is a splendid artist and a girl of unusual mental ability. I say this about my sister Ora

U. S. HALTS KILLING OF BOSTON MAN

American Forces at Bluefields Ordered to Prevent Execution of William F. Pittman, Now Prisoner in Hands of Madriz

Young Man's Family Appeals to Bay State Senators to Act; Court Martial May Mean Intervention in Nicaragua

APPEAL OF BROTHER IN PITTMAN'S BEHALF

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge,
Washington, D. C.

I earnestly request you to do everything in your power for my brother, William F. Pittman, now held as a prisoner by the Government of Nicaragua. Newspaper reports say he is to be tried by court martial. He is a loyal American citizen and he has rendered good service to the United States Government at Panama. Anything you can do or any word that you can send me will be sincerely appreciated.

EDWIN F. PITTMAN.
No. 378 Spring street,
Boston, June 4. Cambridge, Mass.

THE State Department at Washington yesterday sent an order to Captain Gilmer, in charge of the American naval forces at Bluefields, Nicaragua, to prevent the execution of William F. Pittman of East Cambridge, a dashing young engineer of the insurgent forces who has fallen into the hands of "President" Madriz.

An appeal to save his brother has been sent to Senators Lodge and Crane by Edwin F. Pittman of East Cambridge. The family of the young man fear that before the Government can interefere the prisoner will be shot.

Should the successor of Zelaya take such summary action against the Cambridge young man as did Zelaya in reference to Groce and Cannon who were executed after a drum-head court martial it is believed that the United States Government would step into the martial troubles of that belligerent country and put an end to the strife at once.

Orders to Save Pittman.

The Government has already taken measures to prevent the death of the dashing young American who joined the forces of Estrada, the head of the vanquishing insurgent forces.

A dispatch of an emphatic and emphatic character was sent yesterday by the Government to Captain Gilman, in charge of the American naval forces at Bluefields, to save Pittman.

Other cables have been sent to the field of war for the purpose of preventing the death of the young man. One of the cablegrams was to the United States consul at Managua for transmission to the head of the Nicaraguan Government. Another was forwarded to the American consulate at Bluefields.

The report has reached the American Government and the friends and relatives of Pittman that the prisoner is to be tried by a Madriz "court-martial." That was enough to cause the utmost apprehension as to the result in this country. The swift execution of Groce and Cannon by Zelaya was characterized as an act of barbarity by this Government and was the cause of the banishment of the then head of the Government.

May Disperse Court-martial.

The Secretary of State does not recognize the power of an unrecognized government to execute an American citizen. The mere fact that the organization under the control by Madriz is not regarded as a government by the United States, excludes the possibility of Madriz making the claim that Pittman was in rebellion against the established government.

The cause of Pittman is therefore infinitely stronger than that of Groce or Cannon, and for that reason Captain Gilmer may go to the extent of dispersing the court martial.

The official dispatch, as given out at Washington, was as follows:

There is a newspaper report from

NOTICE! Absolutely Not Good as a HOUSEHOLD PREMIUM COUPON.

ROBBERS AT WORK IN U. S. CAPITOL

Three Massive Flower Vases Presented to Senator Penrose Missing.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—That thieves have been at work in the Capitol in the sterling discovery made to-day, according to a hurry up call sent to the sergeant-at-arms of the Senate.

An attempt to keep the matter secret was made, but enough was learned to indicate plain robbery in the rooms of the post office and post roads committee, of which Senator Penrose is chairman.

Three massive silver flower vases twenty-six inches in height are missing. They were presented to Senator Pearose on his recovery from a severe illness three years ago, and have been kept filled with choice flowers.

The Penrose rooms are on the ground floor of the Senate wing, but have snap lock doors and grated windows.

DIES AT FUNERAL OF HER HUSBAND

Fall River Woman Collapses as Body Is Being Taken Into Church.

FALL RIVER, June 4.—Overcome with grief because of the death of her husband, Mrs. Samuel Campbell suddenly died from paralysis of the brain as his remains were being taken into the United Presbyterian Church to-day. With years of savings the couple had bought a house and planned to move into it shortly. On Monday of this week he was stricken by pneumonia and died on Wednesday.

The couple lived, with their two daughters, Mary and Sarah N., who are school teachers, just across the street from the little church where Mr. Campbell had been an elder for many years. As the remains were being taken into the church Mrs. Campbell collapsed, and when her daughters went to her assistance she was dead.

PITTMAN MUST HAVE FAIR PLAY, WARNS UNITED STATES

Nicaragua Is Told That Boston Prisoner Must Not Be Summarily Executed.

San Juan Del Sur to the effect that William P. Pittman, an American citizen, who is alleged to have laid mines, while operating with the Estrada forces, has been made prisoner by the Madriz forces, and is about to be tried by court-martial. It is unnecessary to point out that this Government will jealously scrutinize the treatment accorded him, which must be humane and regular. You will immediately make inquiry and report to the department.

Yesterday's dispatches to the State Department showed that the Madriz forces have been completely routed at Rama and that the insurgents are pursuing them.

Prisoner East Cambridge Boy.

The young man believed to be in danger of death by shooting is now a colonel, this title having been won since he embarked in the Nicaraguan war. He is now twenty-seven years old and was educated in an East Cambridge grammar school. He is six feet tall and an athlete. His mother and three brothers and a sister live on Sprigg, at the head of Eighth street, East Cambridge. One of the members of the family, speaking for all of them, at their home last night, said:

"William left home when he was but seventeen years of age, traveled all over the world and perfected himself in mining and electrical engineering. He was a big, generous-hearted, ambitious boy when he went away. With pride we have noted his growth in mind and body since, for he returns to us every Summer for a visit.

"Last year he went to Panama as an electrical expert. Even then he was talking of going to Nicaragua, where offers had been made for his services. William had no notion of entering the army, as we supposed, but soon we heard from him that he had done so and he modestly admitted that preference had been shown him until he held a commission.

Held Rank of Colonel.

"As we understand it, men skilled in technical engineering were in great demand. William was a young man who endeared himself to all who came in contact with him, and we were not surprised at his rapid promotion. It was but a few weeks ago that he wrote, saying he now held the rank of colonel. Naturally his mother and sister deplored the fact that he was engaged in warfare.

"But William was such a self-reliant young man that we felt he had acted for the best as he saw it.

"The bad news began to come within a week. There were conflicting reports. One named him 'Philip Pitman.' To-day's dispatches gave us our last name 'Pittman.' But we knew it must be our William, and when the dispatches said he was wounded, captured and liable to a court-martial, we were engaged in a very much disturbed.

"Now that we know the United States Government has taken a decided stand for our boy, we feel somewhat better, but the words 'court-martial' and the recollection of what the Salvation Army did in executing two Americans captured in last year, one a boy, have been a terrible shock to us. We cannot realize that one thing we know, he will carry himself with credit and honor whatever the outcome.

"William was only a school boy when he first went away. With school boy carelessness he neglected writing. We located him on a Ward Line steamer, where he was engaged in electricity and marine engineering. Again William was on the McPherson, of Mississippi, a year or two later he traveled in many foreign countries, with his letters coming from each, each succeeding Summer.

"Then the Nicaraguan wrote he said he hoped the trouble would be all over by June. He, during the time, was having hot weather and rains, for that is a malarial country, and he has already suffered from it.

"We had been looking ahead for his return home next month. The war news received makes us wonder if we will ever see him again.

"Certainly we see no reason why he should not be treated as an American prisoner of war, but they are a strange people and there may be in it a strange penalty. We have confidence that the United States Government will insist upon fair treatment in his case."

WOMAN TAKES DEATH PLUNGE WITH INFANT

at headquarters and Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue was assigned to the case. When he reached the quarry 200 people were there. He arranged for those who would be likely to know the dead couple to take a good look at them. Finally one man said that he knew the child—she was Felix Erickson's little one.

Goodhue ascertained the address of Erickson, and went to his home. He found the father there.

"Your child has been drowned," Erickson was told. "The little one and a woman were found in the water at the quarry. Come and see them."

"I can't look at them—I can't go," cried the father, in great excitement.

The policeman quieted the father. Then Erickson said that he would go to the morgue and look at the bodies. Dr. John G. Fraser, medical examiner, in the meantime had been summoned. He viewed the bodies, said it was apparently a case of murder and suicide, and they were taken to the morgue.

The father went to the morgue, caught sight of the dead baby face and covered his face with his hands while his body shook with sobs.

"Oh, my God! My God!" he cried in his agony.

Then in a voice that trembled white tears bathed his face he told of the double tragedies of his short married life—the suicide of his wife and now the murder of his child and suicide of his wife's mother.

Woman Feared His Suicide.

"When I spoke to my child's grandmother about taking the little one from her," the distracted father told Inspector Goodhue, "she objected and made some remark that indicated that she feared that I might take my life. She appeared afraid to trust the child to me.

"I think she was strange how Mrs. Nisk came to reach Quincy and I not be told about it. I had not seen her any money with which to pay her way here. I cannot see how she got here. I cannot understand why I was not informed by the immigration officials about her coming here with the child, or why I was not told about her being in the home of the family in Quincy.

"I can't understand it at all. I shall try to look the matter up when my mind clears. But now I can hardly think."

BROWN UNIVERSITY DROPS RELIGIOUS RESTRICTIONS

Overwhelming Vote of Alumni Calls for New Order of Things.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 4.—Religious restrictions at Brown University are to be done away with. The university charter is to be revised.

Announcement was made this afternoon of the results of the generally poll of the alumni. This showed that 2,008 favored dropping sectarianism absolutely, while but 223 voted against dropping the restriction of the distinctive Baptist atmosphere.

The vote is one of the most important events in the university's history. Sentiment here to-day, since the poll was announced, indicates that an early change will be made of the status quo at Brown. Religious restrictions are doomed to pass, it is believed.

Paganistic nationalism has prevailed since 1764. In light of this fact, developments expected in the near future will be nothing to be historic.

Those who have long been familiar with alumni opinions, say that the sentiment favoring a radical change is widespread. It is a fact that many already have demanded that changes be made. The revision of the charter would mean that Brown would be open to the advantages of the benefits of the Carnegie Foundation Fund.

Why Change Was Asked.

Here are briefly just what the alumni consider are real reasons Brown should make the proposed change:

"In order to preserve the spirit and fulfill the real purposes of the founders.

"In order to avoid the necessity of inquisition into the theological opinion and ecclesiastical relations of every candidate for the board of trustees.

"In order to avoid all religious tests for members of the teaching staff.

"In order to render eligible to the board of trustees the large section of the alumni which is now excluded.

"In order to remove public misconstruction as to the truly liberal and catholic attitude of our university, and to secure for our faculty both the confidence with which they are entitled and the support for themselves in their old age and for their families which such recognition involves.

Right For 1784, Wrong Now.

A year or more ago a committee of three appointed to consider the changes in the university charter, found that the present system of selecting teachers from four churches only was right for 1764 and wrong for 1910. Many of the sister state charters are barred from teaching by present rules of the legislature, but the university is narrowly sectarian: under the present system, advantage cannot be taken of the Carnegie Foundation Fund."

Since that time, President William H. P. Faunce of the university, has declared in favor of removing the religious restrictions in the charter.

It is now up to the Board of Trustees to act. It is the belief of many alumni that the Board will vote during Commencement week to remove all sectarianism at the university.

ENGLISH 'BUNKERED' UPON BUNKER HILL

George Shipway, statistical secretary of the World's Sunday School Association, of Birmingham, England, told the British Sunday School delegates and visitors here who are visiting Boston on their way home from the convention held in Washington, D. C., at a banquet in Ford Hall, Auburton place, last night, that they had visited "that little hill (Bunker Hill) where the Englishmen were bunkered." He was speaking in a good feeling existing between the United States and England. His witticism brought forward a burst of applause and loud and prolonged laughter.

"The hearts of Britons beat true for you in America," said Mr. Shipway. "They defeated for you in the war with Spain and again in your conquest of the Philippines. We told other nations to keep their hands off in that matter."

There were plates laid for 250 at the banquet. W. H. Hartshorn, the noted Sunday school worker, was chairman of the banquet committee. He presented Dr. A. Z. Conrad, of Paris, first Chaplain as toastmaster. The speakers were the Rev. Thomas Rayer, of Greenock, Scotland; the Rev. Ernest Bowsett of Stockley, London, and George W. Pendleton of Belfast.

A mass meeting will be held this afternoon at Park street church, Trinity Sunday school workers from all Boston will be present. The British Sunday school party will be tendered a reception and Samuel P. Capen, head of the American Board, will preside.

PATROLMAN PUT OUT WITH BASEBALL BAT

A man, whom the police say they know, leaped upon Patrolman Robert J. Eberts on Southampton street last night and knocked him unconscious with a baseball bat. Patrolman Eberts was rushed to Station 6 where he was examined by Dr. Herbert J. Keenan, who found that the injured man was suffering from concussion of the brain. The assailant escaped.

The police say that the officer owes his life to the stiffness of the helmet which broke the full force of the blow. The man for whom the police are searching is said to have a hatred for Patrolman Eberts who arrested him a short time ago for intoxication. The assault occurred in an unfrequented section of Southampton street near the Albany bridge. Patrolman Eberts is resting comfortably at his home No. 164 Borton street, Dorchester.

LASELL SENIOR RECEPTION.

Beautiful Decorations Mark ten Annual Gathering.

At Lasell Seminary last evening the annual reunion reception was attended by a large number of visitors. The decorations were and roses completely filling the spacious halls and reception rooms of the buildings while the grounds were bedecked with Japanese lanterns and class banners.

In the reclening party were the principal, Dr. Winslow and wife; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bragden and Miss Mildred Goodall, president of the senior class.

JORDAN HAS CHANCE TO ESCAPE CHAIR

If Granted a New Trial, Wife-Slayer Will Have Right to Second Degree Plea.

Chester S. Jordan, convicted of the murder of his wife, may escape death in the electric chair and proceedings pending before the Supreme Court on exceptions may result in a new trial.

At conferences between counsel for Jordan and District Attorney Higgins the question of a second degree plea of guilty with the penalty of life imprisonment, has been talked over. That Jordan will plead guilty of murder in the second degree in case of the granting of a new trial, is not denied by his counsel.

Under conviction of murder in the first degree there is no way in which a further plea can be entered. His chance for life rests entirely with the supreme Court.

If the Supreme Court should find that no error in law was made at the trial, Jordan will be at once sentenced to death.

Jordan's attorney's at the opening of his trial expressed the belief that the prisoner was insane, and asked that he be sent to an asylum. Noted alienists declared that Jordan was suffering from incipient paresis, and that in five years at the most, he would either be a helpless imbecile or dead, but alienists for the government declared him sane.

Jordan is confined in the jail at East Cambridge. He betrays no anxiety over his probable fate, being concerned more over his meals.

Chase for a Firebug.

Somebody set fire to the barn of the Chelsea Iron and Coal company, and to the hay and cloth shed of Woodbury & Bowman Company, in Chelsea, Thursday night. State Fire Marshal Neal has two detectives trying to discover who that somebody is, and the people of Chelsea are praying that they discover.

Father Goldberg Muses on Mystery

Question Is: Why Did Young Alberts Shoot at Sarah Goldberg if He Doesn't Love Her?

Why did Emperain Alberts shoot at Sarah Goldberg? Is there a love affair that nobody knew about? That's what Cooper street wants to know, and most of the men residents dropped into the sewing machine store of Miss Goldberg's papa at No. 19 Cooper street, last night, to talk things over.

"His father come to here and told me it he didn't know nothing about no shooting," said Mr. Goldberg. "He said his boy found such a rusty pistol in the street and by accident it shoots. Anyway, the boy don't remember nothing."

"I told him 'If he is crazy in the head he ought to go by a lunatic asylum and if he is not crazy he ought to be sent to a jail yet.' We all know that fellow, but my Sarah never had nothing to do with him. She has a young man. She never got any letters from him and she don't know why he shot at her."

The Alberts live at No. 20 Cooper street across the street. Young Alberts is out on bail and his mother, sister and little brother forged a bond and kept the visitors away.

"It was all an accident," said Mrs. Alberts. "That pistol was so little it couldn't hurt anybody. He never intended to hurt her."

But the Goldbergs are determined to prosecute. Alberts was in court yesterday, but his case was continued until Tuesday and he was released in bail.

GUESTS AT BLUE HILL.

Scientific Society Puts in a Day of Observation.

A ramble through the Blue Hill reservation and a swift climb to the summit, but not merely for the invigorating air, but for discussion and observation, was enjoyed yesterday afternoon by the members of the Boston Scientific Society. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Rotch entertained the party at the observatory. The geological features of the Blue Hills formed the subject of discussion when the party arrived at the observatory.

GIRLS WHO WORK TO HAVE OWN HOTEL IN BOSTON

Problem in Economy Is Solved at Last by Public Spirited Citizens Backing Plan.

THE working girls of Boston are to have a hotel of their own.

The new Mary Washington Hotel will be exclusively for women, particularly for women who earn less than $10 a week.

For $1.50 a week Boston working girls are to enjoy a little suite, with kitchenette and all modern improvements. According to the leaders in the plan, the new hotel will be a big advance in stamping out the social evil by helping girls to help themselves.

The Woman's Hotel Association has been formed to further the plan, and to finance the building and equip the hotel there is a board of directors which includes Alexander McGregor of the Houghton & Dutton Co., W. A. Gaston, president of the Shawmut National Bank; Ex-Mayor Thomas N. Hart, Joseph O'Neil of the Federal Trust Company, S. W. Sinclair of Clipston & Stroud, James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks, John B. Schoffel of the Tremont Theatre, A. Shuman & A. Shuman & Co., James M. Morrison of the Thomas Kelley Company, Rev. W. P. McQuaid, pastor of St. James Church, and James H. Vahey, attorney for the association.

Advantages of Hotel.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith, one of Boston's foremost workers for women, is the originator of the idea. The new hotel will offer:

Complete independence. Individual latchkeys.

Comfortable rooms at lowest prices.

Freedom from restricting and hampering rules and regulations, which exist in many of the philanthropic institutions.

Rent at $1.50 a week.

Meals at fifteen and twenty cents.

Delicatessen store for those who find it cheaper to cook their own meals.

Industrial exchange.

S. W. Sinclair of Clipston & Sturgis is the architect. The building will be four stories high and contain more than a hundred rooms. There will be three baths on each floor and every room will be an outside room. Trunk storage is to be provided in the basement and janitor service and electric light is included in the rental. There will be large reception rooms and small parlors.

Just for Working Girls.

"I know how many girls are living in garret rooms, cooking on oil stoves, doing their own laundry and scrimping and saving in every way in order to remain respectable," said Mrs. Smith yesterday. "These girl earn $5, $6, $7 and $8 a week.

"Some of the institutions offer board and room at $6 and $7 a week, but how can these girls pay that price and meet their other expenses, such as clothes and incidentals and carfare?

"Working girls must dress if they are to hold their positions, and they suffer harshly and constantly from the strain which on each floor and every room will be an outside room. Trunk storage is to be provided in the basement and janitor service and electric light is included in the rental. There will be large reception rooms and small parlors.

"Working girls must dress if they are to hold their positions, and they suffer harshly anything in their stomachs or not.

"There are hundreds of women dependent upon their own resources who are living in lodging houses in Boston. Those are the ones who want to help.

Suite For Two Girls.

"Our plan is this. For instance—some of the girls will have two rooms and a kitchenette. Two girls can share this suite and pay $1.50 each a week. That includes light and heat and janitor service. In the basement will be a cafe where meals will be served for fifteen and twenty cents. There will also be a delicatessen store to accommodate those who want to cook all or part of their own meals.

"There will also be single room suites and three-room suites. We plan to rent part of the hotel for transients at one dollar a day. The association is incorporated and profits will not be distributed later on.

"We also want to help women who are obliged to earn their own living by sewing, or embroidery, or knitting. For them we will have an industrial exchange.

"There will be practically no rules, as the girls are to be just as independent as in any hotel. It will also be nonsectarian."

Boston is way behind other cities in this respect, as New York has two modern hotels for the women who receive less than $10 a week, where girls can rent a flat of two rooms and kitchen for $3.50 each, and Providence has two such hotels.

STEAL RUSSELL WREATHS.

Vandals Take Flowers Placed on Grave by "Dakota Dan."

Two floral wreaths and a huge bouquet of cut flowers, placed by "Dakota Dan" Russell on the graves of the late Daniel Russell and Mrs. Russell in Wyoming Cemetery last Sunday, were removed from the graves some time Tuesday, although the flowers placed upon the graves have remained there without molestation.

Sunday afternoon "Dakota Dan" and his wife visited the cemetery and placed the flowers upon the graves. Again Monday they visited the cemetery and the flowers were still in place. Wednesday a visitor to the cemetery Monday remarked at the beauty of the floral pieces, and the following day several persons who had heard of the bouquets visited the cemetery and were much surprised to find the flowers missing.

More New Nurses.

The graduating exercises of the Boston Infirmary Department's hospital at Long Island will be held in the hospital Wednesday afternoon. Mayor Fitzgerald will deliver an address, as will Edward M. Gallagher, chairman of the board of trustees of the infirmary department; Joseph H. O'Neil and Dr. Francis W. Palfrey.

Ten-Inning Battle Gives Visitors the Rubber Game of an Exciting Series.

By MORTON BIRGE.

AFTER a series of frightful flurries, in which Boston stock rose and fell and rose and fell again the New Yorkers came to the baseball market in the annual clash between Boston and New York Curb Exchanges. This stock market disaster took place on the Huntington Avenue grounds yesterday afternoon.

In the fatal tenth inning New York rallied sharply and cornered one whole additional run. This made the score 5 to 4 in favor of the Boston bulls and bears—up to the trading post—that is the plate—for the last half of the tenth, but Pitcher McGlynn was all long on courage and drops and shoots and Boston couldn't cover the one-point margin.

So, after all trades were made and sales delivered, the New York bears came

BIG BILLS PENDING AS LEGISLATURE NEARS FINISH

Party Whips Out to Close the Session by Coming Saturday.

THE Legislature of 1910 is not good for many more days of life. The presiding officers, the corporation and party whips and the lobbyists in the corridors and in the hotels has passed the word that "we ought to be out of here by next Saturday."

The chances for procuring by next Saturday are very slight, however. Men who have been at the State House for years say that prorogation cannot come before the end of the following week and that the session may lap over into the June twenties.

The biggest matters of the year are yet to be decided. The "L" Holding bill has yet to run the gauntlet of Senate and House. The Berkshire trolley bill is safely past the Senate—safe for the Morgan interests—and partly through the House. But the fights on both measures are to be nasty ones.

Further, there are the Voluntary Associations bill, the Governor's bill to allow the Boston Holding Company to issue preferred stock, President Mellen's bill to validate the capital stock of the New Haven road, the Lawrence bill to penalize the making of false returns to the Railroad Commission, the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad bill, the East Boston water front bills and the several milk bills, not to mention scores of measures of less import.

Dust for Consumers' Eyes.

Unless the producers and consumers stop briefly, the milk contractors are due to hand them a severe walloping within a day or two. It is difficult to describe just how strong the contractors are with the State Senate. There is a farmers' faction there, of course, but some of this faction have not been averse to throwing dust in the eyes of the producers and consumers and killing off bills which would give the contractors less leeway.

For instance, the Senate killed last Friday a bill to allow cities and towns to establish milk distributing stations. This bill passed the House and went through the Senate up to the engrossment stage, then it was adroitly placed on the table on May 20 on motion of Senator W. Prentiss Parker of Boston.

Last Friday, when the Senate had half adjourned and only a few members were in the chamber, Senator Desmond Mr. Parker made a motion to have the bill taken from the table and then made another suggestion that it be killed. The slaughter followed. The defeat of this bill may be considered by the Senate to-morrow, and it may not. The milk contractors' lobby is hoping to see that the "may not" part of the programme will be carried out.

Wondering About Senate.

There is much wonderment as to whether or not the Senate will dare kill the Public Franchise League's motion to investigate the voluntary associations which commonly control gas, electric light and street railway companies.

It will be a long while before the House forgets its debate on this bill last Friday. The charge by Representative James H. Knight of Jamaica Plain, Republican floor leader of the House, that Representative Clarence A. Warren of Chelsea requested to bring in a report of the judiciary committee report on the measure because "my friend Charlie Innes is against it" has been one of the real sensations of the year on Beacon Hill.

Incidentally, the Knight charges have opened legislators' eyes to the fact that former Senator Innes is pretty nearly the "big man" in the State House lobby this year. He has been "in" on practically every measure which affected the big corporations, especially financial and taxation bills.

The fight on the "L" holding bill will be continued in the Senate to-morrow, with Senator George Holden Tinkham leading the fight against bottling up Boston subways and tunnels for the Elevated. The Senate is pretty much of an "L" asset, however, and the real fight against the bill must be expected in the House.

The Elevated's following in the House is of no mean size, either, but politically unsafe scares House members more easily than it does members of the Senate.

Of the various bills affecting the New Haven Railroad, the bill to allow the Boston Railroad Holding Company to issue preferred stock will be the chief one, as far as fighting is concerned. The draft of the bill has not yet appeared, but it is rumored that an attempt will be made to push through a provision that the Holding Company may issue preferred stock with no limit but the sky.

EX-MAYOR PETERSON SAYS: 'FIRE CIVIL SERVICE TRIO'

Salem Member of Republican Machine Committee Very Forcible in Criticism.

HON. JOSEPH N. PETERSON of Salem, former mayor of that city, and one of the half dozen members of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee which is mighty close to being the G. O. P. machine of this jurisdiction, came up to town yesterday to express his mind about the Civil Service Commission at the State House and the attitude and course of that body towards the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald and his appointments.

Mayor Peterson talked freely to other Republicans at the Parker House. He said he didn't care who heard him—that he didn't care how many fellows printed it.

"When you get the schoolmaster-mind in politics," said his honor, the ex-Mayor, "you are not helping the schoolmaster any and you are simply raising Jinks with politics.

"They Ought to Be Fined."

"These three gentlemen at the State House are not doing their party any good. If they keep on, indeed, they will wreck it. If they are acting with serious intent, and of their own volition, the result seems to indicate that they are unfitted for their positions. If somebody is stringing them, they are equally unfit. In either case they ought to be fired, and if Eben Draper is the man I think he is he will not long let them to run along much longer.

"I do not wish to be understood as having the reflection of either the late George Hibbard or the present Alfred McCarthy in mind. I know that in their cases much has been made of the fact that they were nominated more than once by Presidents of the United States and confirmed a few times by United States Senates, but that doesn't prove that they are any better than other nominees.

"As a matter of fact, big Republicans in Boston tell me there was no reasonable fault to be found with any of the Mayor's nominees. By this I do not mean that they were the men you or I would have picked for the same places, but they were men good enough to fill them.

Mayor's Appointments Praised.

"One of the biggest bankers in Boston said to me to-day: 'I have been surprised by the character of the Mayor's appointments, and I am at a loss to understand this Civil Service Board. I was against Fitzgerald for election. I don't fancy him now, but I am bound to say that his nominations have been surprisingly good.

"That, I think, represents the attitude of the average man. I hope that when the next vacancy occurs in the Civil Service Board, some time this Summer, the Governor will see fit, as a matter of fact, to nominate not only a Democrat for the place, but a real Democrat. He should get a Boston Democrat, and one who is in sympathy with the Mayor.

"But I wouldn't wait until that time. If I were Governor I should remove the Civil Service Board without parley, indicating to the city and the State that I believed it fair play to put something else to home rule."

Mayor Peterson continued to meet his Republican friends and acquaintances for renewed talk of Jinks behind this anti-Civil Service stuff during all of that time. Nobody quarrelled with him about it.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

TWO OFFICERS IN THE NEW UNION OF BOSTON MILLINERS

MISS ESTHER LOCKWOOD ETHEL NEWMAN

HATS TO STAY UP! MILLINERS IN UNION

MILLINERY has taken a fighter's triangle-hold on the husbands and fathers of Greater Boston. The Boston milliners have organized or unionized themselves into a club. It is called The Milliners' Club of Greater Boston.

The objects of the club, as set forth by Miss Esther Lockwood, president, are to protect the interests of the milliners, promote business, keep in touch with the latest styles, and, incidentally, to promote sociability and culture.

Presumably, one object of the club also, will be to keep the price of women's hats up to its present high-water mark. For that reason the new organization is of lively interest to the man who cares one penny to pay for a woman's hat.

Next to Miss Lockwood, the president, the chief official of the club is Miss Ethel Newman, the treasurer. She handles the money. As there are one hundred members and all are paying dues, the responsibility of the treasurer is no light affair.

Speaking of the club, President Lockwood says:

"We are making millinery an art study as well as a business. Literature and sociability play their part in the club meetings. Incidentally the treasurer is collecting funds, so that at the end of each trade season a delegation can go to other cities to learn what is new in hats.

"In turn many will take the club and the experience. The club will receive the benefit of all this information. Also it is the business of the club to assist its members in a fraternal and professional way when they require assistance, to find work for them when they are out of work, and generally watch over the welfare of each other.

"Other trades organize, why not we? Besides, it is great fun. The other night we made a birthday surprise party, and presented Miss Janet Simons with a new Paris hat. By devoting our spare moments to each other we promote business and educate ourselves in our chosen trade."

FOURTEEN NEW TEACHERS.

Annual Exercises of the Sloyd Training School.

There were fourteen graduates at the exercises of the Sloyd Training School held at the school yesterday in Harcourt street. Dr. C. Hanford Henderson of Harvard addressed the class and emphasized the duties of a teacher. Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw being unable to be present, the diplomas were presented by Mrs. F. S. Fiske.

Through the influence of the school six of the graduates have already obtained positions. The following named received diplomas: Mabel E. Bemis, Alice M. Cudley, Jessie E. Hildreth, Bessie A. Hyde, Marjorie Jones, Frances Ogier, Annabel C. Williams, Earl R. Brown, N. B. Corthell, Joseph Landall, E. W. Ochsenpaugh, Dana Stevens, Frederick L. Woodlock and Arnold F. Grover.

DIES IN SOUTH STATION.

Supt. Leighton of Nantasket Beach Is Stricken Suddenly.

Superintendent Moody Leighton of the Metropolitan Park Police force at Nantasket Beach died yesterday from heart failure in the South Station. He was born at Scarboro, Me., in 1850, was formerly on the Revere police force, and when the State Reservation at Revere opened in 1896 he became an officer of the Metropolitan force. He was made sergeant in 1900 and two years later succeeded Superintendent Gleason at Nantasket. He lived near the Reservation and is survived by a widow and daughter.

Canopie in Tomorrow.

Wireless word was received from the White Star Liner Canopic on her way from Naples and Genoa that she would arrive off Boston Light about 4 a. m. Monday. The Canopic is in command of Captain Carter, and has on board 60 saloon, 165 second cabin and 1,138 passengers. The Allen Line steamer Pavonian will also arrive Monday. She has on board 219 cabin and 568 steerage.

4 KAZAKS TOO MUCH FOR COL. BILLINGS

Don't Know What a Kazak Is, Eh? Well, the Colonel Didn't; This Tells.

Did you ever hear of a Kazak? Or, did you never meet an Astenian? Could you, perchance, turn to an atlas and put your finger on the tiny dot that represents the town, or city or district, or whatever governmental or territorial division it may be known to the inhabitants as Vondvizenkee?

Caution! Don't try to pronounce it aloud. Three men in the immigration service have contracted acute laryngitis in the attempt, and one persistent inquirer in the department suffered the loss of his voice and several teeth because he would not give it up.

When the Carmarder Ivernia docked on May 5 there walked down the gang plank four men bearing the musical names of Balog Mezmajejko, Geog Chodsojejko, Jusefj Abljew and Ignai Chodsojejko. When Colonel Billings saw that bunch of names he called for water. Recovering somewhat he had all his interpreters called forward to find out if any of them could hold converse with the visitors to our shores.

One after another gave up the job until all the known Asiastic and European languages or dialects were exhausted, but not one of the interpreters could understand the guttural grunts of the wild, half savage, but handsome and picturesque strangers.

Colonel Billings was stumped. Finally he sent for Inspector "Bill" Hartland. Inspector Bill speaks more varieties of languages than there are pickles. He at once concluded that the men were from the Caucasus, where they speak a different language in every village, and began trying them in Slavic dialects with all the fervor out of Jusefj Abljew. He could not communicate linguistically with the others, but Jusefj could, and the problem was settled.

Jusefj said they were Kazaks from Vosdjenkee. One of the interpreters said that they were Astenians, but strict search in the ethnological department of the Boston Public Library failed to uncover anything relating to either Kazaks or Astenians, and for statistical purposes they come under the general division of "all others" in the immigration office files.

The Kazaks, or Gazabos, if you prefer that, are still boarding with Colonel Bill ings at his hotel on Long Wharf. The examination revealed that they were going to farms in Seattle, but the half bushel of Russian copper cart wheels which they had, when changed into real money, would not take them beyond West Hockanum. Yesterday Colonel Billings received transportation money for for all except Jusefj, the youngest member of the party, and they will leave to-day.

Jusefj has been offered a job on a Wolfton Neck farm, and he will probably be allowed to land, as he is a hardy youth, albeit only about half timed.

TAFT TO ESCAPE CROWD AT BEVERLY

Officials Give Up Plan to Welcome President When He Arrives June 23.

BEVERLY, June 4.—President Taft, who is expected at the Summer White House on Burgess Point on June 23, will not be given a public reception this year. The Mayor and prominent citizens have discussed the matter and decided that when Mr. Taft arrives here for rest and quiet he will be better pleased if he can avoid a crowd and excitement.

It will attend commencement exercises at Yale, where his son, Robert J. Taft, is graduated this year, and then meet Mrs. Taft on the way to Beverly. Miss Helen Taft and Charles Taft will arrive with their parents or soon afterwards.

At the Taft cottage some of the rooms have been re-decorated and a new avenue has been cut through the lawn. In front of the house is a large new fountain of English design.

If President Taft arrives on June 23, as is expected, he will make only a short stay and be back in Washington again by the following Sunday night, June 26. There he will stay several days. He is not expected to come to Beverly for his vacation until Congress adjourns.

Charley Taft will not be debarred from fresh water fishing in Wenham Lake this year, as Councilman Driscoll of Beverly has induced the Salem Water Board to grant permits to Beverly people.

GIRL SENIORS MEET.

Dorchester High Luncheon Held at Riverbank Court.

The girls' senior class of the Dorchester High school held a successful luncheon at Riverbank Court, Cambridge, yesterday afternoon, in commemoration of their coming graduation. MERCY! TWO-FACED GIRL IN WELLESLEY!

Janus In Petticoats Upsets the College and Causes a Weeping Editorial.

O-o-h-h!

Some Wellesley girl (or girls) is two-faced.

This female Janus of a college girl is held up to scorn and contumely in the current issue of the College News. Somebody saw her two faces right at the same time and wrote a piece about it, thus:

Here in college we hear justly a great deal about democracy—we laud exaltingly a fellowship of spirit, an equality of humanity, a true friendship with everyone, but I am sure that the most hearty advocator of democracy would never, if it came to a choice, prefer it to aristocracy. True natural democracy is a gift with which only a few are blessed, so that the rest of us, in going out of our way to know every one, must be more or less conscious of our attitude. This condition in itself is not one to be blamed, but it has such dangerous snares in it that many of the strivers for democracy fall carelessly into them. One very common result is two-facedness. This is a very trite fault to find with any one, but it does seem to me that when we have arrived at our age we should leave behind us such petty acts as that of smiling democratically on a girl one minute and insulting her misfortune the next. This is not only a two-sided failing of the theoretical democrat.

The above article, since read by the Wellesley maids, is causing much comment. Every girl is asking:

"Thank goodness, I'm not a two-faced thing myself. I wonder if she means that horrid ——?"

SHOE CLASS DIPLOMAS.

First Term at Continuation School Ends Thursday.

The first term of the shoe and leather class of the Lucy Boston Continuation school will close this week, and the forty young men who have been taking the course of twenty lessons will be given diplomas Thursday. On Tuesday afternoon Mayor Fitzgerald will address the class by invitation, and George Hitchinson of Clark-Hutchinson Company, will give a talk on "Merchandising." The graduation exercises will take place on Thursday afternoon, the principal address being by William L. Ratcliffe, treasurer of the Whitman & Plant Company, Roxbury.

After the exercises at the school room, No. 91 Bedford street, there will be a reception at the rooms of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, No. 166 Essex street. W. Stanwood Field, principal of the school, will yield charge this Summer, for further studies of the foreign continuation school system.

Ball Player Loses His Life to Save Game for Team

Hartford Youth Struck by Locomotive Just as High Fly Falls into His Mitt.

HARTFORD, June 4.—Fred Dubey, an outfielder in one of the factory league baseball teams of this city, to-day lost his life to save the game for his club. While trying to catch a fly ball he stumbled and fell under the wheels of a passenger train.

A long fly had been batted out in the lot adjoining the tracks of the New Haven Railroad. The game was close and approaching the end. The ball flew away off toward the railroad tracks. Dubey knew that if it fell scores enough to lose the game for his nine would race over the plate.

The boy, who was sixteen years old and a fine player, made a magnificent run. As the ball was coming down close to the track a passenger train approached. Either Dubey did not see it or if he did he believed he could reach it and escape the train at the same time. Just as the ball fell in his mitt he stumbled on a track and shot headlong in front of the locomotive. He was terribly mangled.

GRAND TRUNK HEARING.

Petition for Rights in State to Come up Tuesday.

The petition of the Grand Trunk Railroad for a right to fill the Massachusetts gap in its proposed line to the Providence waterfront will be given a hearing at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday before the Railroad Commission. The Grand Trunk now comes down from the north into Massachusetts as far as Palmer. The road proposes to traverse Massachusetts to a point on the Rhode Island line, from which an entry will be made to Providence. The construction of this missing link would provide real competition for the Morgan-owned railroads, which now enjoy practically a monopoly of the transportation to and from the New England waterfront.

FLOATING HOSPITAL GIFT.

Get a Puzzle Picture Free at Devonshire Street Office.

The Boston Floating Hospital, one of the most worthy charities in this city, has adopted a novel means of drawing the attention of young and old to the fact that its season of good work is about to begin. It is distributing a very interesting puzzle picture which can be obtained at the office of the hospital, No. 54 Devonshire street, by clubs, Sunday Schools, societies and other organizations. The picture shows a steamboat floating in blue water off a pleasant green shore and there are dotted lines to be cut. After that the puzzle is to put the picture together.

VETERAN MINSTREL DEAD.

Charles L. Church Was Also Oldest Union Cigarmaker.

Charles L. Church, an old-time minstrel and one of the thirteen charter members of the first cigar makers' union, died yesterday at the home of his son, George L. Church, No. 14 Summer street, Cambridge, after a long illness. Mr. Church has been an invalid for twelve years. He was seventy-six years old and a native of England, but came to this country and settled in Baltimore about sixty years ago. In his youth he joined a minstrel troupe and for fifteen years he was on the road with Christy's minstrels and Morris Brothers. He was the oldest member of the cigar maker's union in this country.

CAP'N PERKINS SAYS HE WON'T SHOOT NOW

As for Engineer Harriman, Why He Loves Him Like a Brother.

eral of the Philippines, owns the adjoining estate, and really does not want a school for girls as his next-door neighbor. O, really, no; not at all!

T. Nelson Perkins, who positively will not appear again at the Somerset Club until this thing has blown over, is a cousin of the Governor-General of the Philippines and, in the absence of his illustrious kinsman, has been aiming for buying the King Gay place at $40,000 and letting the girls' school go elsewhere.

Fenno wanted to buy. The five trustees, including James J. Storrow, want to sell. J. Emery Harriman, good friend of the testator, rides in with his horse all lather and says "Stop!"

Judge Grant, who hasn't written the Chippendales for some time now, reserves his decision.

Who's Who About Harriman.

Harriman three years ago sued Percival Lowell and others for $10,000 for assault and battery alleged to have taken place ten years before. The defendants were the executors of the estate of Augustus Lowell. Harriman had done some surveying for the Lowell estate and he allowed that Lowell, then seventy years old, assaulted him when he called at the Lowell offices in the Exchange Building to collect his bill of $1,000. In his suit against the Lowell executors Mr. Harriman was awarded a verdict of $175.

Mr. Harriman is a brother and partner of George W. E. Harriman, who had a run-in with President Roosevelt in 1907 on the question of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Two Tons of Furniture Ready for Gloucester

Our Store Is Open Saturday Evenings Until 9 O'Clock

Do You Know That our shipping department is one of the most important of the many departments in our big store? It is important because goods must be delivered without delay and in perfect condition. The delivery of furniture means much more than the mere piling of goods on a team or truck and driving away—It means the skilled handling of valuable merchandise. The above illustration is from a photograph of two tons of furniture, valued at $900, that we delivered last week in one of our new trucks to two customers living in Gloucester. We may add that, when this load arrived in Gloucester, not so much as a scratch was found on any article in the shipment.

Send Us Your Order By Mail Our mail order department is always at the service of our customers—we make buying by mail easy, prompt and satisfactory, as any one of our 7,000 mail order customers who have accounts with us will tell you. We have yet to find a dissatisfied customer among the hundreds who buy from us by mail every week, because we make it a special point to give prompt and efficient service. Our experts will make selections of goods and attend to all of the small details that make shopping tedious and tiresome. And remember, we pay the freight to any point in New England reached by rail or water.

Our Liberal Credit Plan We open accounts with everybody. By paying a little down and a little each month our patrons may furnish their homes attractively without the hardship of a large outlay of money. One year's credit if you want it.

THE ONLY furniture house in the world that gives a receipt in full on balances due on credit accounts up to $500 in case of a customer's death.

GIRLS SAVE CHILDREN IN MOVING PICTURE FIRE STAMPEDE

Rosa Magulis, Entertainer, and Minnie Nadian, Cashier, West End Heroines.

MISS Rosa Magulis, entertainer at the Grand Theatre, a moving picture house at No. 125 Cambridge street, West End, showed herself to be a very coolheaded, brave young woman late yesterday afternoon by helping between forty and fifty children out of the place when the picture machine exploded in a great burst of flame.

Mark Shain, who manipulated the machine, was enveloped in flames. His coat was burned off and his back was singed. Miss Magulis had her hand cut by breaking the glass in a window, through which he passed the children to safety.

Miss Minie Nadian, the cashier and ticket seller, darting toward the stage and dashing under the wave of flame that fell from above, was also of great assistance in helping the little folks out of the building.

Mothers in a Fenzy.

Several hundred people, among whom were frantic mothers of children at the theatre, gathered in the street and vocal pandemonium reigned until al of the children were restored to their mothers' arms.

When the performance began at 6:30 there were nearly half a hundred children in the seats, ranging in ages from seven to fifteen years. Some of them were attended by women. The picture machine was located on a platform over the entrance to the theatre room, which is about 65 by 25 feet in size.

Shain, who handled the machine, lives at No. 5 Holborn street. He was running a film on the screen when there was an explosion. Red and blue fire shot forward into the audience. Smoke curled through the room until it was suffocating. Shain was wrapped in the films and was compelled to give all of his attention to his own safety.

Tears Off His Coat.

Grabbing at his coat, he tore it from him in bits. Then he made heroic efforts to smother the fire that was burning and sputtering in the frame of the machine.

The children and those who accompanied them emitted shriek after shriek of terror So frightened were they that instead of running from their seats in a panic they shrank into their seats, trembling and pale faced.

It was at this time that Miss Magulis ran from her dressing room upon the stage. She saw that the machine was afire and that the little patrons of the place were in great danger.

"Come forward," cried the actress, "and climb up on the stage. I will help you all out. There is no danger. Come quickly and don't be frightened."

Girl Cut in Rescue Work.

Miss Nadian had run forward and was trying to assure the children that they would be helped to safety. They climbed forward then in a hurry. Miss Magulis lifted them to the stage. After she had helped some of them up she ran to her dressing room. She had noticed that there was a window there that opened into an alley. From the window sill to the ground was only three or four feet.

The young woman run against the window, using her hands and arms as a battering ram. She smashed the window out, frame and all. But when she returned to help other little girls and boys to the stage it was noticed that her garments were stained crimson.

"Hurry up," she cried gaily to the children. "We'll have you all out now in a jiffy."

She headed the cavalcade of little folk to the window and most of them were able to help out. Others were lifted out and dropped gently to the street.

In the meantime the fire company had reached the scene. Just how the firemen got the alarm no one can tell, as several hours after the fire had been put out.

Panic on Street.

The flames, it was known, after falling down from the machine platform, shot out of the ticket window and were plainly visible in the street. Some one saw them and took up the cry of "Fire!" In a congested neighborhood and soon the people, old and young, swarmed about the theatre. The alarm had rolled out the firemen and their engines rattled up to the place.

Entering the building, the flames did not find a great deal of fire. There was a sputter of flame from the machine from which various colored sparks flashed. The firemen took the hand extinguishers and played water on the smoking machine until every vestige of the fire was gone.

Then they looked through the place to see if any of the little ones had been left behind or had been overcome by smoke. Mothers were crying in front of the place for children who had not even been at the theatre. The police had difficulty in quieting the mothers. Finally every child was found to be safe.

Shain said that the fire had been caused by improper insulation. The building is owned by W. K. Porter and leased to J. C. Clark. Samuel Pearlstein is the manager of the place. He was absent at the time of the fire. The picture machine was wrecked.

COPLEY SQUARE PLAN FOR HOTEL STARTS A REALTY WAR

Park Square Trust Opposes Improvement and Each Side Will Fight to Finish.

THE Copley Square Trust, a syndicate of Boston men, and the Park Square Trust, ostensibly controlled by Boston men but the stock really held by the New French Railroad, have come into fierce conflict. Each has prepared a scheme of developing its property which the scheme of the other completely blocks.

Moses Williams was one of the trustees of the Park Square Trust and is heavily interested financially in the Copley Square Trust. He has quit his lot with the Copley Square Trust and withdrawn from the Park Square. As the representative of the Copley Square he is at loggerheads with his old friend Lawrence Minot who is advocating the Park Square proposition.

After a stormy session at the City Council hearing Friday, Williams and Minot met in Minot's office yesterday and another meeting was arranged for next week in the hopes of effecting some kind of compromise to set before the City Council.

Some Property Restrictions.

The Copley Square Trust Company owns the old Old Museum property. All property on Copley Square is subject to Copley Square restrictions which provide that buildings shall have a twenty-five foot setback from the sidewalk and shall not exceed ninety feet in height.

The Park Square Trust proposes to build a 320-foot tower, 200 feet in excess of the height of ninety feet, but it says it has other valuable rights to be removed. In return the trust offers to the city free the acreage a strip of land fifty feet deep in front of the property and other land on either side, but asks to be allowed to build fifteen feet in front of the present wall of the Art Museum. By this deal the city gets free 15,000 feet of land, while the trust gets as much land which is now tied up by the setback restriction.

New comes the Park Square Trust, represented by Lawrence Minot, and opposes the removal of the restriction, thus limiting the scope, proportion and the development of the Museum property. The reasons for this action are that the Park Square development plan dumps an against the possibility.

Plan to Widen Street.

Engineers employed by the trustees of the Park Square Trust have prepared a plan that widens Exeter street, the street starts from the property of the Park Square Trust, running and runs into Copley square between the Hotel Westminster and Trinity church.

The Park Square Company has purchased property on either side of this street, including the Dodge residence, with a view to widening the avenue to one hundred and twenty feet, from eighty feet wide. To accomplish the proposition it is necessary to acquire a strip of land fifty feet of setback in front of the old Art Museum, and if the restrictions should be removed and a hotel erected it would run into the setback St. James avenue would be affected.

Those if the Copley Square plan when St. James avenue was widened to 100 feet, although most of the property along that street is owned by the Park Square Trust.

On the hand, if the Park Square plan succeeds the hotel project is defeated.

Why Williams Resigned.

Moses Williams opposed the St. James avenue extension plan, but the controlling interest of the Park Square Trust company did not for the sake of his interests were bound up with the Copley Square Company, he resigned.

The Park Square Trust company proposes that St. James avenue be widened to 120 feet, and that Exeter street be widened to 100, and there they stick.

Both sides admit that the necessities of widening the street on condition that they will not be carried through for years.

In addition to the right over the front of the property of the Trust property, there is the question of the right over the land which runs into Dartmouth at the rear of the Art Museum. The Copley Square Trust contemplates taking away the Art Museum's rear entrance. The Park Square Trust is strongly for the Copley Square plan and will build upon it.

FORECLOSES ON MARIPOAG.

Old Colony Trust Has Mortgage on Fort Dodge Line.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 4.—The Old Colony Trust Company of Boston has foreclosed a mortgage of three and one-half million dollars on the Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern Railroad in the United States court here.

Mamie Hightower Tells Story of Her Life for First Time

Fiancee Says She Will Wait for Coleman's Release

"I Still Love George," Declares Girl in Pathetic Recital, in Which She Tells of Meeting with Her Rival

because she was my constant companion. I never kept anything from her, and she confided all of her secrets to me.

When I was between fourteen and fifteen years old it was decided that I should go to St. Mary's convent at Perryville, Mo., and my father and mother thought that it would be a good thing for me to go with her. I remember the day that I made the journey. I was very anxious to go because I was ambitious to learn.

Played for Entertainments.

My chief study during the four years that I was in the school was the piano. I was taught many useful things, and I am considered a very good cook and housekeeper. But if I have any real talent it is in a musical way. I played for some of the entertainments that we had at the school. When I came away I brought with me as gifts a large number of books and a number of pieces of china that had been given to me by friends. Nearly all of them I have had published.

Meeting with Banker Holmes.

It was in the fall of 1907 that I left the school. My father and mother and, in fact, pretty all the members of my family were there. The school let me go and I accompanied them home. During the time that I had been away some changes had occurred in the family and I found that my father had moved to Kansas City, where he was engaged in the banking business. I was not long in making the acquaintance of Mr. Holmes. I met him at a dance given by one of the young people of Kansas City. I remember the night very well. I was introduced to him by Walter Holmes, a son of Mr. Holmes, who was a student at the University of Missouri. I danced with him several times during the evening, and he asked me if he might call upon me. I told him that I would be pleased to have him do so. He called the next day and I received him in the parlor. He was very pleasant and entertaining, and I enjoyed his visit very much. He asked me if he might call again, and I told him that I would be pleased to have him do so. He called frequently after that, and I soon found myself very much interested in him. He was a man of the world, and I was only a girl who had been brought up in a convent. He was very much older than I was. But he was a man of good standing, and I thought that he was the most handsome man I had ever met. He was very attentive to me, and I became very much interested in him. He was a widower, and I knew that he had been married before. I knew that he had a son, Walter, who was a student at the University of Missouri. I had met Walter at the dance at which I had met his father, and I had also met Walter's sister, Miss Holmes, who was a student at the University of Missouri. I had met Walter at the dance at which I had met his father, and I had also met Walter's sister, Miss Holmes, who was a student at the University of Missouri.

Liked Coleman From the First.

I met George on a Sunday when I went to church. We had a good talk together. I liked him from the start. He escorted me home and asked me if he might call upon me. He was a young man of good breeding and there was nothing of the coarseness about him that I noticed in many others whom I had met. I told him that I was dissatisfied with my life in New York and wanted to get away from it. He seemed to like me, and told me that he was dissatisfied with me and that he would help me to break away. He asked me if I would come over to Boston with him and I told him that I would. We came to Boston together sometime between the tenth and fifteenth of last January, and went to the Hotel Lenox to live.

I remained at the Lenox for about three weeks. I saw George every day while I was there. He would always come over to the hotel and take luncheon with me and always he was with me in the evening. I had promised to marry him, and so we finally agreed that we would be married. He gave me the ring as an engagement ring, but I told him that I would not wear it openly. I told him that it would be necessary for George wanted to take me over to his home in Kansas City, but I told him that I did not care to go there under the circumstances.

While I was in Boston I remained at the Hotel Lenox. I want to make it understood that I never paid my own bills while I was in Boston. I did not spend my money, but I had plenty of money. As a matter of fact, he did not spend any more money on me than he would have done had I been at home. I dined in Kansas City, nor did my father when he took me out. Other members of my family out. The most we ever had to drink, as I recall the box, at any of our dinners was a claret cup.

Doesn't Like Champagne.

I never drank a cocktail nor a highball in my life. I don't care for such things. I have tasted a cocktail and I don't like it. I have tasted champagne and I don't like it. I will say that I drank champagne in Boston. We went to see the "Man from Home" and we had a box. It was a box party. We went also once to Bass Point and had dinner in the box.

I met a number of George's friends when he would bring them to the hotel to dine with me. Some of those whom I met was Mr. Lockhart.

At this time, you remember—and I want to make this emphatic, too—never during this time was George was in any trouble at the bank. I knew he worked at the bank and had called him up there on the telephone a number of times. I noticed, however, that he was worrying about something. I said to him on more than one occasion:

"George, what are you worrying about?"

"Little girl," he would reply, almost invariably. "You could not help me in this matter."

But there was no doubt that something was on his mind and on several occasions I found him with tears in his eyes. I would put my arms around him and ask him to tell me what the trouble was, but about all I could get out of him was that he was thinking of something.

Found Coleman in Tears.

We left the hotel together on February 18 last. Shortly before that—I do not remember just how many days—I found George crying, and I asked him what the trouble was. He said that he had to raise $10,000. I did not know and he did not tell me why he wanted the money, but I said to him:

"George, I could let you have $2,000. I have that much money of my own. I can get it out of the bank and will let you take it."

"No, that will not be necessary, Jack," he told me.

I should explain at this point that as a little girl I was called by the pet name of Jack. George knew this, and he adopted it also as my pet name. He wouldn't take the money that I had saved, and talked of pawning his jewelry to raise some money. He was then when he talked of that, as a matter of fact, that it first struck me that he was really in need of money and caused me to lend him the money that I had saved.

I want to say right here, also, that George did not give me the $2,000 which I have in a New York bank. That is my own money and the Seaboard City Bank of Cambridge never handled a penny of it.

Didn't Know His Trouble.

Even when George cried about needing money that February, I never thought for the matter very serious thought—certainly never did I imagine that George was in any grave difficulty because of himself.

"Well, you never killed anyone or robbed a bank?" I used to say to him when he was in trouble. It was an old saying and I certainly would not have used it if I had thought for a moment he was in any trouble with the bank. Some times he would answer and sometimes he wouldn't. His usual response was a laugh which ended with a kiss from me.

This brings me down to the day that we went away, February 18. On that day George had luncheon with me, but he didn't say a word about his affairs having reached a climax. He came over in the evening and we dined. I remember he said to me:

"How soon can you get your trunks strapped, Jack?"

"Why, what for, George?" I replied.

"I'm going to take you home to Kansas City," he answered. "You have always wanted me to go, you know."

"Yes, it won't take me long. I'll hurry," I said.

Saw Lockhart That Evening.

I had two large trunks, a dresser trunk and a steamer trunk. Many of my things had been taken out of the trunks and so I went to work on them at once. There were a good many people in and out the room that evening, and I recall that one time Walter Holmes came in. I knew something was worrying George, so I asked Lockhart about it.

"What's George up to?" I said to Lockhart. "He told me this evening that he was going to take me home."

"I don't know," said Lockhart and he sat down by the room and began to read a newspaper.

I recall now that George was unusually tender with me that evening, and that he kissed me a number of times. I knew that something of an unusual nature was happening and that he was very much worried, and I kept at him to tell me what the real cause of the trouble was. He said that I had better get my things together, and that after that he would tell me all about it.

I had been staying at the Lenox and I had kept in communication with Mrs. Arnold in New York. We had talked several times over the telephone. I had written her that evening from the Hotel Lenox, just before we started away. I told her that George was going to take me home to Kansas City. I told her that we were going on the 11 o'clock train.

Disclosure on the Train.

We took the train and just as soon as we had quieted down after leaving the train George told George that I wanted him to tell me the cause of his trouble. And before he had got many miles out of Boston he began to do so. I think the first thing he said to me was:

"Jack, I have lost all the money that I had and then after I lost that I took money from the bank."

"What in the world did you do it, George?" I asked.

George explained to me on the train that his first thought was to take care of me. He said that he was going to take me home and then he was going back to Boston and get employment of some kind and put it in his mind to run away. He never hinted at the possibility of taking his own life. His intention was to return and try to restore the money that he had taken from the bank.

When we reached Kansas City we went to my father under the circumstances that I wouldn't go to my home and take George there, and as a matter of fact, he didn't want me to go to my home. I had too much respect for my people to go there with George under the conditions that existed at that time.

Were to Marry in West.

We reached Kansas City on a Sunday and remained there at the hotel until the following Tuesday. We agreed to get married in Kansas City. We came to that conclusion on February 22, Washington's birthday. George went out and tried to procure a marriage license, but we found that on account of it being a holiday he was unable to secure them. So he returned East and I remained at the hotel.

While I was there I read the papers and I also wrote a number of letters to George and the bank. The dispatch told about the bank being robbed and about George being missing. Nothing was said in the letters to George about me. I didn't communicate with any of my people or any of my Kansas City friends while I was there. I was anxious that no one should know that I was in Kansas City and kept secreted most of the time in the hotel. I remained there until Sunday and then went to New York. George called me up from Boston and we arranged that I should come to Boston. When I reached Boston George's brother met me at the Lenox and took me at once to the home of his parents in Cambridge. It was arranged that I should remain at Mrs. Arnold's for a short time and then return to the home of George's parents. I have been with the Coleman family all the time, practically, since George was released following his arrest, when he returned to Boston.

Father Opposed Marriage.

Since that time George has spent very little money that he has not had it to spend. He and I have been out together a few times and we took dinner on a number of occasions at the guests of Mrs. Arnold, when she was in Boston, but for the most part we have both remained in home at Cambridge.

George and I have not been married, simply because I was advised us to postpone the ceremony. We asked him to marry us and he said it would be better for us to wait until George's term of imprisonment was over.

I became acquainted since I last came to Boston with Mrs. Marguerite L. Taylor, to whom George had been paying attention, and I met Mr. Taylor over the telephone and she told me that George had been with her a long time before I came to Boston. I asked her to come over and she came over to the Coleman home and see me. She came that day and she said to me that she believed that she had a better right to George than I had, because he had been paying her some attention before he met me.

"I think," she said to me while tears streamed down her face, "that George should marry me. He owes me that much."

I told her that that was a matter for George to settle. I called George in the room. I explained the situation. Mrs. Taylor sat there with her eyes filled with tears. I was crying also. It was a trying situation for all of us.

"Now, George," I said, "this is up to you. You have got to choose between us here and now. If you want Mrs. Taylor, you are at liberty to take her. If you want me, say so."

George said that he did not want to marry Mrs. Taylor and that he wanted me. That settled the matter in the most definite way. I think, that it could be settled in justice to all parties. After that I remained at the Lenox. It was "very much of a Boston fear-party" that we had held, which George didn't think was very much of a joke.

I will tell about all of my story up to the present time. I shall remain until I am at liberty to go West which will be within a few days. My father and mother have both assured me that they are anxious for me to come home. They know all the circumstances about me and George. I had a letter from mother last Thursday. They are anxious to see me and I shall be anxious to go. But I intend to come back to Boston to see George, because I don't think that he is at heart a good boy and that he will be released. He is freed to make another start in life which will redeem his past.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS MARTIN WALSH ON TWO CONTINENTS

Martin J. Walsh, the king of the faro gang that fleeced George W. Coleman, is being hunted by the police, he is also sought by the Government on two continents. A warrant for his arrest was sworn out some time ago.

He has been traced since he left Boston. Then he went to Queenstown, Liverpool, London, Havre and Paris. While in Paris he is believed to have been in Morocco or headed for there.

Walsh, who had been operating in the wake of the fake faro game have been in attendance at the "Big Bill" Edwards' trial, charged with aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in the wrecking of the bank. To see if they could pick out the man who would help them to bring civil suits to get their money back.

Strausneider Case June 25.

John Strausneider, arrested in New York on the same charge as that which Hosea Winslow Le began the arrest of $10,000 bail, will be arraigned in New York today. It is expected that Coleman, Wilson W. Lockhart and possibly Mrs. Marguerite L. Taylor will go to New York to testify in the case before the United States Commissioner. If Strausneider is held he will then be taken to Boston for trial.

When the Keliher trial is resumed at 9:30 o'clock before Judge Hale and a jury on Tuesday Harvey H. Frail will finish his outline of the case of the government. Then Mr. Coleman will be called to the stand as the first witness. If not the first witness, he will be called later in the day. He will tell his feeling and fare playing story.

Mr. Coleman's part in the case that remain to be explained are these:

The $10,000 check found, and will be take the stand

Where is Lavin, dead, and will she appear as a witness for the defense?

Will Mrs. Mamie Hightower Taylor who cashed the Western Union-John Marshall-Big Bill Keliher check for $2000?

The trial will be resumed at 9:30 Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, so that the case is ready by will then go to the jury.

TAFT PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF CUSTER

President at Monroe, Mich., Calls General One of History's Greatest Soldiers.

MONROE, Mich., June 4.—President Taft as representative of the American people, paid tribute to the memory of General George A. Custer to-day when the equestrian statue of that warrior was unveiled here. Mrs. Custer was among the guests. The Custer veterans formed the escort of honor for the President. He arrived for a stay of four hours before his departure for Jackson to attend the unveiling of a tablet on the site where the Republican party was organized under the oaks in 1854. Nevin R. Custer, the only surviving brother of the man who fell on June 25, 1876, was in Monroe to-day.

A street parade preceded the unveiling ceremonies in the noble square where the statue stands facing the South. Previous to the parade President Taft paid a visit to St. Mary's Academy, where he was tendered a reception and at which he spoke briefly to the pretty girls in white who greeted him.

Uncovered by Widow.

The statue was unveiled by Mrs. Custer at 10:30 a. m. assisted by President Taft. As the handsome widow, her shoulders thrown back and her head held proudly high, pulled the ribbon that disclosed to view the bronze equestrian figure of Custer, the cannon boomed the first gun of a salute.

The President said:

"Mr. Chairman, Mrs. Custer, fellow citizens of Michigan and the United States, ladies and gentlemen: The State of Michigan looks back to the memory of Custer with special gratitude. A typical soldier, a great cavalry commander, he was a man whose memory brings out of the past the best cavalry commanders of the world—Prince Rupert, Murat and others. He stands equal with all of them.

"But I came here, my friends, to speak to-day of a phase of General Custer's career that is not dwelt upon with as much emphasis and gratitude as I think it deserves. He stood among the heroes of the Civil War, and for four years he led his cavalry in defence of the flag to unite the Union. But after the war, for ten years he rendered a service to this country that we do not as fully appreciate as I wish we did. He was one of that small band of 25,000 men, constituting the regular army of the United States, without whose services, whose exposure to danger, whose loss of life, whose hardships and trials, it would not have been possible for us to have settled the great West.

Indebtedness to the Army.

"The regular army is an army of which the United States may well be proud, and the officers' wives, of which Mrs. Custer is so conspicuous and charming an example, contributed their full share to the efficiency, to the bravery and the courage of that small body of heroes. I am here not to dwell upon it, but only to note as the President of the United States the indebtedness of the country to the regular army during those ten or fifteen years opening the West, and to testify to the effectiveness, the heroism of General George Armstrong Custer in that period—that we continued for a decade the most bloody struggle for civilization, of which he was the most conspicuous and shining sacrifice.

"As the band of the Twenty-sixth Infantry burst into the strains of 'Reddy's Day in the Morning' smiles broke through the widow's tears, cheers rent the air and the cannon boomed the salute. The band on Check to the 'Star Spangled Banner' was with a perfect aim tempering the crisp lake breeze, the scene was complete. United States Senator W. A. Smith of Michigan delivered the unveiling oration.

Prizes Custer's Heroism.

The President followed Senator Smith, and was accorded a flattering reception. He said that Michigan was properly proud of Custer.

"His name," said the President, "calls before the memory all the heroic cavalry figures of history, of the type of Prince Rupert and Murat. A brigadier general at 24 and major general at 25. He showed all his life that same truth and force we have in some of the great military commanders of the world. He was one of the heroes of the Civil War."

The President, while paying tribute to Custer's Civil War service, put stress upon his service on the plains following the days of the Civil War, and in this connection again paid his respects to the regular army. "Custer," said the President, was one of the van of civilization in the Western country, his efforts having contributed to stamp out that savagery upon the way to the progress that since has followed."

Immediately on finishing his address the President left for Jackson. The President left Jackson this evening for Washington, arriving there to-morrow night.

CHAMP CLARK TO QUIT AT 75.

But Admits That People May Set an Earlier Date.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, minority leader of the House, has set for himself an approximate age limit on public life of about seventy-five years.

"The people may set my time of retirement a little earlier than that," he admitted. "So far as I know the only public man who set an age limit on his service and lived up to it was Nathaniel Macon of North Carolina, Speaker and Senator. When in his prime he set the exact age at which he would retire. When that day arrived he was in the middle of a Senatorial term, but kept his word and resigned.

"He was one of the greatest men of that era."

FLIES OVER LONDON.

LONDON, June 4.—A war airship early to-day flew over the heart of London and circled the dome of St. Paul's. It was the British army dirigible Beta, which left Farnborough at 11:30 p. m. and, reaching there at 3:30 a. m., having covered 110 miles in four hours, an average of 27½ miles an hour.

The army aviators to-day declared that the dirigible was under control at every moment of the trip and swept past the cathedral gracefully in precisely the manner planned. The trip is hailed as the best flight ever made by a British dirigible.

TAFT TO REVIEW 4,000 BOSTON PUPILS ON JULY 4

President's Visit and Parade the Leading Features of 'Safe and Sane' Day.

A PARADE watched by President Taft and in which 4,000 school children will take part, in addition to bands, military companies, boys' brigades, cadet corps and numerous floats, will be the big feature if Boston's first "safe and sane" celebration of the Fourth of July, officials announced yesterday. President Taft is a feature in itself. But the promise is for a parade that will equal anything Boston ever had in the newest vein.

Mayor Fitzgerald arranged with President Taft yesterday for the Boston trip. Mayor Woods of Somerville goes to see the President to-morrow or Tuesday, and after his visit the President will announce the time he expects to reach Boston after his reception in Somerville.

John W. DeBrayn, of "Boston 1915," has been chosen secretary of the celebration committee. The review of the parade by the President will most likely take place in the forenoon. The parade will form on streets in the Back Bay section, and will pass the State House, where will be the President.

Represent Historic Scenes.

Some of the floats will be the Mayflower, War ship with the French, Boston Tea Party, Lexington Belfry, Concord Minute Men, Bunker Hill, Washington at Cambridge, Reading the Declaration of Independence, Reading the Declaration of 1812, Frigate Constitution, Detachments of Red Coats of 1812, War of 1847, Marching Mexicans and Americans, War of 1861, showing the New England Governors and Confederates; Wars With the Indians, War of 1898, showing Rough Riders and Spanish troops; floats of America, Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, Spain, Japan, China.

Children in fine will come from the North, South and West End schools. The United Boys' brigades and the Cadet corps of the High Schools have been invited to participate. The route is now being mapped out.

Chief Marshal Colonel William H. Oakes of Charlestown, said yesterday he is forming his staff.

It has been arranged that the parade will stop at the old State House, where a lad from one of the public schools will step forward to read the Declaration of Independence.

Forest Hills Celebration.

The Francis Parkman Parents' Association intends to have a celebration at Forest Hills, including fireworks, antiques and horrible, and athletic sports. Booths will be erected and refreshments sold. The Francis Parkman Association is also said to have charge of the appropriation of $5,000 allotted to Ward 23, and will use it in entertainments for the children.

In East Boston the East Boston Improvement Association and the Chapman Parents' Association are considering the matter of contributing a float to represent the Father of Great Britain. In the morning parade in the morning. As Wards 1 and 2 are in East Boston, the associations have to take charge of the expending of the sum which the Mayor has appropriated for each one of these wards. They may also take charge of the fireworks exhibition at Wood Island Park.

The masters of the Wendell, Phillips, Wells, Hancock, Washington, Quincy, Winthrop, Franklin, Rice, Brimmer, Howland and the parochial schools have been invited to see that some of their children are ready for the parade. Captain Daniel F. Eliot school will meet Monday at the North End Playground at 12:45 to drill for the parade.

PRESERVE RECORDS.

United States Congress to Seek History in New England.

Members of various Boston patriotic societies are greatly interested in the bill reported to the National Senate, which, if passed, will result in the compilation of the military and naval records of the Revolutionary War. It is proposed that these scattered records be gathered and published.

The measure carries with it an appropriation of $50,000 for the purpose.

PRESIDENT TO SPEAK.

Will Aid in Dedication of Pilgrims' Monument.

PROVINCETOWN, June 4.—President Taft is to take part in the dedicatory exercises of the Pilgrims' Monument here, August 5.

The President will cross Massachusetts bay from Beverly to be present.

Theodore Roosevelt, then President, made an address when the cornerstone was laid.

Rev. Mr. Chapman to Preach.

Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, will preach this morning in the Central Congregational church, corner of Newbury and Berkeley streets. The pastor of this church, Rev. Dr. John H. Denison, has been ill for four months, but is slowly recovering.

Boston Aids War to Check High Rates

D. O. Ives Speaks for Chamber of Commerce at New York Conference.

D. O. Ives, manager of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce was in New York yesterday, representing the Boston Chamber in a movement by the chambers of commerce and business organizations all over the East to raise a fund of $30,000 with which to fight the express companies because of alleged exhorbitant rates.

Mr. Ives took part in a conference of representative business men in the rooms of the New York Chamber of Commerce. Plans for raising the money were discussed. A campaign to cover the entire country was outlined.

The companies were denounced for reaping huge profits on rates that are on average high. The $30,000 which the fund with which Boston is asked to contribute $2,000, to collect and present the demand before the proper tribunal in Congress, was raised in short order.

The activity in Boston in the movement following the reading of a circular to the Boston Chamber of Commerce from New York asking for co-operation. When Ives reports of the results of yesterday's conference, the chamber will send out circulars to business houses asking for prospective contributions and moral support. Letters sent from New York are said to have reached every big city in the East.

The position taken by express organizations, following the initiative of the New York Chamber, is that the rates in effect with the through express companies are entirely too high," said Secretary James A. McKibben last night. "The present rates are not fair. Lower rates would give the companies a fair income. The fund will be gotten together for the purpose of presenting evidence and pushing it before the proper authorities, to get a remedy for the present condition."

LOST BOY PICKED UP PRAYING IN STREET

Clinton Bowler, the lieutenant on the job in the East Dedham street station, says the young man is four years old. The matron in charge of the Chardon-street home was sure the little stranger isn't a day over three-and-a-half.

Anyhow, he was on his knees in Washington street, at the corner of Conery street, at 9:30 o'clock last night when a woman picked him up. When she asked his name all that was all he said, with a sob in his voice:

"Please praying."

The woman took him around to the station house in Dedham street. There Bowler entertained him there for a while and then turned him over to Sullivan. They had him pretty much made up to be put to bed a settee. He didn't know hisname, he said.

The boy was still asleep when, just before 8 o'clock, a lady, attracted by the crowd up and carried him on a trolley car all the way to Chardon street. When he left he had a skull cap, a red coat, blue pants, lace shoes and stockings. There was a bruise and great big patches under his eyes, where the tears had rolled down and had made streaks on his face with the coat sleeves as becomes one of the sterner sex.

GIBBY FORSAKES LOBBY.

"Devoted to Life Savers," Says Along the Coast Editor.

H. Fredd Gibby, editor of "Along the Coast," has given up being a State House lobbyist and the manager of ambitious office seekers and is a real honest-to-goodness publisher, Mr. Gibby was at the Bellevue yesterday showing folks the June number of "Along the Coast" and telling all about it.

The number contains some beautiful storm and coast pictures, together with likenesses of Franklin MacVeagh, Winfield Murray Crane and other life savers.

"Henceforth," Publisher Gibby said, "I am devoted to it he life savers. No more lobbying."

92 CENTS ON DOLLAR.

Southbridge Bank Depositors Will Not Lose So Much as Feared.

Depositors in the Southbridge Savings bank, sold after the discovery of John A. Hall's $500,000 defalcation that they would have to take eight-five cents on the dollar, will be glad to learn that there is now at least ninety-two cents waiting for them for every dollar they had deposited. The ninety-two-cent report was brought to the State House during the week by President Alvin S. Paige of the wrecked bank.

Representative James F. Cavanaugh of Everett, whose introduction of an "order" at the State House led to the appointment of the Southbridge Saving Bank investigating committee, expressed to the American last night his amusement that Southbridge depositors have apparently taken steps to profit by the committee's revelations in the courts. He said the inquiry had established neglect enough on the part of the trustees to enable the depositors to maintain an action.

ACH, GRETCHEN, WO WOHNST DU, HUND?

Arthur Dehon Hill's German Dog With French Training Has Eloped.

If there happens to be, in the garden, as you glance out from the breakfast table this morning, what looks like a hound dog that has been run through a wringer and had subsequently had its legs cut off at the knees, leave the beans and brown bread for a moment and go out to the front door to call:

"Gretchen! du verloren! Hebbing, komm' her!"

And if it's the lost dachshund of the Arthur Dehon Hill of No. 81 Mount Vernon street, she'll be at your feet instantly. Treat her kindly, please, and call Haymarket 41012.

The mystery of the missing dachshund was revealed last night when a little advertisement found its way to the counting rooms of the newspapers.

LOST—On suburban afternoon, a brown female dachshund; collar marked A. F. Hill, 81 Mt. Vernon st. Kindly; suitable reward will be paid for her return.

Gretchen has been missing since 5 o'clock yesterday. The Hills had been to the Barnum show with a number of their children—and after the show Mr. Hill had left for Portsmouth, N. H., to spend Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Adams Sherman Hill of Belmont street.

Mrs. Hill, the younger, knew that something was wrong when Gretchen failed to meet her. Gretchen has been meeting Mrs. Hill upon Mrs. Hill's return from an outing ever since the Hills brought Gretchen over from Paris, seven or eight years ago. Gretchen is of German birth and Parisian education.

The maid was quite sure that Gretchen had returned to the house after a little outing, but Mrs. Hill knew differently. A search of the house, under the bureau and the piano, revealed the three other dachshunds, all younger than the fugitive, but no Gretchen. Then, hastily, Mrs. Hill sent out the advertisement. The children, Arthur Sherman Hill, 2d, and his sister, cried all the evening for the missing dog. They will probably wake up crying this morning.

Neighbors and family speak in the highest terms of the missing Gretchen. She was, according to all accounts in Mount Vernon street, a creature proud of her birth and breeding and not likely to lend painfully to offers from the West End by low companions. Still, one never can tell. There is, remember, that French education, Oo, la! la!

SMOOT DEFENDS MORMONS.

Says They Ought to Take Hold of Social Conditions in Boston.

United States Senator Reed Smoot of Utah spent all day yesterday in this city. He was a guest at the home of Henry Howard, No. 20 Amory street, Brookline. There last night, before the Thursday Evening Club, he spoke on "Mormonism."

Senator Smoot said the Mormon people has been misrepresented and its adherents vilified. He said:

"Mormonism holds that the race is to be saved. No one is to be damned. The Mormon people are living with the highest ideals and are both divine and in time will be purified by intelligence.

"Were Mormons to take hold of the social conditions in Boston, New York, Liverpool, Berlin or Paris it would not need ministers of the gospel among the people merely to preach, but it would also teach them in the material affairs."

Senator Smoot in an interview said that Massachusetts should return Governor Draper to the State, he said that President Taft has accomplished more good things in his administration than Roosevelt did in both of his terms. Governor Draper gave an informal luncheon at the Union Club in honor of Senator Smoot at noon.

FROM CAR UNDER AUTO.

Randolph Football Player's Skull Broken in Accident.

BROCKTON, June 4.—William Courtney, a well known semi-professional baseball player of Randolph, was terribly injured to-day when, as he alighted from a car, he ran in front of an automobile. Randolph, he was run down by an automobile. His skull was fractured, his arm broken and a great gash cut in his head. At the Brockton hospital to-night it was said that he had a fighting chance to live. The auto was driven by A. W. Curtis, chauffeur for Herbert Davis. Mr. Davis was in the car and brought Courtney here.

ADD $17,687 TO B. U. FUND.

Confident Goal of $400,000 Will Be Reached in Seven Days.

With $148,335 yet to be raised within the next seven days, the captains of the teams of workers in the Boston University campaign fund are confident that when the last meeting is held on next Saturday night the full amount of $400,000 will have been pledged. At yesterday's noon meeting of the teams in Lorimer Hall, Tremont temple, the captains reported that $17,687 had been pledged since Friday night. With the pledge of $2,350 announced previously, the total amount raised is $251,665.

WANTED: BOSSY COW. BY CHARLES W. ELIOT

President Emeritus Proposes to Do His Own Milking From Five-Foot Shelf.

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, who proposes to sit on a "five-foot shelf" this summer and do his own milking, wants to buy a cow.

At seventy-six the distinguished author of the "Manual of Qualitative Chemical Analysis" has reversed himself. He prepared to admit that Roosevelt of '80 may have learned a thing or two at college, after all, and is going in for a strenuous life.

And the folks up at Northeast Harbor, Mount Desert, Hancock county, Maine, where Dr. Eliot spends the best part of his life, the good old Summer time, are determined that their distinguished townsman shall not cross this ewe lamb's path blindfolded, even if he is "Summer people."

They have already begun writing the doctor in such volume that one would suppose that all the staunch Everett Oser is selling these days in the post office at Northeast Harbor, land sooner or later at No. 12 Quincy street, Cambridge, Mass.

The boys are talking it over every night in Lane Hardware shop, in Bill Dorle's billiard parlor and at Ed Atwood's livery. President Eliot hears from these conferences on the following morning.

Up to a late hour last night Dr. Eliot had been reminded of several facts, viz:

That the Milky Way isn't anything like the text book stuff.

That a cow, being a lady, is apt to be contrary.

That it is no business for an absent-minded man.

That he mustn't think "gee! gah! rah!" can be successfully substituted for "woobuss."

That thirty-six strokes a minute may be all right in a boat, but is less majestic in a barn.

That the best looker may not be the best milker.

That Otis Ober sells milk, anyhow.

Dr. Eliot is still open to suggestions. One point he insists upon. He will not have a purple cow, nor will he stand for one of those black and white Holstein things. The Elliot cow must be red, red, red.

POLAIRE'S GEMS HELD UP.

Ugliest Woman on Earth Keeps Customs Officials Waiting.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Gems worth $80,000 were seized by customs officers to-day when Miss Polaire, "the ugliest woman on earth," arrived from Paris on the French liner La Savoie. Then the appraiser's public stores were kept open for three hours beyond the regular time to enable the made hall star to recover her jewels after making the proper declaration at the custom house.

Meantime, while the officials at the stores were fuming about and wondering what was delaying her, Miss Polaire had sped a small park and stopped her automobile to give little dog a walk on the grass, because she thought he needed exercise after being cooped up on the ship. It was nearly 2 o'clock when she arrived at the stores, where her diamonds were returned to her.

Baby Killed in Fall From Window

Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan of No. 38 Cresceant avenue, Dorchester, fell from a third story window yesterday. The child died at City Hospital.

BOYS SEE BROTHER DROWN IN CHARLES

Eleven - Year - Old Johnnie Campbell Victim of Tragic Swimming Party.

In full sight of two of his brothers and four other boy friends, Johnnie Campbell, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Campbell of No. 11 North Beacon street, Watertown, and a good swimmer, drowned while bathing in the Charles River, opposite the Watertown gashouse, yesterday afternoon. The body was recovered after an hour's search. Young Campbell has received his first communion. Friday morning at St. Patrick's church, Watertown.

When the boy sank from sight he was but fifteen feet from the other boys, who stood grouped on the shore watching Johnnie wade into deep water. For a few moments the boys were stunned. Johnnie's seven-year-old brother Leo was the first to recover his senses. Yelling for help, Leo started to doff his coat, with the intention of plunging into the water. He was restrained by Park Officer O'Connor, who had hurried to the place after the first shouts for assistance and who saw it was his turn.

There was only one pair of tights in the party. Leo had finished taking his when found the tights were passed to Johnnie, and were to go next to another brother, Louis, aged fourteen.

"We were taking turns in the river," said Leo. "I plunged in first and came out. Johnnie went in next after me. He started to come out from the shore. When about fifteen feet from us, he sank all of a sudden. He never spread a word. And Johnnie was a good swimmer."

Park Officer O'Connor took charge of the search that was made to find the body, which was located about a hundred feet upstream, whither the remains had been carried by an undercurrent. It is believed that the lad was suddenly taken with cramps and succumbed without having a chance for his life.

NOBODY OWNS THIS $238.

Essex Institute of Salem Asks Court for Right to Get Rid of It.

"We have $238 which nobody owns, but we can't spend it." That is the peculiar situation which the Essex Institute of Salem finds itself in and it has now petitioned the court for authority to spend it either for the general purposes of the Institute or for any specific purpose decided by the court. The money is the principal and interest of $28 which was deposited in 1863, in the local savings bank. It was collected to build a memorial at North Bridge to mark the first opposition to British authority in America. All the subscribers to the fund are dead and the site has been provided with a memorial from another source.

AUTOS FOR STATESMEN.

Doubt as to Whether Sherman and Cannon Get Them.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—There is uncertainty over the appropriations for the automobiles for the Vice-President and the Speaker. The conferees on the legislative appropriation bill have disagreed as to this item and will so report to both houses. The Senate made provision for $2,500 for each officials, whereas the house voted both propositions down.

"Doggone Dispute" Over Dog Is Going to Supreme Court

Stewart of Brockton May Be Barking Up Wrong Tree, But He Is Dogged in His Belief.

BROCKTON, June 4.—That (*) dog gone "Carlo-Max" dispute is going right up to the Supreme Judicial Court.

Orion Stewart of No. 57 Summer street, clinging (†) doggedly to his belief that the St. Bernard "Carlo" or "Max," which ever he is, belongs to him.

The police court said the dog was Stewart's. The jury in the Superior court this week decided that the dog belonged to James E. Clark of No. 12 Sheasley avenue. Stewart asked for a new trial. Judge Stevens denied the new trial, but said that, to his mind, the jury's verdict was not in accordance with the law. The court added that the dog case had cost nearly $1,000 already, one-half of which falls to the county. He thought another trial in the same court would be an imposition on the tax-payers.

But Stewart will keep on (‡) dogging Clarke's footsteps right up to the Supreme Court.

Stewart maintains that Clark is (*) barking up the wrong tree, as it were.

Meanwhile the people of the city now alludes to the case as that () "Affaire du coeur."

ACCUSED OF PERJURY.

Two Placed Under Arrest on "Straw Bail" Charge.

Esther S. Merrill, thirty-eight, of No. 32 Bartlett street, Malden, and Annie E. Jamieson, twenty-nine, of No. 61 Warren street, were arrested yesterday by Inspectors Lynch and Morrissey of headquarters, and were locked up charged with perjury. The police allege that Mrs. Merrill went on "straw bail" ring of which it is charged Henry J. Lanes is leader in the county jail in default of $2,500 bail, was a member. The police say Merrill is the man who gave bail for Harry B. Williams, charged with picking pockets February 19. The charge is that Merrill swore his name was John Reynolds and that he owned a house at No. 207 West Newton street, when, according to the police, he does not. The police swore on April 4 that her name was Annie Clark, and that she owned the house at No. 25 Holyoke street. She went surety, the police assert, for Edward Gresman.

HATHAWAY KENT DEAD.

Dean of Chelsea Business Men Passes Away at 85.

Hathaway Kent, dean of Chelsea's business men, died at the home of his son at No. 58 Heath street, Chelsea, yesterday aged eighty-five years. He had lived seventy years in Chelsea. He was born in Newburyport, March 29, 1825 and started his business with a small steamfitter's shop in Chelsea square 60 years ago. He was a cousin of the late Judge Ames of the Suffolk Probate Court, and had served many terms in the Common Council and the Board of Aldermen. He is survived by a son, two grandsons, and two great grandaughters. The funeral takes place Tuesday from the home.

WILL ARREST WHOLE '12 WESLEYAN CLASS

Sophs Just Had a Good Time the Other Night, but Judge Is Going to Ask Questions.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., June 4.—Thursday's riot of the sophomore class of Wesleyan University is to end in the arrest of every member of the class. Judge Lanon of Saybrook to-day decided to hale the sophomores before him and find the ringleaders. President Shanklin of the University, at the same time, has begun a searching investigation of the affair.

The sophomores held their annual banquet at the Old Lyme Inn, Wednesday night. On their way home early Thursday morning they began merry-making, which soon assumed the proportions of a small-sized riot. At Lyme they took signs from many of the stores and these they posted up conspicuously all over Middletown before they went to bed.

The young rioters took possession of the pyramid of cannon balls in front of the Russell Library and rolled them down the street. Mayor Fisher, professor of Economics, is hardly less exercised over the affair than President Shanklin and Judge Lanon.

GERMANS STIR YACHTSMEN.

Americans Asked to Compete for Royal Cups.

An invitation from the Kaiserlicher Yacht club of Germany to American yachtsmen to contest for a cup given by Emperor William and the Prince Henry cup has been received by the Eastern yacht club and has been accepted.

The invitation stipulates that the races will be sailed in June 1911 at Kiel, best three in five. The elimination trials will be sailed in Buzzards Bay on September 3 and the week following under the direction of the Eastern yacht club and these trials will be open to American sonder boats; three to be picked to be sent across to compete for the two cups.

This invitation has stirred up the yachting world and the trial races will be among the principal events in this section this summer, sonder boats from all parts of the country will probably compete for the honor of representing this country at the cup races.

TWO BATH TRUSTEES, MRS. LOGAN AND MORRISON, QUIT

Resignations Follow Dismissal of Superintendent O'Brien Under Fitzgerald Regime.

TWO trustees of the Bath Department of Boston resigned yesterday. They were Mrs. Lawrence J. Logan of South Boston and George B. Morrison.

From what has been going on in the Bath Department recently," said Mrs. Logan, "the reason for my action must be apparent. That's all I care to say."

The two resignations follow the discharge of Superintendent Joseph P. O'Brien. He was charged with permitting politics to creep into the department. There was ill-feeling between O'Brien and Mayor Fitzgerald.

"I resigned," explained Mr. Morrison, "because of my lack of confidence in the Board of Bath Trustees.

"I feel that the board of trustees are acting under pressure from the Mayor's office rather than on their own judgment. I am satisfied that this was particularly true since the Dyer affair in disobeying the Superintendent Joseph P. O'Brien on evidence that did not justify such a step.

"Pressure from City Hall."

The board in the past—or, at least, while I was a member of it—did not act under pressure from City Hall. While in many respects the position of a trustee was not wholly an enjoyable one, while I was on the board I did my best to serve the city's best interests.

Under the circumstances I feel that I could not be of any use on the board, and so resigned. Although the Mayor asked me to reconsider my action, I refused to do so, being determined to remain on the board until certain things had developed. They have developed.

"A month before Mayor Fitzgerald's election the board passed unanimously a vote of confidence in Mr. O'Brien. In other words, the members voted to ask the Civil Service Commission to classify the position. I don't think Mr. O'Brien has changed any since that time, although with Mr. Fitzgerald's action some of the other members of the board apparently took a different view of Mr. O'Brien."

With the resignation of Mrs. Logan and Morrison, the board now consists of three members, all of whom voted to discharge O'Brien. They are Dr Walter R. Mansfield, Francis M. Carroll and Mrs. Agnes J. Bulger. The appointment of James W. McLaughlin as trustee is now pending.

The charges against Superintendent O'Brien, which are the direct cause of the resignations, were filed by Representative Timothy F. Callahan of Ward 9. It is known that Mayor Fitzgerald was bitterly in sympathy with Callahan. They set forth that he had attempted to discharge competent men because of political reasons and in general that he had used his politics to influence him in the conduct of his office.

O'Brien in Office Five Years.

Superintendent O'Brien, who has been six years in the department at $2,250 per year, had always been a close ally of James Donovan and an open opponent of Mayor Fitzgerald. His removal is directly attributed to the determination of the Mayor to have all of Donovan's friend who were their partisans eliminated.

During the trial of the charges superintendent O'Brien was represented by former District Attorney Arthur D. Hill of the latter openly charged in his closing argument that the charges were manufactured, and were due entirely to politics. It was believed that the formal hearing was merely a preliminary to having the case settled in the courts, but the resignations upset this belief by this statement given out this evening, following the resignation of Morrison: "I do not care to make any further legal proceedings on Mr. O'Brien's behalf because I believe his judgment he has no legal remedy for his dismissal.

"There has been an ostensible compliance with the statute for certain of the charges in regard to political activity. While I believe the fair members of the board found after a public hearing to exist between some were true, sufficient to justify Mr. O'Brien's dismissal, and that has leaves the question whether they were right in the judgment of the board of the where is no real way of bringing the weight of the evidence or the merits of the board before any other tribunal."

WOMAN KILLS A BURGLAR.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Awakening to find a man rifling the pockets of her husband's trousers, Mrs. John Cofferman seized a rolling pin and struck him. He toppled through a window and fell three stories to his death.

"DAKOTA DAN" RUNS HOTEL IN MELROSE

Snapshot by Boston American photographer showing "Dakota Dan" and his wife on the steps of the Otis House, the hotel he will conduct in Melrose. Mr. Russell now wears a beard.

Western Claimant to Russell Fortune Declares He Will Stick in Melrose—"That's My Answer to Almy"

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT — Hotel Otis, Melrose. Spacious, well furnished rooms, with hot and cold water. Quiet, residential neighborhood, seven miles north of Boston, twenty minutes to the North Station. DANIEL BLAKE RUSSELL, owner and manager.

AND that brings up the question, before one goes any a good word for the Otis, and an extra fine word for the attractive delicatessen across the way, is Lady Dixie at the desk?

She says he is, and Melrose says he and the lessee of the Hotel Otis say he is.

The courts have said that another says he is, and so do all of Almy says the other is and Lord Gould says that place is, and—O, but life in Melrose is exciting these days!

The Two Rival Dans.

It was in the Bird's Nest this morning when "Dakota" came in.

"Great crap, Dakota!"

"No name for it—grand"

Or [illegible]

I was down to the Wyoming station this afternoon when "Fresno" came up from Boston with his bodyguard.

"How long is he going to stick around?"

"They looked like a couple of Pinks."

Mighty fine are they!

Maywise Dakota has gone and hired that Hotel Otis from Henry Leonard and is running it [illegible] rooms and [illegible] to bottom. It has no office or smoking room.

ROOSEVELT'S LONDON SPEECH OUTRAGES IRELAND AND AMERICA

If Roosevelt Right, Washington and Jefferson Wrong, Says Mr. Hearst

FLEET TO MEET ROOSEVELT ON HIS RETURN JUNE 18

Reception Committee of 300 Will Go Down the Bay on Revenue Cutter.

HUNDRED VESSELS IN LINE

Taft Will Not Be Present; the Rough Riders to Take Part in the Parade.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT will arrive home on June 18. Preparations for his reception insure its being a notable event.

The ex-President will sail from Hamburg on the Kaiser in Augusta Victoria on June 10. The ship will probably reach New York harbor on the morning of June 18.

The Mayor of New York has appointed a reception committee of 300 to make arrangements for the welcome, and an executive committee of twenty-five have perfected plans. The reception committee includes names of national reputation.

The entire reception committee will go down the bay on the revenue cutter Androscoggin and meet the liner at 9 a.m. when she drops anchor at Quarantine.

More than a hundred vessels have been chartered by various organizations, including steamships, private yachts and tugs, and all will have bands on board. The flotilla will follow the revenue cutter, making so much noise that the Goddess of Liberty may have to cover her ears.

Procession Up the Bay.

Colonel Roosevelt will land at the Battery and will be escorted to the Mayor's stand, which will be erected in City Hall Park. The procession will turn around in front of the Battery and march up Broadway to the Worth monument at Riverside Drive and 89th street, where the column will break up.

At a signal from Police Commissioner Bingham the whole procession will turn around and march back up the line to the Battery. The parade will continue around the North River front until 5 o'clock, when the ex-President will be escorted to the Battery and will go aboard the Mayflower

MR. HEARST GIVES HIS OWN OPINIONS OF THE SPEECH BY ROOSEVELT

THINGS ROOSEVELT SAID

ENGLAND had erred in ruling Egypt through too great weakness and sentimentality.

England had made an effort to do too much in the interest of the Egyptians.

Egypt should be ruled as a subject territory by England.

The Nationalist movement for independence by the Egyptians is wrong.

England should use more repression, as timidity and sentimentality often do more harm than violence and injustice.

"I feel about you and the Soudan just as I felt about the United States in Panama."

"I advise you only in accordance with the principles in which I myself have acted as an American President in dealing with the Philippines."

He advocated harsh measures in dealing with uncivilized peoples, especially fanatical peoples.

Some nation must govern Egypt. He hoped it would be England.

The Nationalist party in Egypt had shown itself neither desirous nor capable of guaranteeing even primary justice.

have [illegible] ... Roosevelt ... the British ... the Egyptian Nationalists deeply deplore. ... there were acts of violence on the part of ... in the Philippines ... coroner ... there were acts of violence on the part of the Americans in their struggle for independence. Lynching and deportation ARE violence, and atrocious violence in others deplorable as it may be.

"Violence Right for Oppressor."

But Mr. Roosevelt apparently objects only to violence on the part of the oppressed. He almost encourages violence as a method for the [illegible] when he says that, in the English attention in Egypt, "timidity and sentimentality may cause even more harm than VIOLENCE and INJUSTICE." Here is a plain statement that it is better for England to be violent and unjust than to exhibit timidity and sentiment.

This atrocious expression Mr. Roosevelt follows and drives home with the statement that "of all broken reeds on which righteousness can lean," timidity is the most broken reed upon which righteousness can lean."

What have violence and injustice to do with righteousness, and what is Mr. Roosevelt's object in saying [illegible] ... the struggle for freedom of every people worthy of the name based mainly upon sentiment? What is the spirit of liberty, the spirit of liberty, but sentiment, the ideas of popular rights, of the equality of men and the brotherhood of man, but sentiment? What are the principles of the Declaration of Independence but sentiment—lofty, ennobling, inspiring sentiment? Surely, the man who calls aspires progress is more commendable than the violence which represses it is those days of progress and sentiment.

"Advocates Increased Imperialism."

We see the Argentine Republic celebrating the centenary of its independence, and Spain, the mother country, sentimentally but wisely, joining in the celebrations of a prosperous and progressive independent child. In Europe we see [illegible] such old, restless ... governments as Persia and Turkey outstrip in the match of progress, adopting popular rights and advancing toward constitutional modification of a tyrannical system.

In these days, when the whole world is waking up to the sentiment and the ETHICAL advantages of government by the people in their own interest, it is self-appointed representative of a free country, government is advocating an increased imperialism and advising force and popular repression.

Mr. Roosevelt objects to the "anti-foreign movement" on the part of the Egyptian patriots and finally says to the English authors: "Some nation must govern Egypt. I hope and believe that you will decide that it is your duty to be that nation."

"Why Should He Meddle?"

Why should Mr. Roosevelt, if he is the representative of America, so far departs from Washington's injunction and America's established custom as to meddle in foreign affairs which do not concern? Why should he, in the first place, advise the English people to mind their business, and, in the second place, why should he urge them to abandon their repression and advocate an American imperialism?

Why should he deny the accepted axiom that an idea of the right of self-government and contradict the statement of our declaration of Independence that a just government is based upon the consent of the governed?

If Roosevelt is right, then Washington was wrong, and Jefferson was wrong!

CALL OF BOY SCOUTS IS LURE TO BOSTON SCHOOL YOUTHS

Boys Band Together and Are Waiting for Vacation Days to Test Their Prowess.

IDEA SPREADING RAPIDLY

Though Equipment Is Lacking, First Patrols of the Scouts Are Being Organized.

WITH the approach of the balmy days, the call of the field and forest, with their promise of fresh country air, has come to the boys of Boston. So much so, in fact, that the boys, by banding themselves as boy scouts, ready for the first vacation days and fair weather to test their ability to become real sure enough scouts.

So idea has caught the boys to such a degree in years as the American Boy Scout movement has, and [illegible] ... and [illegible] ... A [illegible] ... boys are taking it into their heads to [illegible] ... names of their friends who want to become scouts, and in this way the first patrols of American [illegible] are being formed.

The equipment is lacking, it is true, but this is no setback to Boston youths up to twenty years. They fully expect Boston generously on the part of the grown-ups will supply the [illegible] ... For that reason the boys are going at it with their boosting of the scout movement.

Movement in the Schools.

In the schools, at recess, the boys are [illegible] ... projects and plans for the Summer. To be scouts is the idea uppermost in their minds, so they are [illegible] ... and all their own to force attention to scout craft. At the present time there is no co-operation between the boys of the various sections of the city, but that will come in time.

As quick to see the opportunities for improvement of the youngsters are the military men in Boston—especially military men, in fact, men in every walk of life. With such support, the youngsters feel [illegible] ... ness ... as soon as school days are over.

The enthusiasm shown in Boston is in line with the reception given the American Boy Scout movement in the United States. Everywhere at this time, scout patrols are being started, and in the cities and towns where no money has been raised with which to furnish equipment for the boys, [illegible] ... volunteer scouts have been keen to the fact that by their own efforts they can [illegible] ... enjoyment and gratification on the adult population.

Engenders Military Spirit.

The movement was started for the purpose of [illegible] ... the boys, through their innate love of the military, a fealty to the flag, a devotion to their country, [illegible] ... and a [illegible] ... superiors, which no other movement for years and years, to envision the [illegible] ... degree. In brief, the American boy scout is [illegible] ... and [illegible] ... of Boston have resolved [illegible] ... That is why [illegible] ... Boston boys are [illegible] ... to be boy scouts. And they are boosters with a [illegible] ... that is not going [illegible] ... Boston to a greater extent than in other cities where the movement [illegible] ... started.

PUPILS NUMBER 111,721.

School Board Makes Report and Urge Many Needs.

The Boston School Board reports the number of children in this city between the ages of five and fifteen as 110,527.

The whole number of different pupils registered in the public schools for the year were [illegible] ... boys, 57,427; girls, 56,474; making a total of 111,721.

The committee desire to establish day in [illegible] ... schools, with short terms for boys and girls above fourteen years of age, who have completed the elementary school course. They also seek to enlarge the opportunities for industrial education in the evening schools, and to adapt the courses given in the elementary schools adapted more completely to the industrial conditions of the present time. The report also urges that a large part of the evening school courses be given over exclusively for illiterate minors and immigrants, so that they may learn English. The report believes that the number of pupils to a teacher in the [illegible] ... schools should [illegible] ... be reduced, and urges that [illegible] ... be given more frequently, and that evening lectures to improve the professional equipment of teachers be established.

I. K. OF WELLESLEY SPEAKS.

She Is Wrathy About the Carpenters Being So Noisy.

They are "panning" the carpenters out at Wellesley College. It seems that the carpenters made a racket at 6 hours and the poor college maids couldn't keep their mind on their Greek and Latin. One of the girls—who probably was "plucked" in recitation the next day, was so wrathy that she sat right down and wrote to the Boston News about it, signing her initials at the end. This is what she wrote: Is there any reason why the nerve-racking sawing and hammering every morning should not have been done at a time when some of the girls [illegible] ... not trying to work? These last days are a sufficient strain in themselves without having our only refuge invaded by carpenters with their saws, hammers and other instruments of torture [illegible] ... I. K.

Other students say that the initials "I. K" stand for "I. Kick."

BIG DEMAND FOR HELP.

Employment Bureau Report Says Many Want Light Work.

There is more demand for labor in New England than there was a year ago, according to the report of the State Free Employment Bureau. The increase in the demand for help skilled in agricultural, building and industrial lines is nearly 50 per cent over last year. The demand for unskilled labor [illegible] ... Nevertheless, many people are finding that [illegible] ... The bureau report says, "There has never been a greater demand for skilled mechanics everywhere than at the present time."

The market is overrun by men who want light general employment, such as clerks, shippers, porters, janitors, porters or watchmen. Housework is in demand. The bureau has [illegible] ... orders from some of the best families in Boston and vicinity which would require more than 200 women to fill.

CATHERINE O'LEARY, WHO WILL PRACTICE LAW IN BOSTON

MISS CATHERINE M. O'LEARY.

GIRL TELLS WHY SHE HAS BECOME LAWYER

Miss Catherine O'Leary Proves She Can Hold Her Own in Preliminary Tests.

BECOMING fascinated by law while engaged in corporation accounting for five years, Miss Catherine M. O'Leary of No. 172 St. Alphonsus street, Roxbury, took a three-year law course at Boston Collegiate Law School and received her degree with the senior class.

"I had been interested in law for a long time and never had any inclination to become a school teacher or take up any other profession, although sometimes urged to do so by my friends," said Miss O'Leary.

"Now I have been graduated, I am studying hard in preparation for the bar examination that comes in July and I believe that I will pass successfully.

"Of course I realize that a woman in law is somewhat of a novelty, although I know of a number of women who have been admitted.

"I haven't fully made up my mind just what I will do, but I think either I will go into some office for a start and will [illegible] ... the general practice. I have the theoretical side, now I want the practical.

"I am a pretty hard three years, but Miss May E. Connolly of Lynn and myself were the first women to graduate and hold out with the men. If not lead my name of them all, for I was [illegible] ... Dr. Dutch, chairman of the class Lind, and also no reason now why a woman shouldn't receive the same consideration as any lawyer in the practice of the profession."

Miss O'Leary is a Charlestown girl and a graduate of Boston schools and has attended the Harvard Summer School for two years in connection with her law [illegible] ... She is an expert accountant.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES.

Rev. Mr. Paddock Takes Charge of Cambridge Pulpit To-day.

Rev. Ernest M. Paddock will to-day begin his rectorship of St. James's Episcopal Church, Cambridge. Mr. Paddock is a nephew of the late Benjamin H. Paddock, formerly bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts.

The annual meeting of the women missionary [illegible] ... district will be held to-morrow in Bishop Hall, Universalist Building, on Boylston street. The morning session will be given entirely to business. The public meeting will take place at 2 p. m. The Rev. Thomas Jefferson, of Unitarian ministers will be held next Wednesday, June 8, at Wellesley. Rev. A. W. Little-field of Brookline will speak upon the present [illegible] ... of the Church; Rev. E. F. Dole of Jamaica Plain will make an address on the [illegible] ... upon Our Church Should Work for Temperance."

HIGHLAND PARK LOT SALE.

Desirable Location of Sites Appeals to All Home Seekers.

Despite the unfavorable weather large crowds attended the sale of lots at Highland Park, on the Memorial Drive, Roxbury, Thursday and Saturday last. Many [illegible] ... were sold, and the prospects [illegible] ... be full a very successful one.

This property is situated on a high elevation, overlooking the Revere Beach Parkway, and affords an excellent view of ocean and surrounding country. Many have located other Summer or all the year round homes there, and it is now having a rapid activity, the demand for lots being exceptionally brisk.

APOSTLE PAUL SCORED AS WOMAN HATER BY WOMAN PREACHER

Rev. Lucy McGee Takes Rap at the Saint in Answering Editor Harvey.

A FUSS OVER HUSBANDS

Should They Boss the Household, According to Scripture? Never Answers Pulpit Light.

ALEXANDER HARVEY, editor of Current Literature, talks "sheer nonsense" in saying American women are doomed unless men are the masters, declares the Reverend Lucy McGee, pastor of the Church of the Higher Life at No 585 Boylston street, Back Bay.

The Apostle Paul, whom Mr. Harvey cites as an authority on woman, was either a widower or a woman-hater, adds Miss McGee.

She is sure Paul knew nothing of the needs of modern women, and how much he knew of the women of Bible times

So far as Mr. Harvey is concerned, he can go to——Rome with the Apostle

Final Jab at Editor.

As a final jab at the rank tormant Mr Harvey, Pastor McGee a nce that, when he does sometime come in contact with flesh and blood-filled women he will learn what she (Pastor McGee) means.

Miss McGee was quite ready with detailed reply to all that Mr Harvey had uttered in his widely quoted speech. She said:

"When a man, like Mr. Harvey (this about a woman, too), who has no wife or husbands do not know, he is simply speaking from the depths of his own ignorance.

"There are many things said and written about women to-day which are mere nonsense. We have a shallow and cynical age, and many of these utterances about women are simply the exposing of this carnal nature. When we are conscious that we possess the spiritual nature, the nature which the preacher of Galilee has given us all, there will be no disbelief in, or along the lines about what we expect of women

Solution to All Problems.

"All problems which spring from human relations, whether social or political, must find their solution in the divine principle, so when anyone like Mr. Harvey speaks as he did about the necessity of women being ruled by the husbands, he is just showing how full he is of that carnal nature.

"Human problems can be changed, but never solved except in the divine light and many of these hasty and erratic utterances about women are merely looking to the good of the moment. If men would only let some other light come into their lives they would see that such utterances which characterize the address of Mr. Harvey

"It is sheer nonsense to depend upon the whim of one man, be he husband, who is doubtedly a woman hater or widower. His interpretation of the spirit of the Christ is far wrong and the Master, I do not see why so many should depend upon Paul as if he knew everything about women and there was nothing further to be known.

Paul He Didn't Know Anything!

"This is the mistake and it is time made many times. Paul knew nothing about the needs of the modern woman and how can he know about the needs of his times in a very doubtful question.

"I am prepared to say that if the man who is now seated in legislative power would only live from the divine nature which is in us it close legislation would cease and he would find no impulse being guided by his divine nature, to become restrictive laws on any of the great brotherhood or humanity.

"By this I mean that all the ills and complaints are easy of solution, the social unfairness for instance, that is the difficulty back of it? No more than this, that one man is working at it from the carnal nature. You take people imbued with the beauty and significance of the spiritual life and what it means and all this nonsense which Mr Harvey talks about will pass away as the clouds.

"Mr Harvey can go to live with Paul if he pleases, and lord it over the woman in the style that he seeks, but this can be said, no woman who has ever entered into the possession of the life that I have described will ever follow the conclusions of such men as Mr Harvey.

"There is a fineness in a woman's nature which Mr. Harvey seems to forget or has never grasped, but when he does get in touch with the fine and beautiful nature he will see what I mean when I refer to the divine in us all. Every pure woman loves to and it stands out before the world to-day, and every pure man can find much to admire in woman when he possesses the same beautiful qualities for which pure womanhood has always stood."

BATES FIGHTS HEALTH BILL.

Raises Constitutional Issue in Washington Argument.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The opponents of the bill providing for a department of public health were heard to-day by the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce. Ex-Governor Bates of Massachusetts made the opening argument. He confined himself largely to constitutional objections.

"What should the people of Massachusetts, Michigan, Illinois, already over burdened with taxation for their own efficient public service, be taxed for the support of diseases in other States, because the people of those States neglect their social obligations," said Governor Bates.

MINORS BUYING LIQUOR.

Arrest of Youths in Chelsea Starts Investigation.

Acting on a complaint made by Probation Officer Green, Holbrook of the Chelsea Police Court, Special Officer Patrick Gaffney of the Chelsea police is investigating the saloons of the city, against which charges of selling liquors to minors have been made

The probation officer made the complaint to-day after two eighteen-year-old lynn boys were arraigned in the local court charged with drunkenness. Their cases were placed on file. Last Monday a fourteen-year-old boy was arrested for being drunk Complaints are being made that it is an easy thing for minors to purchase liquor, and in many cases are intoxicated on the street.

Most of the complaints come from the Mill Hill section of the city, close to the Revere line and Bee-cent car fare limit Lynn Item.

GEYSER SPOUTS ICE WATER.

New One in Yellowstone Park Upsets Scientific Theory.

HELENA, Mont., June 4 -The most remarkable of all the natural phenomena in the Yellowstone National Park has recently been discovered by Wister Keeper Bunson of Norris station. It is a geyser which plays regularly every twenty four hours and throws a stream 150 feet high whose water is ice cold instead of boiling hot. The new geyser is called the Valentine.

The usually accepted theory of geyser activity seems to have received a setback by the discovery of the Valentine. The hypothesis that subterranean streams coming in contact with lime and certain chemicals generate heat and steam, which seeking vent causes an eruption, fails utterly to account for the Valentine's peculiar action.

MAKING WORLD BETTER.

Society Incorporated to Improve Morals of the Earth.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The International Moral and Social Commission has been incorporated here to conduct a world-wide campaign of moral, social and political reforms. Total abstinence, suppression of saloons, crusades against the so-called white slave traffic, race gambling, Sabbath observance and the promotion of arbitration are among its declared objects. Among those announced as concurring in the movement are Professor Samuel Zane Batten of Des Moines, Ia.; Rev. William S. Chase of Brooklyn, Rev. Sylvanus Stall of Philadelphia, archdeacon Berge of Sydney, Australia, Dr Herold of Lausane, Switzerland, and Rev. E. W. Thwing of Tien Tsien, China. The commission will eventually number twenty-one.

Corot's "Birdnesters" Brings $65,000 in London Gallery.

LONDON, June 4.—When, at the Yerkes sale in New York, Corot's "Fisherman" reached the price of $80,500, England's experts thought the boom had gone too far, but at Christie's to-day there was almost equally keen bidding.

Corot's "Birdnesters," from Andrew Maxwell's collection, was put up at $10,000, but the bids went up amid excitement till the hammer fell to Mr. Knoedler's call of $65,000.

Daly Thompson and Tozzer have beaten the record in English auction rooms. The Corot was bought by its late owner thirty years ago for $2,300.

Matthew Maris's little "Enfant Couchee" fetched $24,000 to-day, the total sum realized by the day's sale being over $210,000.

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

Eczema Not a Blood Disease—New Remedy for Every Skin Trouble

For years the medical profession has been seeking a cure for Eczema, the most common and most stubborn of skin diseases. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. It remained for one studious chemist to settle by any question that eczema in any form is a skin disease and that in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic, healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he formed the compound Cadum that he at last realized he had given to the world something that would bring relief or cure to millions of sufferers. Cadum tanks to-day with the greatest discoveries of the modern world. Its action is so positive in the itching of eczema is stopped immediately. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest as soon as Cadum is used, and in ordinary cases a complete restoration of the skin to a healthy condition is reached in two or three weeks. The soothing, healing effects of Cadum are almost instantaneous. Cadum is sold at all druggists. Trial box 10c, large box 25c. The small box is sufficient for trial purposes, and if used not only for eczema, but for all forms, but also for blackheads, blotches, tetter, itch, ringworm, scaly skin, rash, psoriasis, ringworm, chafings, eruptions, sores, scabs, itching piles, scurvy, etc.

UNION LEADERS LAUD MERCHANTS' AID TO WORKMEN'S ACT

Compensation Measure Called Simple Justice to Toilers and Families.

PUTS END TO MANY EVILS

Bill Framed by W. N. Osgood in 1904 Has Attracted Wide-spread Attention.

PRACTICALLY unanimous in their approval of the Workmen's Compensation Act, now before the Massachusetts State Legislature, labor leaders of Boston to-day unite in paying their tribute of praise to the Chamber of Commerce, which is lending the weight of its influence for the passage of the measure.

Since William N. Osgood of Lowell first framed such an act in 1904 its provisions have attracted a widest attention. Public opinion more and more is demanding such reform. Legislation as will secure for workingmen just compensation for injuries sustained while at their tool or in case of death some immediate financial compensation to the widow and orphans.

The Chamber of Commerce strongly advocates the passage of the bill now before the Legislature. The majority of the Judiciary Committee of the Legislature is said to favor the general principle of the bill. The gravity of the proposition is conceded by judges and labor leaders are urging action.

In brief, the Workmen's Compensation Act would provide compensation for injuries received by the toiler through the negligence of his fellows, or the carelessness of overseers or their agents.

The Employers' Liability Act is largely modified from the Employers' Liability Law of this state, which have delayed settlement in litigation. All of these existing Workmen's Compensation Act in force and its scope of.

How the labor leaders and men prominent in business in Boston regard the [illegible] before the Legislature of the matter will reveal.

"Doing a Grand Work."

Michael A. Murphy, president Boston Central Labor Union: "If, as stated, the act as favored by the Chamber of Commerce does away with the unjust system of fraud and 'fellow servants' control now in force at the same time defining the liability of employers from which the Chamber of Commerce seeks not to bring a grand work in advancing humanity's interests.

"There is [illegible] cases, where linemen, teamsters and others, have been unable to recover damages because we had no such law on our statute books. In many instances, I can [illegible] the first man with a wife and children, leaving a public charge. Or, if he died, his children were denied the advantages of a proper education, while many times families were left on the mercy of the public. It is extreme gratifying to [illegible] of means taking such an interest in upholding [illegible] rights."

Means Simple Justice.

Henry Abrahams, secretary Boston Central Labor Union:

"The praiseworthy efforts of the Chamber of Commerce to secure for the tired wage earner and his family the benefits of an equitable workmen's compensation act, marks a important epoch in the industrial history of the Commonwealth. Aside from the size or the scope of the claim of disbursement provided for in this proposed bill, the recognition of the vital principles involved in such a measure by this great commercial institution, of itself is a tremendous step forward.

"When the bill finally is enacted into law, the great mass of employers the state will evidently realize that it [illegible] says to be just in their dealings with [illegible] and that all will be willing [illegible] of the State want—simple justice.

Insurance Sharks Only Losers.

Arthur M. Huddell, business agent Building Trades Department, C. L. U.:

"By its advocacy of a clean-cut workman's compensation act the Chamber of Commerce shows that it considers the interests of capital, [illegible] and employees, as well as the general [illegible] of all concerned. All concerned want to have this matter settled and it seems [illegible] the Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated for its stand on the question.

"The [illegible] of such a bill is a legitimate one. There is nothing to fear if the bill passes. It is really a blessing for the protection of the workmen. The only losers will be the insurance sharks and their lawyers, who make a fat living by [illegible] costly litigation. The workingmen will benefit if the change is made, and there is no reason why it shouldn't be."

Saves Cost of Litigation.

Arthur M. Watson, secretary Carpenters' District Council:

"The workman's compensation act [illegible] is that favored by the Chamber of Commerce, workingmen and their families would be immensely benefited in that the money paid by the employer in the form of [illegible] would be diverted into the proper channels instead of being wasted in costly litigation. Employers and the courts get the greater part of that money to-day.

"Unless a stated liability, the reputable employer, having [illegible] responsibility was, would prepare to meet the obligations in case an accident occurred on his job. He is paying for a certain amount of protection to-day which neither he nor his workmen can hope to receive under the present, worn-out, [illegible] law. He is allowed to stand unmolested, and the [illegible] people are the only ones that would suffer if the desired changes are made."

Means Much to Family.

Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, organizer Textile Workers' Union:

"If the average legislator could be made to understand what this bill means to the wives and children of the wage workers of the State and be brought to realize how [illegible] such a law was, it would be impossible to find a man among them so devoid of a sense of right and wrong as to [illegible] a single vote against it.

"The Chamber of Commerce is doing a noble work in advocating the passage of this bill, for while it would not injure the business of any honest employer it is operating to-day, it decently defined workmen's compensation act would be a godsend to the wives and children of the toilers who fall, should they ever need its benefits heartily."

Mr. Clair M. Leet, business agent Patternmakers' Association:

"It is a move in the right direction. A sharply defined responsibility in case of accidental injury to workingmen is needed by employer and employes. There is no need to quarrel over petty details, the list of compensations named in this particular bill are found to be [illegible] after a fair trial, or should they be found to be too high, they can [illegible] to be too low. Once the principle of workmen's compensation is established it should not [illegible] law, but a matter of [illegible] a law.

"The Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated on the possession of men, who, [illegible] themselves, are broad-minded enough to see that the true interests of the community are united best when the man who works with his hands is dealt fairly with, however humble his circumstances."

TARDEN paradise, when forty little barefoot dancers charmed and enchanted passersby with their merry quips and wanton wiles. They were the pupils of Mrs. Lida Miles Wyman, for whom a special program had been obtained.

That the spirit of Boston is not dead and that advocates of blue laws still exist is evidenced by the protest of one sour-visaged woman, who thought such barefoot dancing on sacred Puritanical ground was [illegible].

Lady Boston was in the decided minority, however, as everyone else [illegible] the outdoor spectacle was perfectly adorable.

Affair a Surprise.

The affair was a surprise and all who chanced to happen by were delighted by the surprise and novelty. The little dancers looked like nymphs just stepped out of an old Greek picture. The accompaniment was the bacarole from "The Tales of Hoffman" and the "Spring Song." Every step was taken as though it were youth personified, as though they danced simply because it was spring, and as they enjoyed the very fact of living and being. Every gown was in softest [illegible] and [illegible] with the wealth of nature around, the verdant trees, the sparkling waters and the bright vivacity of flowers.

All the dancers had dying hair simply bound with a filet of ribbon [illegible] everywhere was simplicity and its charm.

The garden never looked lovlier and all though the air was a little cool and the grass somewhat dewy, the atmosphere of Spring was all too inviting. It was [illegible] such a sight as youthful poesy dream on Summer even by haunted stream.

BLIND MEN'S HOME IN CAMBRIDGE RUN BY A WOMAN

Ten Unfortunate Ones Living Happily Together While Learning Trades.

TEN men, the sight from whose eyes has gone forever, occupy quarters and enjoy life by reason of the fraternal spirit existing among them in the only [illegible] boarding house that Greater Boston contains, at No. 17 Pleasant street, Cambridge.

The munificent provision which the State has put forth in behalf of its blind has caused them thus to be brought together in this unique lodging house, for the Commonwealth is paying their keep, besides teaching them trades until such time as they shall become self-supporting.

The house is conducted by Mrs. L. Gingras, formerly of North Cambridge, a woman holding particular sympathies for such as they, as her own husband is similarly afflicted.

The occupants of the apartments, who require no light whatever to go about their chambers at night, or even while [illegible] regular domestic [illegible] on, are employed by day in the [illegible] conducted by the State Commission for the Blind in Centre square, but a short distance away. Here they are taught to make brooms, construct [illegible] for chairs and weave rugs.

These men are: Arthur Sisk, forty, lodging in [illegible] Cambridge street; Nevada [illegible], formerly of Worcester; Bernard Ainsworth, Cambridge; [illegible] Hall, who was a hotel housekeeper in Sterling; Thomas [illegible] of Lynn; [illegible] Public Mercerer, thirty-eight, of Marblehead; William [illegible], [illegible] Malden; Roland [illegible] of Haverhill; Hector Murray, of Cambridge; John [illegible] Framingham, and Alphonse Perry, of Cambridge.

Injunction Assists Combination That Has Been Trying to Bring on Stock Panic.

CHICAGO, June 4—Policies make strange bed fellows involuntarily. It is an unpleasant statement to make but it must be stated that the administration at Washington became an effective attorney to a combination which has done everything within the bounds of prudence to create a panic on the stock exchange.

For months certain princes of finance have preached coming disaster. Their emissaries spread the sinister word throughout the country; their dark views found journalistic expression between the coasts and from the Canadian border to the Gulf. Personal visits of warning were made.

The ominous epidemic may have been sincere, but for a few it was a remunerative deception breeds well or ill. The party of pessimists was not limited, however, to the city of New York. The real, the self-assumed, and the interesting part of the camp followed the counsel of the priest, of whom

ANDOVER SLAMS OUT A VICTORY OVER EXETER IN 11TH

Cheering Crowd Sees New Hampshire Lads Tie Score in 9th, Only to Lose.

CARRY VICTORS OFF FIELD

Ancient Enemies Fight the Bitterest Baseball Contest in Years at Andover.

By G. R. Carpenter.

ANDOVER, June 4—Andover won from Exeter today in the annual baseball game between the two academies by a score of 5 to 4. But it was a victory that many lounges of theart do not boast, for they pulled the game from the wreckage of the ninth on fast effort of Captain Sawtelle, who by anybody's rules should have been put into the game and played such a reckless game that the spectators could scarcely breathe. Brothers Bell was on his feet constantly.

The rivalry between Yale and Harvard is nothing compared with the rivalry between Andover and Exeter, the two preparatory schools of New England which, from an athletic standpoint, are head and shoulders above all others. And the crowd of [illegible] who crowded the special trains which left Boston for the game early in the afternoon reflected the strong rivalry of the two institutions.

Ready to Risk Their Necks.

Exeter won the annual football game last Fall. Again this Spring she won in the track games and so, even with a poor baseball record than Andover, her team went on the field this afternoon with every [illegible] his young neck to win the game.

But Andover was [illegible] today, and not one of the chaps of victory crop for they had won nearly [illegible] long games, while Exeter had won but four [illegible]

Even Andover was confident in the bone [illegible] not turn her face away, for Andover has always been lucky at the national game than her New Hampshire rival. In the games played between the two schools since 1878 Andover has won 21 and Exeter 10.

Andover's record made her an easy favorite in the little bedlam that was done on the north [illegible] in fact the crowd was not as large as [illegible] Exeter had feared their team would be badly beaten. But for all that the stands were packed to their limit. A great crowd stood along the right field [illegible] and [illegible] Summer days, [illegible] it will be a formidable organization.

To-morrow winds up the series here, and if the season honors will prevail there is [illegible] to capture about three out of four games.

Young Wood distinguished himself by copping out two singles and a double, while Lord, Hodge and Spencer contributed their usual quota of hits.

ST. LOUIS, June 4—There can be little said of the second game of the series between the Boston Americans and the St. Louis Browns, which was pulled off this afternoon on a muddy diamond, save that Joe Wood, the Red Sox star pitcher, held the home team down to three hits and in no instance was he in danger, while Pelty, who appeared for O'Connor's dilapidated team, was hit freely at all times.

It was a foregone conclusion early in the session that it was to be a one-sided affair, [illegible] was manifested on the part of 2,500 loyal fans in attendance. The Speed Boys are not the [illegible] and in passing [illegible] series even in Winnipeg [illegible] Summer days, [illegible] it will be a formidable organization.

To-morrow winds up the series here, and if the season honors will prevail there is [illegible] to capture about three out of four games.

CORNELL BEATEN BY HARVARD TO THE TUNE OF 8 TO 1

Crimson Keeps Grip on Top of the Dope Bowl by Win, 8 to 1

FILLED with the unpleasant memory of Cornell's victory in water sports, Coach Haggard set out to apply the water wash brush to the Harvard nine at Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon and nearly did the trick by a score of 8 to 1.

Goodwillie who started the pitching for the visitors proved a good thing for the Crimson and Harvard hit up a pace for the sluggers in the first inning scoring five runs. After batting Goodwillie out of the box, the Crimson went after Carroll, the Magician slab artist of the visitors and soon ended his career. [illegible] the first inning the Crimson had scored [illegible] and a couple of scores in [illegible] After [illegible] Carroll settled down and did not allow Harvard to cross the plate again.

Cornell Gets Lone Tally.

Cornell's lone tally came in the last of the ninth inning, a sort of forlorn hope effort to tie the victors. On only one other occasion was the Crimson in danger of being scored upon, when in the fifth inning Hughes to Howard and Owen gave the Ithacans their chance, but Merchant went out to the [illegible]

Goodwillie was a stumper for Harvard batsmen as the Crimson have never before hit this season and the Harvard [illegible] was all to pieces after runner on the Crimson made the circuit. Over 5000 spectators were present at Harvard's first rowing game of the year.

All eyes were turned on McLaughlin, who [illegible] first time took the mound for the [illegible] Hugo was at his baffling best and pace at first sank and [illegible] before he met his own share of applause by his fine fielding.

McLaughlin, Potter and Minot were the heroes of the day and salvos of cheers [illegible] Potter's stick work and Minot's batting. The entire Crimson seemed to have breathed out with the sunshine and [illegible]

Harvard had come back to its old winning [illegible] and Cornell had to take the [illegible] Harvard's [illegible] Potter and Minot were the [illegible]

Harvard Slammed Ball.

[illegible] used six men while Goodwillie was used only for [illegible] Cornell presented to each [illegible] Harvard.

The [illegible] Crimson batsmen [illegible] Courtenay hits for only seven.

Throughout the game McLaughlin's excellent judgment was apparent. He steadily cut out the runs while the [illegible] Potter made good his [illegible] out a [illegible] double which fielded [illegible]

[illegible] Cornell [illegible] Crimson jumped out a single but was caught trying to steal second. Then while Gave McLaughlin a pass. Hicks sent a long drive over the fence [illegible] through Carroll's hands, also both McLaughlin and Potter made good hits [illegible] Potter made good his [illegible] out a [illegible] double which fielded [illegible]

[illegible] Cornell [illegible] Crimson another tally. Total, five runs.

Crimson Scores Again.

Goodwillie was removed and Carranal tried his luck in the second [illegible]

[illegible] Potter [illegible] second on [illegible]

Only one hit [illegible] first at the hands [illegible] of Cornell. Merchant drove a pass [illegible] Harvard however had a different idea of things. Young came to the bat with a fine Texas leaguer to center. Babcock duplicated this [illegible] backed up [illegible] the other with an infield drive [illegible] Dig [illegible] McLaughlin to the left of the [illegible] configuration [illegible] which would [illegible] Cornell [illegible] Young [illegible]

After Wood [illegible] Goodwillie had [illegible] Potter [illegible] for Cornell in the [illegible] Merchant [illegible] him when he [illegible] Potter [illegible] came near [illegible] to her hair when Lanigan singled. Marshall sacrificed, Young walked and the runners [illegible] a double steal, but Babcock [illegible] out the side.

Cornell tried to hit a winning pace but the singles by Howard and Owen in the fifth went for nothing.

After Rogers had grounded and Hicks had [illegible] in the [illegible] Young [illegible] forced out McLaughlin, who had drawn a pass.

Hard Luck for Cornell.

Hard luck still [illegible] Cornell in the ninth, but Harvard tried, and nearly secured another tally when Minot doubled and Lanigan followed with a single, but a double play by Rogers and Hicks nipped this scheme in the bud.

Then the [illegible] reached first on a pass, [illegible] Young [illegible] by Hicks, Potter and Marshall. Howard took [illegible] and [illegible] Thompson captured a single, and McLaughlin [illegible] batted [illegible] Howard [illegible] Thompson

Speaker is not the youngest in the league but will be as far better next season as he is now to any ground that the city of Boston ought to name "the Schara" by reason of its dust blown progressives.

Think of it! That fact of Joe Jones giving the Reds a battle of twelve innings and then putting the kaboodle out upon [illegible] through one more game with the big stick. YALE CREW DEVELOPES STRENGTH; WORRIES THE CRIMSON Harvard Oarsmen Now Anxious Over the Big Contest on the Thames.

NO CHANGE IN THE STROKE

But Cutler Has Not Shown Sufficient Form to Satisfy the Cambridge Men.

HARVARD [illegible] to think that Yale will [illegible] on the water this year [illegible] build a boat [illegible] mysterious manner [illegible] of the rowing experts [illegible] few weeks ago that [illegible] have a walkaway [illegible] to-day to blue-pencil [illegible] Apparently no one seems to know [illegible] make-up of the Yale crew [illegible] will be, but several circumstances [illegible] to indicate that Coach Kennedy [illegible] many and various surprises up his [illegible].

As far as Harvard is concerned the proposition is a straightaway one. The Crimson oarsmen will arrive at their training [illegible] at Red Top to-morrow and the [illegible] rowing practice with four-mile runs and lively spins between the 'varsity and the freshman crews will begin.

From the present outlook there is one [illegible] that Coach Wray will make a change in the order of the Harvard eight. The position of stroke has been puzzling the Harvard coach all the year, and many believe that the defeat by Cornell can be laid to a defect in this position.

Will Cutler Do As Stroke?

Before the race with the Middies it was common talk that Cutler had not enough reserve power to pace the Crimson to victory. It was at that time thought that Wood would put Newton in Cutler's seat. Wood did not waver, think it advisable [illegible] Newton and Cutler set the [illegible] contest, the Crimson [illegible].

[illegible] Navy race lead to [illegible] the stroke string for the [illegible] Coach Courtney of Cornell [illegible] to see the weakness in Harvard's [illegible] and scented from his crews [illegible] with a splendid supply of energy.

[illegible]

[illegible] Courtney also shattered the Crimson calculations by devising a quick, jerky stroke, totally different from the [illegible] professional oarsmen have now [illegible] general use in most of the American colleges. The ability to invent such new kinds of stroke and modification of the regulation stroke is largely responsible for Courtney's fame. Coach Wray, on the other hand, clings to the style in vogue with the big drive and just enough body swing to bring the weight of the torso into play.

No More to Change.

There is no reason to suppose that Harvard will change its manner of stroke for the Yale race, as it has been made [illegible] with the present style. The whole body of [illegible] not no changes will [illegible] made for [illegible] of men in [illegible] seasoned and experienced.

The coming race brought out another fact that may count against Harvard in the struggle with the Blue. The Crimson boat seems to be carrying dead weight that slackens the speed of the crew. The men in front are too heavy. They are [illegible] and probably the heaviest Crimson crew in years. None of the weights will be taken off in the strenuous training at Red Top, and even then it is feared that it will count against Harvard's success.

LOCKWOOD TIES WITH ANDERSON IN TITLE GOLF TOURNEY

Woodland Crack Makes Star Shot, Wading Into Water to Play Ball Out.

A field of eighty golfers took part in the two-day open amateur tournament at the Allerton Golf Club yesterday. Two former State champions headed the field with 78s and will have to play off the tie this week. Arthur G. Lockwood of the home club and John G. Anderson of Woodland were the two low scores. They were very closely pressed by H. W. Stuckies of Braeburn, who had 14.

Anderson's opportunity to take the low score trophy looked very good, indeed, when he had a chance to score a 70 if he could hole his mashy of 3-4-3. But he took 6 on the sixteenth. Then he put his second shot into the pond guarding the green on the seventeenth, and was fortunate to get a 5 on this hole, for he played his ball out of the water after taking off his shoes and stockings and wading after it. It was rather remarkable that he got his water 'a above his knees.

On the eighteenth, usually an easy 3, he again required 4, thus tieing Lockwood's score.

Low net honors went to A. G. Tenney of Brockton, who was credited with a second net by, he went to J. J. Daniels of Woodland, with 86 less 10——76.

WINS FIRST HONORS

At Worcester hill climb yesterday, the Thomas Flyer, an absolutely stock 1910 6-70 Touring Car, driven by Mr. J. J. Kingsley, amateur driver and owner, again proves to be the most powerful stock car in America, winning:—

First in race for cars costing $4000 and over.

First in Amateur Race, no territory limitation, open to all Gasoline Cars.

Thomas Endurance

And Thomas strength, the same combination that carried this car into first place by a margin of 26 days in the New York to Paris race, won these Worcester events. Mr. Kingsley and hundreds of other Thomas

Owners Will Tell You

that no car on earth is so elastic under power as this six-cylinder Thomas. You can skim over the worst sort of an up grade—you can cruise swiftly over the roughest and muddiest of bad roads—you can edge in and out through the densest of city traffic—or, under better road conditions, you can make speed—all this on the "high" without once going back into the low gears. There is nothing you can't do on the "high" with this stock car.

This means ease of operation and adds to pleasure and comfort. It means superb engine design and construction. It means economy both in gasoline and in up-keep. It means a larger mileage and a longer life for the car.

You don't want a car to use for racing purposes, but you do want a car which offers such a magnificent reserve of power, reserve strength and speed, one with everlasting endurance and reliability. For these things mean safety, they mean economy through less repairs, and in addition this wonderful Thomas Flyer offers you refinement, perfect comfort under any conditions, luxury and distinction. Money cannot buy its superior. A car built for conservative people, for you, who wish to take no chances with new, untried "improvements." This is the fourth year of this model—practically no change.

Call and look over the New England Thomas owners' testimonial letters and our photographs of some of the cars' experiences. Then, by your leave, we would like to give you a demonstration of this car's easy riding, its style, its ease of control, its luxury and refinement.

THE FUNNIEST STORIES TOLD IN BOSTON DURING THE WEEK

Don't—But Be Careful

By Bail Commissioner Maurice F. Murphy.

FIRST of all, don't ever be a bail commissioner—unless you can live without sleep. Secondly, if you are one, take care not to offend those whom you are called to release. They may need to be bailed again, and of course you'll want to be called.

Just to show how easily some people are offended, hear what happened a few nights ago. I was called in town to take bail for a chap who had exercised his right arm too freely on another fellow's face. Just as I reached the police station another man, a colored gentleman, was brought in for assaulting his wife. He had a bondsman with him, and wanted to be bailed at once. While he was being booked I took care of the first case.

There is a wide range of amounts for bail in assault cases. The amount depends in part on the injury to the victim.

"How badly is this other fellow hurt?" I asked the lieutenant. "Oh, not very much," was the answer. "Just a slightly discolored eye and a little scratch on the nose." The bail was fixed at one hundred and fifty dollars.

Then came the colored fellow's turn, in case "How badly is the victim hurt?" I asked again. "Not a mark on her," said the officer who made the arrest.

"All right," I said. "The bail will be five hundred dollars."

You should have seen the colored fellow. He was almost white with rage.

"What's that?" he shouted. "Hundred and fifty dollars for a black eye and scratched nose, and five hundred dollars for no damages at all. Wh-wh-wh-what do you call this, anyway? Color discrimination?"

It took about five minutes to convince him that the penalty for striking one's wife is heavier than for hitting a fellow-man.

Justified Faith

By Martin Tuohy of South Boston.

WHILE touring in Ireland a year ago with several friends we secured the services of a quaint old guide. One of the party asked Pat what was his belief.

"I am of my landlady's belief, sir," he replied.

"What, may I ask, is her belief?"

"Well, sir, I owe the poor old soul five months' rent, and she believes I'll never pay her, and that's my belief, too."

Wanted Facts

By Rev. Robert Walker, Jail Chaplain of East Cambridge and a Probation Officer of Middlesex County.

AN inebriate who was deliriously happy was riding home on a train bound for Marlboro. In front of him was a man who was deep in a book. The inebriate was a bit curious.

"Say, mister," he said, leaning over the seat in front of him, and addressing the book lover, "What's your name?"

The only answer the disciple of Bacchus received was a hard look. But this did not stop the inebriate. Not much. Again and again he pressed the question. Finally the man with the book looked at the inebriate and sourly answered:

"Call me Paul."

For some time afterward all was quiet in the car. Once more the intoxicated one started to ask question.

"Say, Paul," he said. "I'm in trouble. Help me out, will you?"

"Well, what do you want now?" snapped the book reader.

"I want to know if you ever got a reply to that epistle you sent to the Corinthians?" said the drunk, and the suburbanite who had been trying hard to read was forced to join in the laugh that followed.

Had the Money

By Patrolman Tom Landrigan.

ONE night, while patrolling my route on Main street, Charlestown, I was accosted by an elderly woman, who told me that she had not eaten in forty-eight hours and that she was nearly famished. She also informed me that she was without funds. I felt sorry for her and took her to a restaurant. She started in like a real table finisher and acted as if she had not eaten for a month. After she had her fill, she told me that she had no home. It was a bad night, so I took her to the station and had her charged on the blotter as a vagrant, knowing that the court would find some place for her the next morning.

When she appeared in court she listened to the story that I told and, of course, didn't make mention of the fact that I had paid for an enormous meal. When the judge asked her if she had anything to say, she began upbraiding me. She told his honor that I was not telling the truth and ended by producing a bank book containing a larger deposit than I ever had.

Would I buy her another feed? NEVER AGAIN.

Cheap Skate

By John Walsh.

ONE day last Spring I was standing outside a fish store on Broadway, when a middle-aged Irish woman entered and told the proprietor that she wished to purchase some sea food, but was at a loss to know which particular kind to choose. The owner, desiring to help her, suggested some skate fish for Mrs. Mulligan to take home to her husband.

"Wow, wow," says Mrs. Mulligan, "skate fish, is it, you propose for my husband? Now I know the cause of Michael coming home every Saturday night with a load that would sink a battleship after eating skatefish on Friday with a jag in every bite of it.

"I'm through buying fish from you, Mr. Jones, and will buy my fish in the future from somebody who sells other than fish with skates on every pound you buy."

Purely Economy

By Norman C. McNaughton.

A SCOTCHMAN was out on a little hunting trip with his son and came to a place which the old man considered a likely one in which to find some birds. After looking the place over he said:

"Jock, run up the buil and scare up a coople of petridges and I'll shute them when they come doun."

Jock obeyed. The birds flew and the old man fired. The birds were unhurt, but the place that Jock aits upon was filled young man started on a run for home, with the old man following. On the way the old man shouted:

"Jock, run as fur as ye ken and as fast as ye ken, because I'll hae to karry ye far enou' when you drop."

Missed His Aim

By the Sporting Editor.

HEINE WAGNER tells this one, but will not name the particular Red Sock who was its perpetrator. Four of the players had crowded into a cab and were being taken to the hotel after the game—the result of which is not a part of this story. As the carriage passed close to the curb a pedestrian who wanted news pointed his finger at the player nearest the window of the hack and shouted the question, "Who beat?"

"Dead beat!" replied the player, and there was much laughter in the cab.

Now it chanced that another player in the carriage had ambitions to shine as a wit, so he treasured this bit of humor and resolved to use it himself at the first opportunity. As they left the cab and filed into the hotel a newsboy rushed up to the would-be humorist and asked, "Who won?"

"Dead beat!" shouted the ball player, and it took his laughing comrades half an hour to make him see why the quick-witted newsboy had replied:

"Say, mister, you belong on the Daffy-Dill page!"

Matter of Luck

By F. J. Sheehan, Well-Known on the South Side.

ONCE upon a time there was an Orthodox minister who was rector of a parish in Springfield, Mass.

The minister in question decided that the church funds needed replenishing and determined to hold a sort of a bazaar with attractive prizes. Meeting one of his flock named Samuel Jones, he imparted the information to Sam and told the latter that there was to be a grand drawing for money prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250. Sam immediately told the reverend gentleman that he would take ten tickets at fifty cents each, but would pay him later.

The drawing occurred, and meeting Sam on the street the rector addressed him, saying

"Sam, you could not guess who won the first prize."

"No," said Sam.

"Why, your humble servant," replied the minister. "Wasn't I lucky? The second prize was won by Deacon Smith. Wasn't he lucky, Sam?" And the toird prize was won by Elder Eaton. Wasn't he lucky, Sam? By the way, Sam, did you pay me for those ten tickets?"

"No," replied Sam, "but wasn't I lucky!"

"How I Would Make the Kiddies Happy If I Were Very Rich"

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

OH, YOU blessed kiddies! what a frolic we had in my very latest dream in which I was a most enormously rich girl to whom nothing was denied. I was a comet flashing through the sky, with all the planets in my train, and perched upon each dazzling world was one of you precious lumps of sweetness! Around and around the sun and through the spangled skies we flashed to the rhythm of the music of all the spheres, while you laughed as only happy kiddies know how to laugh. Never was there such a comet. How amazed this old earth must have been—until I woke up!

THE MEGAPHONE MAN ON THE BOSTON FERRY

SCENE—Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Ferryboat, about to leave the Boston slip. Residents of Winthrop, Revere and Lynn standing on one another's feet. Enter Megaphone Man, who has tied the Rubberneck Wagon to a lamp-post and taken his passengers for an ocean trip. There are eleven sightseers and a little boy.

LITTLE BOY—Oh, see the ocean

Megaphone man elbows his way through the crowd amid growls and snarls, and makes room for his charges at the rail of the ferryboat.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You are now looking upon Boston Harbor

Chorus of Ohs and Ahs. Laugh from residents of Winthrop who cross twice a day.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I am addressing myself to my party and others don't have to listen to my lecture

Murmur of approval from the customers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—This great white steamer upon our right plies between Boston and Bangor. On our left you will see the steamers which run to Nantasket

The spiel is interrupted by the blast of the ferryboat whistle. The bell clangs and the paddle wheels churn the water.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We are off!

MAN FROM WINTHROP (not in the party)—You ARE off!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Boston possesses one of the finest harbors in the world, and is the second city in the United States in point of commerce.

SMALL BOY—Hey, mister, how do they make the boat go?

MOTHER OF SAME—Willie, don't interrupt the gentleman.

MEGAPHONE MAN—That massive steel structure you see on the left is the new Northern Avenue Bridge connecting Boston and Southern Boston. It bridges the Fort Point Channel, which extends nearly two miles into the South End of Boston.

WOMAN FROM WORCESTER—What does it do that for?

MEGAPHONE MAN—We are now well out into the stream. Away to the west you can see the Charlestown Navy Yard, where half a dozen battleships are stationed.

INEBRIATED INDIVIDUAL (who has elbowed his way to the front row)—Is there any bar in Boston Harbor?

MEGAPHONE MAN—None where they keep bottles.

INEBRIATE (plaintively digging him in the ribs)—Don't the man in front of the Bar pay the Bottle bill?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That great five-masted schooner anchored in the stream is coal laden. She comes from Newport News and has a capacity of five thousand tons of coal.

INEBRIATE (observing one of the party appeared incredulous)—That's true. If she came from Milwaukee she'd be a schooner of beer.

MEGAPHONE MAN—That trim, yachtlike vessel with the grim cannon on her forward deck is the Revenue Cutter Gresham. She is the property of the United States Government.

MAN FROM TOLEDO, OHIO—Why do they call her a cutter?

Megaphone Man looks embarrassed, for the question is not provided for in his spiel.

MEGAPHONE MAN—None of your business.

Megaphone Man starts dramatically and tries to make a gesture, but the drunk is holding his arm.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yonder you will observe a noble stretch of piers. They are called Commonwealth Docks and are owned by the State for the benefit of railroads. The fish trade is going to locate the new T Wharf there.

THE INEBRIATE—Say, mister, where did they throw tea overboard?

MEGAPHONE MAN—We are now approaching the East Boston shore. East Boston is an island and once was a farm belonging to a man named Noddle. Hence it is sometimes called—

VOICE FROM THE REAR—Noodle Soup.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Noddle Island. It has a population of 50,000 and contains many docks, shipyards and manufactories. The Cunard and Leyland Lines have sailings from these docks we are approaching That big steamer you see directly ahead is the Cunard Liner Ivernia. Why, how do you do, Mr. Dasey

Portly gentleman with sandy sideburns bows gravely to the Megaphone Man

MEGAPHONE MAN (in a stage whisper)—That, ladies and gentlemen, is Charles V. Dasey, one of the best-known steamship agents in the United States, on his way to his Summer home in Winthrop.

MEGAPHONE MAN—On our right is Simpson's dry-dock, where sailing vessels and small steamships are repaired. It is a very old established and historic enterprise.

MOTHER OF SMALL BOY (screams loudly)—My child, my boy

Water gives a loud splash. Small boy has fallen over the rail. Scene of mad confusion.

Megaphone man throws his megaphone at the boy's head, seen bobbing in the water, thinking it is a life preserver. Five hundred people shout directions Pilot stops the engines and crew prepare to lower a boat. Suddenly the crowd parts and a short, thickset man poises on the rail. He dives.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Saved! Ladies and gentlemen. That was Pete McNally the famous life saver. He has saved three hundred persons from drowning and he will save the child

The boat is lowered. McNally is treading water, holding the boy with one hand while he lights a cigar with the other. Both are taken from the water, and the passengers cheer enthusiastically. They rush forward to grip the rescuer's hand.

McNALLY—A mere trifle, ladies and gentlemen. Nothing at all. But it reminds me of a little incident that happened when I was with Ringlings' Circus. You see—

"Toot-toot," goes the ferry whistle. Clang goes the chain and tramp, tramp go the passengers up the gangway in a mad rush for seats in the train

The Megaphone Man and the Life Saver shake hands. Mother clasps her dripping darling to he[illegible] t and all ends happily.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THAT THE CHILDREN SAY

A LITTLE boy, who was attentively listening to his diseases, such as measles, scarlet fever, and so forth, which he had contracted while at school, interrupted her by saying

"I would have caught appendicitis, too, but the boy that had it didn't sit near me."

A LITTLE boy went to a grocery store and asked for half a pound of tea.

"Green or black?" asked the grocer

"It doesn't matter which," replied the boy; "It's for a blind woman."

* * *

MOTHER—Alice, it's time for bed now. All the little chickens have gone to bed

Alice—Yes, mamma; and so has the old hen.

LITTLE ALBERT had been going to school for about a week, and one evening his father asked him if he knew what one plus one equalled.

Albert—Yes, it's two.

Father—Now, tell me what one minus one equals.

Albert—I don't know.

Father—Well, if you had one cent and you spent it what would you have left?

Albert—Candy

THE teacher had spent half an hour trying to explain to her class the meaning of the word "vase." The next day, to test the memory of her young pupils, she asked

"John, what do you see on your mantlepiece at home?"

"Pa's feet," promptly replied John

LITTLE JOHNNY, aged five, having accidentally broken a pane of glass in a window, was making the best of his way out of sight. Unfortunately, the proprietor of the place caught up to him, and grabbing him by the ear, exclaimed

"You little imp, you broke that window!"

"Yes sir, I did, but I see you running home to get money to pay for it."

* * *

A MOTHER, accompanied by her small son, applied at the children's desk of the library for a book of stories about George Washington. During the discussion, to which the little lad was most attractive, the mother turning to him, saying:

"Jack, I want you to remember what a wonderful little boy George Washington was. He never told a lie."

Her earnestness implied a recent falling from grace, as regards truthfulness on the part of her offsprings. As the librarian turned to secure the book from the shelves, she heard the youngster say, in a tone of childish wonderment:

"Say, whata was the matter with George Washington -couldn't he talk?"

TWO seven-year-old boys were talking together, and one said

"Jimmy, we have the cutest little baby at our house you ever want to see"

"Where did you buy it?"

"Dr Smith brought it for us."

"Oh, we had ours off him, too."

* * *

TEACHER—What lesson do you learn from the busy bee?

Johnny—Not to get stung

LITTLE ROBBINS, aged three, was taken to church last Sunday morning, for the first time, by her aunt. Before starting out her mother had given her a nickel, telling her to hand it to God when the collection was taken up. When she arrived home after services her mother asked if she had handed in her nickel. She replied:

"Mamma, I held the nickel an awful long time Then the basket was shoved in front of me and, just as I was going to drop the nickel in, I looked up to see what God was like and, say, mamma, who was it but our butcher. I pulled the nickel back quick, because when you told papa the cost of meat for our Sunday dinner he said the butcher was a robber. So I kept the nickel, and I'll save it for God and give it to him next Sunday."

ONE day recently a clergyman was performing a marriage ceremony at the parsonage in the presence of his little son. The boy listened very attentively while his father pronounced the couple husband and wife, then going to mother he said:

"Mamma, when a man marries a woman must he live with her?"

"Yes dear," his mother replied

The boy was thoughtful for a moment, and then said

"Mamma, must papa live with all the women he has married?"

* * *

LITTLE HELEN was at the seaside with her aunt, and in the house where they were staying was a telephone. One day she heard her mother talking from the city, and she was so terrified that she burst into tears at

"Oh, auntie, auntie!" she sobbed. "How shall we ever get mamma out of that little hole?"

FOUR-YEAR-OLD Margaret was asked which she loved the best, mamma or papa. She hesitated, looking from one to the other, all her tender heart in her gray eyes. Finally she said

"I don't want to tell. I might hurt papa's feelings."

A LITTLE girl, observing her mother feeding the baby, said

"Mother, why do you put every spoonful of food to your mouth before giving it to baby?"

"Well, you see," replied the mother, "I would not like to give anything to the baby without tasting it first to make sure it is good."

"But," said the girl, "you never do yet."

ROBERT was kneeling at the bedside saying, Now I lay me down to sleep." When he said the words, "If I should die before I wake," he stopped short and said very earnestly "But not to-night, Lord. I don't want to—I can't."

* * *

I TOOK my little girl to Sunday School and the choir sang, "The Cross of Calvary Crossed I'd Bear." On the way home she said

"Mamma, take me to see the consecrated crossed bear."

I ASKED my little niece Beatrice, a little boy who she loved best, and she said

"Well, auntie," she answered, putting her little hand to her head and thinking a while "Well! I don't know. I haven't seen everybody in this world yet."

WILLA—The lady next door asked me how old I was, mamma.

Mamma—And what did you tell her?

Iwilla—I told her I was growing so fast that I didn't know.

LITTLE BESSIE was enjoying a row on the Sound and her aunt said

"Don't those sunset clouds look as if the end of the world was there?"

"Let's not go any further. I don't want to fall over the edge," said Bessie timidly.

A LITTLE German boy, after partaking of his first plate of ice cream, was asked how he liked it. He replied

"It's fine. It makes Winter in my tummy"

MY friend's little girl was looking out of the window. When her mother noticed she was putting her tongue out at some one, she said

"Gladys, that is a very rude thing to do."

"Oh, it is all right, mamma, it was the doctor going by," said Gladys.

A SUNDAY school teacher was illustrating the lesson to his class. First, he drew a picture of the Gates of Heaven, and then a picture of a very fat man standing outside.

"See, children," said he, "this man is so bloated with sin that he cannot get through the gates."

There was silence for a minute, and then a little boy in the back row spoke up and said, "Try him sideways, teacher."

NIGHT TIME IN BOSTON

By James J. Montague

The Funniest Poet of Modern Times.

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

THIS is the public at six o'clock, in the edge of the gathering gloam,
When the tasks of the day are laid away, and they happily hurry home
Observe the air of content they wear, as, converging from near and far,
They tussle and tug and battle and slug for a seat in a subway car!
And oh! the delight that is theirs at night when, caught in the fond caress
Of a husky guard, they are baled up hard in the midst of the wrong express

THIS is the public at eight o'clock, when, their hurry-up dinner done,
In joyful array on the Tremont Way they follow the bubble, Fun.
See 'em crowd and crush and hustle and rush, as eagerly they prepare
To become possessed of the mental rest that shall drive away dull care!
And ah! the joys of the riot and noise, and the peace no man may measure.
That come with a fight for your honest right to an evening of simple pleasure!

THIS is the public at three o'cloock, when the theatre doors swing to.
Take a midnight glance at the restaurants when the hour still is new.
In the surly scowls and the muttering growls and the shouts to the waiter, "Here,
That duck is mine! Now rush the wine!" you can taste the gladsome cheer!
Oho! the bliss of a scene like this, in spite of the bills to pay!
How it puts the snap and the nerve in a chap for another long, dreary day!

THIS is the public at 3 a. m., when, out of the murky haze
From Revere's lights to Dorchester Heights, they thread their devious ways.
Again the slam of a street car jam, again the jolt and jar
Of the guard's good right if you try to fight for your seat in the surface car.
And oh! how happy it makes you feel to think you've withstood the shock,
And again can start with a bounding heart for your business at seven o'clock!

NEWS AND NOTES OF CATHOLIC CHURCHES AND IRISH ASSOCIATIONS

ANTI-CATHOLIC WORK REVEALED BY LIST

Montreal Stirred by Pamphlet, Purporting to Give Secrets of Grand Orient.

NEW SURPRISE PROMISED.

Masonic Order Not Recognized by the English or American Masons.

MONTREAL, June 4.—One of the biggest sensations Montreal has experienced in years was evoked this week by the publication of a pamphlet purporting to give the secret proceedings as well as the personnel of the membership of a local French-Canadian Masonic lodge, known as the "Loge Emancipation," and affiliated with the Grand Orient of France.

The Grand Orient, as is well known in the United States, is not recognized by English or American Free Masons. It confines its activities in France to opposing Catholicism in politics and to spreading abroad its own ideas of what constitutes liberty of conscience and action.

In the Province of Quebec, where the Catholic Church is more powerful than it is in many parts of France, to belong to such an organization as the Grand Orient is as much as a public man's political and in worth consequently the membership has always been zealously guarded from public observation. Hence the publication of the list of names of prominent men and otherwise, who are said to hold membership in the order has created no end of sensation and scandal and resulted in numerous heartburnings.

Loses Important Position.

At least one well-known citizen has been forced to resign a lucrative and honored position on account of his name appearing on the secret list. He now threatens to bring suit for a large sum against the author and publisher of the pamphlet unless it be made clear beyond question that they hold merely hearsay in the matter.

The author, who is said to be one of the many in whose possession are files alleged to belong to the lodge, is reported at present to be in hiding, and the work he has to do upon it or the lodge in question has been forced upon him by the publication of the book, and by means of speaking to those who have been implicated in the proceedings of the lodge meetings.

New Surprise Promised.

The other story is to the effect that the record keeper of the lodge was waylaid on his way home one night, drugged, and robbed of his keys. It is said that a considerable sum of money was taken from him at the same time, but that this was subsequently returned, the true motive for the robbery was not the object sought by his assailants.

The author of the pamphlet, who is also well known, says he will publish a list, whether either of these explanations is correct he does not say, however, that a small part of his manuscript has been used, and that the next edition of the pamphlet will create an even greater sensation than the first.

MANY AT BANQUET.

More Than 150 Turn Out at Berkeley Hall.

One hundred and sixty personal friends, all members of the Mayo Men's Benevolent Association, gathered at Berkeley Hall to pay tribute to Past President Patrick F. Hastings of that association, and president of the Central Council of Irish County Clubs. An elaborate banquet was given in honor of the guest and couplets of the greeting were sung and a fine address was made by every speaker. A handsome loving cup was presented to the honored guest by the association. Thomas J. Cullen in behalf of the members. The speakers included Past President James J. M. Andrew, John Hastings, Hugh Rafferty, Martin J. Lodge, Joseph Sweeney, Thomas J. Cullen and W. Hanley. Joseph J. Dunn was toastmaster and the committee of arrangements was: P. H. Brogan, chairman; Peter Lodge, secretary; Andrew Greer, James J. M. Andrew, Owen J. Newburn, Martin C. Judge, Peter L. Dolan, John O. Boyle, Thomas J. Cullen, Hugh Peter Hastings, Joseph McNeil, John J. Sweeney, John Hastings, Hugh Rafferty, John Ruddy, Thomas Hastings, Michael J. Needham, Joseph F. Dolan and Thomas O'Malley. The exercises closed with the singing of "God Save Ireland" and "The Mayo Hastings."

Feast of Corpus Christi Is Celebrated at Brockton.

BROCKTON, June 4—The feast of Corpus Christi was another most impressive day celebrated in this city than on Sunday at the Church of the Sacred Heart. The streets surrounding the church were all swept by the men of the parish on Saturday evening and the home of Alphonsus Donovan, Main street, where the procession ended and where benediction of the blessed sacrament was given, was a veritable altar was a mass of flowers and bunting.

High mass was celebrated at the church at noon where the altar was erected just inside the lofty doors in the vestibule here. The celebration took place shortly after the close of the 10:40 mass, which was sung by Rev. J. M. Hayes, pastor of the church.

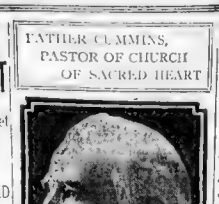
Raymond Champagne, cross bearer, headed the procession, with two acolytes, Louis Miller and Peter Linehan. Then were followed by the girls and boys of the first communion class, the Holy Name Society, the Young Ladies' Sodality, the Holy Name Society, the Society of Les Artisans, the French Guards and the choir. Thousands watched the spectacle.

BIG INITIATION.

Hundred and Thirty-six Enter the Irish Foresters.

BROCKTON, June 4.—A class of one hundred and thirty-six candidates received the degrees of the Irish National Foresters at M. C. O. F. hall last night. The work was performed by the degree staff of twenty-six men from Branch Michael Davitt of Waltham, under the direction of Captain John J. Conley. The initiation was arranged by Branch Judith O'Brien, which presented seventy-five candidates for the three degrees. Branch Daniel O'Connell had thirty-one and Branch Emerald Isle forty-three. Many guests were present, including Grand Chief Ranger Edmund Russell of Somerville, Edward McCauley of Providence, John Rose of Pawtucket and John Hanover of Worcester.

FATHER CUMMINS, PASTOR OF CHURCH OF SACRED HEART



REV. JOHN F. CUMMINS

ROSLINDALE CHURCH IS DEDICATED TO-DAY

Archbishop O'Connell to Officiate, Assisted by Large Number of Clergymen.

ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL will officiate today at the dedication of the Church of the Sacred Heart in Roslindale. The solemn services will begin at 10 o'clock. The Archbishop will be assisted by a large number of priests from the parish building and Boston.

Congratulations are being extended to the Rev. John F. Cummins, the widely popular pastor, and his able assistant, the Rev. John W. H. Forrest, who, with the parishioners, have worked untiringly for the completion of the edifice. The beauty of the external architecture, which is of light brown brick and stone, and the embellishments of the interior, with its imposing mass of Gothic detail, are the equal of any church in the country.

The chaplains attending Archbishop O'Connell at the dedicatory services this morning will be the Rev. William H. Fitzpatrick, pastor of St. Gregory's Church, Milton, and the Rev. James J. Keegan, pastor of St. Charles's Church, Waltham.

Solemn high mass will be celebrated by the Rev. William P. Hevir, S. J., of Boston College. The Rev. Daniel C. Riordan, brother of the Misses of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, will be deacon, and the Rev. John F. Gilligan, of St. Peter's, Cambridge, will be sub-deacon. The Rev. Thomas J. MacCormack, pastor of St. Catherine's Church, Somerville, will officiate as master of the ceremonies. The dedication sermon will be preached by the Rev. Patrick J. Supple, D. D., pastor of St. John's Church, Dale Hill avenue, Roxbury.

This evening there will be solemn vespers in the upper church at which the Rev. John J. Hill will preach.

CATHOLIC NEWS

Rev. [illegible] Hamilton, Mass., is taking a two months' vacation.

Rev. Joseph F. Berleger, S. J., is going to Lawrence for a week's mission.

Rev. Thomas Lyons, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Lowell, is ill at the parochial residence.

The land will be cleared and larger church to take the place of the present one will be built.

The new building will be one story high, with a basement. The plans have been prepared by Maginnis & Walsh, architects.

The Young Ladies' Charitable Association, organized under the auspices of the Catholic Union, Indiana, sang with its demand for the restoration of her parliament, quartered in Dublin, an English prime minister introduced a bill in the House of Commons for the establishment of an Irish parliament and carried the bulk of the Liberal party with him. Then the Irish got all they ever asked for, and more than they ever dreamed they would get. And despite the fact that they have been for years and years in the House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone never ceased to explain that he was not yet ready to say what he would accept or Home Rule. Interviewer—Then what do you ask for a concrete case?

Mr. Redmond—If they mean by a concrete case that we should put our demand into a bill and present it to the House of Lords, I do not think that there would be any good in doing so. I am attempting to a large extent to educate public opinion in England, and I would be the last person to say and make a finished question. But if they do think that a concrete case is necessary, I would be willing to consider it, and I would be willing to consider it, and I would be willing to consider it, and

GOLDEN FLOOD FAILS TO SAVE AMERICAN COUNTESS FROM BANKRUPTCY

Former Miss Le Roy of San Francisco Who Married Count de Tocqueville Faces Ruin.

ALL HER POSSESSIONS GO

Even the Famous Chateau Dating Back to William the Conqueror Is Sold for Debts.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, June 4.—Another American heiress is facing financial ruin. Countess Alexis de Tocqueville, formerly Miss Le Roy of San Francisco.

The Countess and her family owned valuable properties in Paris and the Seine et Oise district, but these are to be sold at once by the young Vicomte de Tocqueville to pay creditors. Her cousin, Miss Le Roy, is a nephew of that famous De Tocqueville who travelled in America, studied its institutions and wrote "Democracy in America." Until recently he was a member of the Chamber of Deputies. The De Tocquevilles are connected with the Malesherbes, the Carnots, Cam Louis and many other great names which loomed up largely during the French revolution—men with whom Admiral John Paul Jones used to hobnob at the Cafe Timon.

Spent Her Money.

After his marriage with Miss Le Roy the Vicomte de Tocqueville spent a great deal of her money in restoring the family chateau in Normandy, called the Chateau de Tourlaville, not far from Cherbourg. Here Alexis de Tocqueville, so well known to Americans, used to live and here the American Countess Le Roy de Tocqueville entertained lavishly, especially her friends from San Francisco, among whom may be mentioned the Scotts, the Le Bretons, the Postleys, Von Schroeders, the Donohues and many others. The Infanta Eulalie spent a month with the Countess every Summer.

Now the old chateau has been sold for debts, and even a second one has taken place, so that it cannot be redeemed for years. Edward Le Breton of San Francisco, who looked after the Countess's American interests, is making a little pile of gold to the Normandy estate, but the supply was stopped and the voice of the auctioneer is heard in the ancestral halls.

Now the Countess lives in a flat in Paris.

Walter Pulitzer Sues for $500,000.

Walter Pulitzer, son of the late Albert Pulitzer, who committed suicide in Virginia last year, has commenced suit against the four insurance companies from which his father had purchased annuities. The companies involved are the New York Life, the Rock Island Company, the Mutual Life of America and the Royal of England. One or two other companies have made compromises. The whole amount of money at stake is half a million dollars. Albert Pulitzer purchased annuities at various periods since 1896, when he retired from active journalism. The latest purchase was in 1901 when he paid over $100,000 in yearly or thousand dollars to the New York Life. From this company he had received only three annual payments. This annuity was purchased in Paris though it contract signed in Rome and for some unexplained reason the money was made payable in Amsterdam. The case is, therefore, likely to be tried in Paris or Amsterdam.

Arthur E. Childs of an American law firm in the Avenue de l'Opera, is looking after young Pulitzer's interests. The opposing theory is that Albert Pulitzer was not of sound mind when he bought the annuities and that hence these contracts may be invalid. Twelve secretaries of the insurance companies will give evidence of mental aberration.

Notables Will Testify.

Andrew Carnegie, Percy Belmont George A. Wilson of the Equitable Life, George W. Perkins of the J. Pierpont Morgan Company, Manager MacDonald of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and many other well known men will be called upon to testify. Among the English witnesses will be the Honorable Harry Stewart and the managers of the Carlton and Ritz Hotels.

Presenting half a million dollars to the various insurance companies and thereby disinheriting his son and getting little or nothing in return will form a strong presumption in the evidence of insanity for the French courts; besides the French law does not permit a father to disinherit his children.

NOTABLES AT BRIDAL.

Carter-Acheson Nuptials to Be Social Event.

LONDON, June 4.—The Carter-Acheson wedding will bring together many English social celebrities, owing to the fact that the Countess of Gosford, the bridegroom's mother, has been long officially connected with the court, as Louise, Duchess of Devonshire, has promised to attend.

Bont now Seeks To Have His Gould Union Made Void

Another Heiress Has Caught the Count's Eye, So Paris Hears, and He Wants Plain Sailing.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, June 4.—Count Boni de Castellane is making a heroic effort to obtain a declaration that his marriage with Anna Gould, now the Duchesse de Sagan, is null and void. The case is before the Rota Congregation, revived by Pope Pius X, and composed of ecclesiastics especially versed in canon law.

This Congregation has also another American case on hand, namely, that of the Princess Hagopian, formerly Miss Mary Jeanings Reid of New Orleans and Washington, and later Mrs. Parkhurst of Maine. The matrimonial cases of these two American princesses is very different. Count Boni says that Anna Gould married him conditionally, not "till death do us part," but until "you make a failure of the marriage." He contends that this was not a legal contract, that the mental reservation in her mind made real consent impossible, and as matrimony is a contract as well as a sacrament, mental and moral consent are both necessary.

Reading between the lines it is not hard to understand that Count Boni's eagerness to prove his marriage with Anna Gould null and void means that the young Count contemplates another rich marriage, and according to the law laid down by the Church he will be free to do so should he succeed in proving that he was never married at all.

Should Boni succeed in getting the Vatican to decide in his favor, then the Prince and Princess de Sagan will have no further difficulty in obtaining the Pope's sanction to their marriage, which up to this time they have sought in vain.

MARY GARDEN, PARIS.

That Will Be Prima Donna's Home Address.

PARIS, June 4.—Mary Garden announces that she has definitely decided to settle in Paris for the rest of her life. She says she will not return to America and will practically retire from the operatic stage after this Summer. She thinks that life was not given to be spent in work up to the day we die. She has worked hard and considers she is entitled to spend the best years of youth enjoying the world. She will reside with her mother in her charming Paris home in the Avenue Montaigne. She states emphatically that there is no reason for her retirement beyond the belief that one should not wait until old age has destroyed all the zest of life before we take a rest from its labors.

WRITER HONORED IN LIFE.

Kalman Mikszath Presented with Three Estates.

VIENNA, June 4.—Kalman Mikszath, the famous Hungarian novelist, has gained from the nation a handsome and appreciative token of appreciation. To mark his fiftieth birthday, he has been presented with three estates, worth $27,000, so that in his old age he will not be dependent on the product of his pen for subsistence.

The President Roosevelt, during his visit to Buda-Pesth, met Mikszath, and in a long interview told him that his works were widely read in America. Mr. Roosevelt added that the last book he read before leaving home was "St. Peters Umbrella," which has been translated into English.

BOOKSHOPS IN AUTOS.

Cars, with Chauffeur, Salesman and Porter.

LONDON, June 4.—Travelling bookshops are a new development in the literary world. Automobiles stocked with the new publications are to scour the country districts where bookshops are few and far between. The cars, which are specially constructed for rapid conversion into shops, will number three, and cost about $5,000 each.

A chauffeur, a salesman and a porter will travel with each car, and the peripatetic bookstores will be sent from London in northeast, northwest and west directions respectively.

"BANDIT CHIEF," 13, IS HELD

Boys' Band Have 123 Robberies and One Murder.

VIENNA, June 4.—A "bandit chief" aged thirteen years, is languishing in a Hungarian reformatory, serving a ten-year sentence. With his band of ten young desperadoes he was captured by the police at Sopron, after a career of pillage and rapine which lasted three months.

These lads and boys, some of whom were children of eight, had their lair in a large cave, and had 123 robberies and one murder laid to their charge. A reward of $28,000 was discovered in the cave. Before he was captured the young chieftain shot a policeman, seriously wounding him.

Miss Norton to Wed.

PARIS, June 4.—Miss Mabel Frances Norton, the charming American girl who is to marry Captain Harry Egerton Dickinson of the Egyptian survey department at Cairo, will have a quiet wedding in Paris some time in June or July. Mr. Dickinson, who belongs to the Horse Guards, a crack regiment, met Miss Norton in Cairo last Winter.

$35,000 IS RAISED IN IRELAND FOR ITS PARTY FUND

All Classes Contribute Generously, Establishing a Record for the Old Country.

DOUBLES SUM FOR 1909-10

League in Great Britain Votes to Stand by Nation and Destroy New Factionism.

Special Cable to Boston American.

DUBLIN, June 4.—The delight which the initial success of Irish self-government is bringing to the people of Ireland is finding practical expression in the generous subscriptions which are being received by the United Irish League for the purpose of paying off the debt of the party. Buoyed by the well-grounded hopefulness of the hour, many, perhaps, better conveyed to the American mind by the graphic agency of national sacrifice as it is expressed in pounds shillings and pence than by the rather vague volume of mere verbal description.

Every individual of intelligence who takes any interest in political movements, knows that no political movement on earth can be kept going without money. This of course, is the veriest of truisms. The Irish national movement, like all more means on the face of the earth, cannot be run without money—the sinews of war—any more than a trout can swim in the dried up bed of a diverted brook.

No need to tell the people of Ireland where the bulk of the money came from which helped Ireland's leaders to wage the magnificent struggle of the last thirty years. Any child in Ireland old enough to go to school will tell you in a second that it was the weight of the money sent by generous friends from distant Australia and from America and Canada which broke the back of Dublin Castle rule in Ireland.

America's Great Aid.

The people of Ireland, robbed as they were by the worst system of alien landlordism the world has ever seen, could not, unaided, have financed the thirty years' war, which is at last nearing an honorable and triumphant end.

But they did their share and did it with a splendor of national fervor which has excited the admiration of the world.

Not once, but many times since Parnell and Davitt unfurled the banner of the Land League, did the spirit of the people at home sink low as some crisis came to make the sky dark and the prospect gloomy, to spread among the people the hopelessness of despair.

It was then that the splendid messages of good cheer from Mr. Fitzpatrick of Boston, cabling another instalment of the word of hope which fired anew the people's spirit and led to new resolution to keep the fight going and the flag flying at the top of the pole, for those brave Fitzpatrick cables shall yet be written it will make one of the most touching chapters of Ireland's story of the exiled children of the Gael.

So much for the raised aid from over the seas in the days of despair. In the brighter days that have come the people of the old land are digging deep into their own little domestic treasuries, and with a pride that is good to see are paying the debt of the old land are digging deep into their own little domestic treasuries, and with a pride that is good to see are paying the people

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

NATHANIEL DUNCAN, the pampered son of a rich father, is thrown on his own resources when a financial crash wipes out the family fortune and causes his father's death. He tries one job after another, only to fail, and finally becomes an outcast on the park benches, where he is discovered by his old college chum, Henry [illegible]. Duncan, who had not seen him for years, [illegible] and invites him to accompany him to his country home. There he meets Miss Dorothy Bigelow, daughter of the powerful Wall Street boss of [illegible] Bartlett & Co., secures position at the station for Duncan in the money district, but it is the same old story. Duncan can't make a plan. He agrees to stake Duncan to $5.00, fits him out with a wardrobe and send him into some small town, removed from the influence of large cities, to become a fortune hunter and seek an heiress.

"You can be worth a million dollars inside of a year," he says, "if you play the game accord ng to the rules I will lay down."

Duncan agrees, and Kellogg then introduces him and backs him in the new project.

* * * * *

Homer Littlejohn, editor of the Radville Citizen, a small interior town of Pennsylvania, the historian of the community, who has been abroad "and seen New York," and is therefore looked up to with respect by the townspeople, takes up a wager made by W. J. Bigelow, proprietor of the Bigelow House, that "nothing ever does happen, can happen or will happen" in Radville.

W. J. bets "the best five-cent clear Havana cigar in the Bigelow House cellar" that "on the following day, June 21, is chosen as a test, Homer Littlejohn sets it all down to do duty, and, as events proceed, Will Bigelow was to be sadly humbled."

Homer Littlejohn prepares a list of happenings—long days first on the main street—a week on the back country roads, the [illegible] town common suit and the debut of Lulu Bett by Watty, the tailor at an exciting game of checkers. He is bent to win Mr. Bigelow's glove in the first [illegible] with this list of events and claim his cigar when he hears the great news that has shaken the town of its centre.

A mysterious stranger dressed as if he had spent his life amid the luxury of large cities, has quietly, and unheralded, come to town and amazed none other than Will Bigelow by asking for a room and announcing his intention of making Radville his future home.

The mysterious stranger registers as "Nathaniel Duncan N Y."

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.
By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE.

MAIN STREET was pretty well crowded for that hour. I remember how the [illegible] and most of the townsfolk were grouped together on the corners, [illegible] the shops discussing something rather excitedly. I paid no particular attention, realizing that between Caesar, Pete Willing, Roland Burnette's suit and the checker game they had enough to talk about. So it wasn't until I walked into the Bigelow House office that I either heard or saw anything of The Mysterious Stranger.

Will Bigelow was in his usual place behind the desk when I looked. I thought rather disgruntled. His reply to my "Howdy, W.," so added somewhat snappish. But he got out of his chair and moved round the end of the desk just as the young man came out of the dining room door. Then Will pulled up, and I realized that he was calling my attention to the stranger.

So far as I could see he seemed an ordinary, every-day, good-looking, good-natured young man, whose appearance and disposition had been insulted by the fool recently set before him. He was, I distinctly out upon the porch and sat down there, with his hands on his knees looking up and down Centre street, not long being shadowed into the warm [illegible] dusk, beneath its dooryard [illegible].

We've always thought it a pretty attractive street, and that night it seemed especially lively with its [illegible] and boys strolling up and down, and the groups of grown folks on the corners, and Roland Burnette's Summer suit conspicuous through Sothern and Lea's auto glass windows; and I supposed the young man was admiring it all. But now I know him better.

On Main Street, Radville.

He felt just the same about Main street corner of Centre Radville, as I should have about Broadway and 59th street, New York, if you had set me down [illegible] and told me I'd got to get accustomed to the idea that I must live there. He was having deep room in his heart at Lord! with the [illegible] reception.

Will grasped my arm, without saying anything, and pulled me into the bar.

Hello, I said as he went behind and opened the cigar case, "what's up?"

He long cut two locks of the finest five-centers in town and placed them before me. "There's up," he said, "You win, Have one."

It slugged me to lose [illegible] that way. I had set looking [illegible] long and diverting diagnosis. I guess you've heard everything worth [illegible] about to-day's story. I said disappointed as I lit one of the best cigars I [illegible] of the cigars.

"No, I haven't," he said. "I didn't [illegible] to hear anything. What turned you [illegible] struck took place right here in this office. [illegible] Here" he said, striking a match for me.

I had been trying to put the cigar away so that I might dispose of it without hurting Will's feelings, for he had me so [illegible] matic clipper and then into my mouth. "What do you mean?" I asked, puffing.

"Come along outside," said Will, and we went out on the porch just in time to see Mr. Duncan going warily upstairs to his room. "I mean," said Will, "him. And then he told me all about it.

Will Wants to Get Even

But right [illegible] that don't happen every day," he went on defensively. "I'll get [illegible] another cigar to-morrow.

No, you won't, I said differently and firmly dropped the infamous thing over the railing.

I can never succeed in my little attempts at deception even in self-defense. In a [illegible] candor I always [illegible] that [illegible] would have gone undetected [illegible] for my [illegible].

Of course Bigelow's setter, Pompey, [illegible] to see asleep right under the spot where I dropped the cigar, and each of [illegible] the burning end had to cause instantaneous connection with his nerve centres via his [illegible] agony and subsequently good course in [illegible].

Investigation naturally disclosed [illegible] Radville wasn't the [illegible] appointed [illegible].

On the other hand, no one else in Radville was [illegible] the cigar.

CHAPTER V.
Margaret's Daughter.

DISCOMFORT roused Duncan from [illegible] rest at an early hour the morning following his arrival in Radville. I must confess that the [illegible] Bigelow House [illegible] not ideal [illegible] In fact I found [illegible] [illegible] Duncan might [illegible] he has slept [illegible] some of those [illegible] [illegible] fashion.

I am glad he has said [illegible] for [illegible] to [illegible] what [illegible] of me [illegible] I [illegible] [illegible] of Miss Carter's second [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to a heartless [illegible] [illegible] between Bigelow [illegible] [illegible] Radville Inn.

Duncan arose and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] watch with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"Open Door" and "Syndicate" Each Doing Its Utmost With Ink and Allegations, While Theatre-Goers Pay the Freight and Strive to Glean Amusement With No Rebate and Only Sad Experience.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE saddest thing about a theatrical war is the foolish, unhappy part played in it by the theatre-going public. The public gathers no material benefits—it is merely fed on very sour fruit while the warring factions attempt to mismaugrain each other out of existence.

That is exactly what is going on to-day between the so-called Syndicate and the vigorous lunged adherents of the Open Door, and the public is paying the freight—paying $2 for some glimpses at the drama that ought to be marked down to $1.22. If a theatrical war enlivened the dimensions of a rare war there would be some fun sitting on the side lines at cut prices and viewing the slaughter, but there is nothing like that, nothing like it at all. The man on the side lines is the victim.

All of which is to remind you that the Syndicate and the Open Door are not at present on exceedingly friendly terms, and unless the official ink wells run dry and the mimeograph develops paralysis the acute stage in the hostilities will soon be reached. The public will doubtless continue in the role of the goat, absorbing what it can of much mediocre amusement at regular rates, with no rebates.

Fortunately for playgoers in the large cities, the warfare is not conducted on the main thoroughfare, but on the side streets—in one, two and three night sections. What it means to the inhabitants of Kokoma, Duluth and Fargo is hard to determine, but it might result on a moving picture diet for those cities.

AND THE WAR GOES ON.

Word comes from New York that the Producing Managers' Association will have no dealings with the National Association of Theatre Owners, the latter going firmly on record for the Open Door, an invention of Lee Shubert and other independent managers. According to the Shuberts, the Open Door is the salvation of the theatrical business—it makes room for everybody everywhere. If you believe the Syndicate's literary department, the Open Door is a delusion and a snare, and a wicked connivance to alienate the affections of its one-night stand territory. The Syndicate will have none of it, which is why it coldly turns its back upon the National Association of Theatre Owners whose members responded to the blithe invitation of the Shuberts to come in out of the wet and warm their feet. And the public—that dear, simple, money-spending group of citizens—is doubtless wondering what it is all about. In plain words, it is merely a contest to see who shall have the privilege of saying when and where theatrical attractions may play. The National Association of Theatre Owners in declaring for the Open Door announced that it will look after its own bookings. Like anything it wanted on its own terms. The answer of the Producing Managers' Association (the Syndicate) was blunt and brief, and in effect that none of its attractions would be booked except through the office of Klaw & Erlanger.

In the meantime the syndicate is leaning hard on the pub of securing new theatres for its attractions and the Shuberts and their associates are pumping more oil into the hinges of the open door to keep out the rust.

And it might be added that the fight is contributing its share toward the prosperity of the typewriter and mimeograph industry.

'Tis the season of revivals and we will not escape, although New York has led the way with Charles Frohman's all-star production of "Caste," the Brady-Shubert production of "Jim the Penman" and the Shubert production of "The Mikado," now at the Casino Theatre. After reading all the nice things in newspapers about the New York revivals, we can now tell for ourselves whether there is really any good reason to get excited over them. Miss Charlotte Hunt will give "Caste" the benefit of her experience and scenery at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow and will continue at it for one week. Her advance announcements are full of promise.

"THE RIVALS" AT THE CASTLE SQUARE.

John Craig is not permitting the revival season to get by without speaking, and you will have "The Rivals" at the Castle Square Theatre to-morrow. This will be the last week but one of Mr. Craig's season, and to lift things out of the ordinary for this production of "The Rivals" he has engaged Howell Hansel and Mary Ryan.

While on the subject of revivals, it may be recalled that for at least two hours early in the week we were threatened with the all-star cast of "Jim the Penman." The sudden announcement that Wilton Lackaye, John Mason and all the rest of 'em would drop in at the Shubert this week seemed too good to be true, and the fatal word that the piece would not come was disappointing, but not surprising. We are getting accustomed to these flights of fancy that grow out of too much theatrical gossip. After sighing.

As a matter of fact, the failure of "Jim the Penman" to visit Boston at this time is placed squarely up to Mr. Lackaye and Mr. Mason. Oh, you poor actors. It seems that before arrangements were made for sending the production to Boston both Mr. Lackaye and Mr. Mason booked passage to Europe, and when it was suggested to them that it would be nicer for them to forego the delights of an ocean voyage and play "Jim the Penman" in Boston they indignantly refused to consider such a proposal. And that, according to the Shuberts, is what happened to "Jim the Penman."

And now comes the suspicion that we will not listen to the all-star revival of "The Mikado," which was promised us long enough to get into the papers and was then withdrawn. "The Mikado" has them all by the ears in New York, and it looks like a long run of this Gilbert and Sullivan piece. Even the usually sour-toned New York critics have found hope for the future in "The Mikado."

HAVE OUR OWN "MIKADO."

But we'll never miss "The Mikado," for we are making our own production of it at the Opera House to-morrow, and the Summer season of opera at the Castle Square Theatre will open with the merry opera on June 20.

A change in the cast of "The Girl in the Taxi" at the Tremont Theatre has brought into the company Miss Malvina V. Longfellow, whose work gives emphatic denial to the assertion that an artist's model may not aspire to artistic triumphs outside of the studio. For several years Miss Longfellow was one of the most popular models of the big artists of both this country and England, and if you have ever spent a profitable hour studying the mural decorations in the Public Library, you have seen paintings for which Miss Longfellow posed.

An ambition to be an actress led Miss Longfellow away from that section of art represented by canvas and paint, and one of her early occupations on the stage was mingling with the mob of Spanish ladies in Belasco's "The Rose of the Rancho."

Miss Longfellow is distinctly of the Spanish type, and for that reason was chosen as understudy to Miss Francis Starr. The position did not yield many encouraging opportunities, and for a whole season she played only a thinking role. But one day (it was here in Boston, too) Miss Starr was taken suddenly ill and Miss Longfellow was thrust into the leading role without a moment's notice. She made good and the way was opened for her to better things.

THEN SHE GOT HER CHANCE.

She was given an important role in "The Great John Ganton," and when Mme. Olly began her four early this season Miss Longfellow was selected as the leading woman. In engaging Miss Longfellow for "The Girl in the Taxi" A. H. Woods added to his payroll one of the handsomest young women in the profession. He also found a woman with ambition.

The dramatic sensation of the week is promised at Keith's Theatre, where Mme. Chung and a company of Chinese actor folk will ask for approval in "The Dragon's Wrath," the spectacular effects of which are expected to satisfy the eye. The oriental dances in this act were arranged by Lole Fuller, and the entire production has been planned with such elaborate detail that Mr. Keith hopes to create a vogue in the Chinese drama.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Keith's Theatre.

Lole Fuller, the most famous dancer in the world, and the originator of practically all the beautiful light and color effects used on the stage to-day, will be the big drawing card next week the most novel and in many respects the most previous production of the kind ever shown in vaudeville or on the legitimate stage. It is called "The Dragons of Wrath," and will serve to introduce for the first time to the American public Madam Chung, one of the greatest of Chinese actresses from the Imperial Theatre in Pekin, with a company of Chinese and European artists and dancers. "The Dragons of Wrath" will be nothing less than a big Chinese fete, woven into a love story and most exciting drama in which Madam Chung will have the leading part, and is assisted by her own company. The fete will be of the most imposing nature, and will include a large assembly of beautiful dances with myriad colored lights by European girls; a most imposing March of the Lanterns; mammoth lanterns with changing lights; the Ribbon Serpent, and the Chinese bamboo dance with the human bells which is bound to make the same sensation here as it did in Europe.

This production will be surrounded by a splendid vaudeville bill, including Melville and Higgins, Ben Welch, the Arlingtons, Van Hoven, the Fermate Brothers and others.

Majestic Theatre.

In tracing the history of the English drama the first play which distinctly marks the trend to the modern school of the present day is T. W. Robertson's "Caste," which Miss Charlotte Hunt and her stock company will present at the Majestic The-atre on Monday evening next. The "Caste" tells a story which has its application no less forcible for the society of our present era as that of half a century ago. It is a tale which wins the sympathy of the audience, and yet it is so permeated with the comedy spirit that there is much laughter for contrast. It is a play which Miss Hunt and her company should be able to interpret in splendid fashion.

The Robertson play was one which had its place in the repertory of most companies during the past fifty years, and Miss Hunt and her company will have a high standard to live up to in playing the piece. The cast will include Miss Hunt in the part of Esther Eccles, Mr. Percy Haswell as George D'Alroy, Miss Isadore Rush as Polly Eccles, Mr. Bliss as Sam Gerridge, Miss Hale as the Marquise, Mr. Denton as Captain Hawtree and Mr. Brooks as Old Eccles.

Park Theatre.

William Hodge's Hoosier mannerisms, assumed for "The Man From Home," assembled for the Park Theatre audiences that everyone seems to think that he is actually playing himself, and that is the reason why there is so much surprise when he doffs the cane and rakes his auburn locks off the eyes and appears in evening dress. Mr. Hodge himself and company ranged for a Summer vacation along the South Shore, Scituate and Cohasset, very well together. Mr. Hodge's delight-ful impersonation of Daniel Voorhees Pike has been the first of the dramatic season. The twenty-third week begins at the Park to-morrow.

American Music Hall.

Summer vaudeville at Summer prices seems to have struck a responsive chord at the American Music Hall, if the crowds at every performance last week is any criterion. The policy will be continued for the coming week, another big bill of ten new acts presented for Manager Pincle, in addition to furnishing unlimited fun, will press a remarkable scientific exposition to the power of rolled over belly. It is a hypnotic act in which a score of subjects are made to do wonderful as well as ridiculous things. Another big laughing hit will be the Klondike Trio, presenting a comedy skit called "Ella Colored Hills." Miss May MacDonald will offer a program of high class singing while the Parson Sisters will offer more singing with costume changes. White's Five Harmonists are always greeted when-ever the jovial quintet of comedy musicians appear, and the balance of the bill will include several attractive novelties.

Tremont Theatre.

There have been few livelier suppers upon the Boston stage than the one in "The Girl in the Taxi," which is now in its fourth week at the Tremont Theatre. There is the auctioneer as assayed uproariously, and Carter de Haven, who plays the young man taking the auctioneer's bid real girl out to supper, borrows ten dollars from each conspicuous guest. With the many amusing situations in "The Girl in the Taxi," there is little wonder that the farce is received with almost continuous laughter.

Waldron's Casino.

An excellent bill has been prepared for this week at Waldron's Casino. It will include two new and funny burlesques by Frank Finney and T. F. Thomas, entitled "Bill Posters" and "Who Was the Baby?" Both these pieces will be found full of fun and excellent musical numbers. They will be staged with special settings and gorgeous costumes. The company will be well cared for by Frank Finney, T. F. Thomas, George Brennan, Charles Madison, Frank Rose, Harry Rockaby and Alfred Bonner. Jimmie Berk-Clata Hackett, Miss Clifford, Anna Meeg, Cathie Burns, Carrie Burry and Nellie Lawler will have the leading feminine roles and will lend the fashions and grace to the musical numbers. There will be a complete change in the vaudeville program.

Globe Theatre.

Amelia Albion Animal Actors, a troupe of trained domestic pets, will head the vaudeville season of the Globe program for the coming week. Other pleasing features will include the Boston Duo, an excellent singing team; Bingham and Gable, in an instrumental novelty; Will Herbert, versatile comedian; Jack O'Donnell and Minnie Maxwell.

The pictures will be interesting. The dramatic Western story, "Way Out West," is said to be one of the best films of the year.

Castle Square Theatre.

The last week but one of the John Craig Stock company season at the Castle Square will be a memorable one. "The Rivals," that most famous of English comedies, the work of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, master of wit and humor in playwriting century, will be given a production with the most notable stock cast ever assembled. Of the play itself nothing need be said. It has stood the test of time through many changing fashions, and is as bright and as fresh as it ever was. For the revival of "The Rivals," Mr. Craig has made a special engagement of Howell Hansel for one week only. Mr. Hansel will appear in the richly humorous Irish role of Sir Lucius O'Trigger, and he will be warmly welcomed back to the Castle Square stage after an absence of several seasons. Miss Mary Ryan, who has appeared but rarely at the Castle Square this season in the annual benefit tendered by the management to the employes, and Sally Crowthorne, who has the whole in charge has arranged an exquisite bill, and this will be the last opportunity of seeing an Old Howard show this season.

Scenic Temple.

Weather conditions do not appear to have any perceptible effect upon business at the Scenic Temple. During the coming week several novelties will be presented for the first time on any stage in Boston and there is no question but that it will be both entertaining and instructive.

Columbia Theatre.

For the coming week the Columbia Theatre will offer a fine program of moving pictures and high-class vaudeville. The views are of many parts and clearness. Among the popular songs [illegible] by Mar-

Other features will include Musical Holbrook, Musical Melton, a minute Auto Polo, a [illegible] and the Goddess of the Sea, a novel illusion.

The theatre shows will have a variety of attractions.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Manager Somerby of the Bowdoin Square Theatre will provide a full bill of program, consisting of ten big vaudeville specialties and a gigantic moving picture display. The feature of the picture display will be the showing "King Edward's Funeral Procession," one of the most spectacular ever taken by the picture machine. The performance at the Bowdoin is continuous from 1 to 10.

Howard Athenaeum.

To-morrow at 1 o'clock the curtain will rise at the Howard on a big vaudeville entertainment, topped with a burlesque show given by the Pat White Company. The occasion is the annual benefit tendered by the management to the employes, and Sally Crowthorne, who has the whole in charge has arranged an exquisite bill, and this will be the last opportunity of seeing an Old Howard show this season.

Scenic Temple.

Weather conditions do not appear to have any perceptible effect upon business at the Scenic Temple. During the coming week several novelties will be presented for the first time on any stage in Boston and there is no question but that it will be both entertaining and instructive.

Columbia Theatre.

For the coming week the Columbia Theatre will offer a fine program of moving pictures and high-class vaudeville. The views are of many parts and clearness. Among the popular songs by Maring and dancing act called "College Boys," by Farrell and Shepard.

Shubert Theatre.

The engagement of Joseph E. Howard in the jolly musical comedy, "The Goddess of Liberty," with Stella Tracey in the leading comedienne role, ended with yesterday's performances at the Shubert Theatre.

Sunday Concerts.

Sunday night concerts are announced at the Castle Square, Hub, Majestic, Globe, Keith's, Waldron's Casino and Bowdoin Square theatres, and at the Howard Athenaeum and the American Music Hall. Attractive programs have been arranged.

Fishing Trips.

The steamer King Philip has handled large traffic in its daily trip to the fishing grounds and it is fair to say that the ocean trips in search of the finny tribe have furnished those who want a real ocean voyage combined into the length of a day. Free chowder is served to the passengers on the boat, and a prize is offered for the largest fish caught during the season.

Hub Theatre.

Beginning with to-night's performances at the Hub Theatre the Sunday prices will rule the same as during the week, 10 cents. The concert to-night promises to be unusually attractive. New vaudeville, new moving pictures and illustrated songs are scheduled. Next week's soloists, Miss Edna Leader and Miss Sadie Parry, both [illegible] the ladies orchestra will compete the bill.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram."

The second season of the John Craig Stock Company at the Castle Square Theatre ends during the week of June 13 with a series of performances of the merry farce, "Mrs. Temple's Telegram." This play has aroused much attention in London and New York, and it will bring the season at the Castle Square to a lively close. After a short vacation the John Craig Stock Company will return to the Castle Square for the third season about the first of September.

Norumbega Park.

The season never started off at Norumbega Park with so many encouraging signs for remarkable success as this one. The immense popularity of the magnificent new open air theatre is largely responsible for this. It has been found to be capable both afternoon and evening since the opening of the season.

Patrons have not always yet availed their privilege of the splendid beauties of the new outdoor playhouse. It was a revelation to everyone on Decoration Day that with the threatening weather and occasional sprinkles they were completely protected and as comfortable as if wholly down in a city theatre.

The vaudeville program this week includes such strong headliners as the Reuters Rhectic, from Germany; the American Comedy Singing Four, and the Farrell-Taylor Trio.

GLAD JUNE IS CUPID'S GALA TIME; BRIDES AT THE HELM OF SOCIETY

All Smart Set Is Gowned and Eager, the Bridals That Have Passed Serving Only to Increase the Eagerness for Wedding Functions That Are Planned to Follow in the Near Future.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

JUNE, the merry, rosy, festive month of June, garlanded with the choicest season's inimitable foliage and o'ercrowded with an unusually large host of brides and their attendant affairs, is here at last, and procession after procession of happy young people are wending the rose-strewn path afterward.

"Heaven tries the earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.
Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur or see it glisten."

Everything—as it just for the bride—is as lovely as "a red, red rose that's newly sprung in June" and all melodies are sweetly played in tune. Nature made the month for brides and wedding trips, and, of course, when there is a wedding on the conscience of society all mortals conspire to add glory to the occasion, for, to change the version a trifle, the sages and the sagers have decreed that "the heart is so full that a drop overfills it and we are happy now because the bride wills it."

Leading the long procession on the first day of the month came the Vincent Club devotee, Barbara Sheafe, a remarkably pretty blonde—tall, slender and graceful—and a charming picture she made, too, in her soft satin bridal gown and graceful flowing veil and the customary orange blossoms and valley lilies!

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sheafe of Hammond street, Brookline, and the bridegroom, Allan McKissock, is the son of William McKissock of Chestnut Hill. The bride's father is president of the Longwood Cricket Club.

Following this season's custom of having very few bridal attendants, she dispensed with bridesmaids and was attended only by her sister, pretty Mary Hale Sheafe, as her maid of honor. She wore Chantecler muslin over white satin and a white picture hat with Chantecler roses. Her bouquet was of white sweet peas.

ATTENDANT SOON TO BE BRIDEGROOM.

Mr. McKissock was attended by Paul Burdett, who will himself be a bridegroom in the near future, and the list of ushers included William Sheafe, Jr., C. Desmond Wadsworth, Leonard Macomber and Donald Cutler of Boston, Sheafe Walker of Concord, N. H., and Robert H. Hutchinson of Philadelphia.

The wedding, which was a rather quiet affair for such a popular bride, took place in St. Lawrence's Church, Chestnut Hill, and was attended chiefly by relatives of the two families. After the church ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast were given at the home of the bride's parents on Hammond street. Among the wedding guests were the following:

Mr. and Mrs. William Sheafe, Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Hinckley, William McKissock, Miss McKissock, Mrs. Charles O. Thompson, Miss Dorothy Thompson, Miss M. S. Hillman, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Smallwood, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Allan and H. L. Lewis.

Wednesday was also the wedding day of pretty Marion Hay, daughter of Clarence Hilery Hay of Brookline, and Arthur Leonard Hitchcock, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hitchcock, also of Brookline. The bride is a graduate of Radcliffe College and is popular in Cambridge and Brookline smart circles. She is remarkably talented and highly cultured, having marked ability both as an artist in portrait and a singer.

As the bride is an mourning for her father, the wedding was a very quiet affair and took place at the home of the bridegroom's parents, No. 41 Williams street, Brookline. On their return from an extended wedding trip the young couple will establish their new home home on Garrison road, in Brookline.

MISS HIGGINSON TO BE BRIDE.

Of course, the most important mid-month wedding is that of charming Barbara Higginson to the popular young clubman, Barrett Wendell, the younger. It will be a country home wedding and will take place at the Summer home of the bride's father, Francis Lee Higginson of Beacon street, at Pride's Crossing, on Saturday, June 18.

The bride-elect is a member of the Vincent Club, and for several years was one of the premiere dansseuses of its annual shows, making an unusual success in all her roles. She was presented with her sister, Miss Juliet Higginson, Miss Minna Layman and Miss Anne Lindsay, who are among her most intimate friends. She is one of the favorite granddaughters of Major and Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, and she counts among her intimates our wealthiest society bachelor-maid, Miss Amy Lowell, with whom she has travelled abroad. She is tall and fair and gracious in manner and bearing. Her pet charity is the Hawthorne Club, of which she is an officer.

With such a large following of notable friends and with hosts of rich relatives, her wedding bids fair to be one of the most important of the whole season. The chief attendants will, of course, be her sister, Miss Juliet Higginson, as maid of honor, and J. A. Lowell Blake of Harvard as the best man.

Mr. Wendell is a son of Professor Barrett Wendell of Harvard and Mrs. Wendell (Edith Greenough). He has made his home with his Harvard classmate, J. A. Lowell Blake, both before the latter's marriage and since Mrs. Blake's death. His sisters are Mrs. Geoffrey Wheelock and Miss Edith Wendell, and his brother is William G. Wendell, a Harvard graduate of the class of 1906 and a popular host at the class day festivities last June.

Of course, none of the June weddings is being more fully discussed these days than the coming nuptials of that vivacious young society beauty, Joanna C. Bird, who will become the bride of Louis Agassis Shaw Tuesday, June 14. It will be a country wedding and will be performed at the Bird residence in East Walpole at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

TWO YEARS A SOCIAL BELLE.

Miss Bird is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird (Anna Child), and made her debut some two years ago. Being one of the handsomest girls in town and exceedingly clever, she has run the gamut of popularity and has ushered and danced and danced and ushered at the Vincent Club functions until her name is quite inseparable from that well-known coterie's organization. She is also conspicuous in riding and hunting circles, being of the Norfolk Hunt set.

Mr. Shaw is well connected, being the younger son of Mrs. John S. Curtis (Mary Saltonstall). He is a brother of Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, who married Nansen Mitchell.

The bridal attendants will be a very interesting group in the nature of things and will include John Cutler of Brookline, whose engagement to Miss Emily Fish has recently been announced, as best man; Miss Edith Bird, the bride-elect's sister, and her brothers, Charles S. Bird, Jr., of the Norfolk Hunt Club and of Harvard 1906, and Francis W. Bird, Harvard '04, who makes his home in New York.

The wedding will be performed at 4:30 in the afternoon and will be attended only by the relatives and intimate friends of both families. The reception will be at 5 and will be attended by hundreds of guests. The young couple will go to Bermuda for the remainder of the Summer after returning from a short wedding trip.

One of the most notable engagements of the year which culminates at the altar this month will take place in King's Chapel—the scene of the Scott-Peabody wedding last month—when Henry Richards, the stalwart grandson of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe of Beacon street, takes winsome Julia Coolidge as his bride. Miss Coolidge is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge of Brookline and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge of Beacon street. She made her debut three Winters ago at a large ball given in her honor by her grandparents.

Miss Katherine Putnam, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lowell Putnam of Beacon street has been chosen as the maid of honor, and two debutantes of the year before, Miss Anna Gardiner and Miss Rosamond Bowditch will be bridesmaids. Miss Gardiner is the daughter of Mr and Mrs. H. Gardiner of Beacon street, and Miss Bowditch is the second daughter of Mr and Mrs. Alfred Bowditch, also of Beacon street.

Mr. Richards is the son of Mrs. Henry Richards of Quincy. He is well known here, having come from a Southern trip this year to spend a month with the Curtis Scott and

THERE has been a big influx in Sum mer cottagers at Manchester during the last week. Fully one-half the Summer estates at West Manchester and Long Neck Point, as well as at Magnolia, have now been opened for the season. One of the busiest seasons in the history of the popular summering place is looked for.

The opening of the Kowanicus cup holder last Saturday was the first social event of interest this season. A large number of the cottagers, men and women and young folks, were on hand to help Miss Edith Bremer break the bottle of champagne on the bow of the thirty-foot sloop-rigged yacht as it started to glide down into the water. Mr. and Mrs. Bremer and the Rev. Boardman Mise Phoenix Perkins and Mrs. A. Parker Bremer Mrs. A. Boardman were among those present, and the ring-leaders in the yacht-launching ceremony. The Kowanicus cup holder is the fourth sloop to be launched from the Manchester yacht yards this season. The Kowanicus cup holder is owned by Edward Bremer, Edith Bremer, Jeannette Parker and Phoenix Perkins.

The Point Neck Club will continue to be the centre of fashion along the North Shore this summer. With the exception of but eighteen upon a new life, as the board of managers of which John B. Hall is chief, have decided to keep the club open the year round in future. A number of changes have been made in the 400 mile as the construction of tennis courts, bowling alleys, etc. Fortnightly musical concerts will be a feature of the club season, and a number of dinner dances will be arranged later.

Many of the opposite cottages are beginning to arrive. Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, has leased the Edward Robinson cottage off Bond street, opposite the Essex county club, and is going to arrive in early part of the month. This is his first season at Beverly. President Taft leased it last year, prior to building the Evans cottage at Beverly Farms. Mrs. Robinson, the ex-owner of the cottage, will be at the Brow and cottages during the month of June. She plans to sail for Germany early in July to spend the winter on the Riviera.

Mrs. George D. Howe of Boston arrived at her Essex avenue cottage yesterday for the season. The Howes are among the oldest of the Summer residents at Manchester. Mrs. Howe's mother, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, built in 1875. It has since passed into the hands of the present owner. Mrs. Howe is a sister of Mrs. Louis Prang.

Mrs. James T. Fields arrived at her Bo Sea avenue cottage, Tuesday. Miss Fields, the McMillan estate, has been opened this week. Mr. McMillan is also building for his daughter, but will not be ready for occupancy this season. Mrs. Jos. A. Coit of Boston arrived at her cottage at West Manchester this week.

Harold M. Sill of Philadelphia and Mrs. Walter Alexander of New York, with their respective families, will spend the Summer at Bowditch cottages.

Miss Helen Hooper's cottage at West Manchester has been opened the last week

"LIGHT AS AIR——STRONG AS STEEL"
DEAR MADAM: A STRONG corset must have some weight; but the lighter a corset is, the better—so long as it's DURABLE.
Our new fabric, Nemo "Corduroy Batiste," is almost as light as a zephyr cloth; but it is so STRONG that we GUARANTEE it to outwear any other corset material—even heavy coutil—and to hold its shape to the end.
In other words, it is now possible for the LIGHTEST corset you ever wore to be the STRONGEST and MOST DURABLE as well. Does that interest you?
Nemo "Corduroy Batiste" Corsets are now ready in three fine models:
FOR THE SLENDER—Nemo "Self-Reducing" No. 357, at $3.50; the new Nemo "X-Uspender" Corsets, No. 503, at $5.00.
FOR THE STOUT—"Self-Reducing" No. 525, a beautiful and very stylish model suitable for tall and medium stout figures $5.00.
Also, these famous "Self-Reducing" models in the regular Nemo Batiste:
Nos. 318 and 320—$3.00 Nos. 403 and 405—$4.00
The host of women who have worn these favorite Nemo Batiste Corsets for two years past know that they are UNEQUALED, for summer comfort, by ANY OTHER MAKE. In good stores everywhere. KOPS BROS., Mfrs., NEW YORK.
GUARANTEED TO OUTWEAR ANY OTHER CORSET MATERIAL

SEASON OPENS WEEKS EARLIER AT BAR HARBOR

Cottages of Summer Colony Already Occupied—Seal Harbor Becoming More Popular Each Year With Boston People.

FOR several years Bar Harbor society has been increasingly busy. The Summer colony arrives earlier, to their own great delight and as was so conspicuously true for two years has remained the favored by the most perfect weather ever known in Mt. Desert.

Every season the William Jay Whittemores of New York have taken the first to open a cottage here, arriving regularly on the 1st Friday in May. This year two weeks before this fixed date cottagers summoned to arrive, and when the Sunday on the Criterion found a dozen cottages open and in good. At Seal Harbor, eight miles across the Island, the same is true, and two weeks finds more than a dozen cottages open.

Among the Boston people who are now here for the season are Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] who has just built a handsome cottage on the Crooker hill close again.

In one of the Crooker hills he has [illegible] with poetry in the famous [illegible] Mrs. Austin Peters of Andover and Boston, [illegible] other Bostonians here are Mr. John L. Gardner, the Misses Mead and Mrs. Edward Cabot, who arrived at Mariedon Beach in a cottage.

New Method of Reducing Fat.

A news item from Paris informs us that the American method of acquiring a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat, which is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the fat about a pound a day without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercise or dieting, and never interferes with one's meals, is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these vegetal, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical, because Marmola Prescription Tablets are in accordance with the Rational Prescription can be obtained of any druggist or [illegible] Co., Detroit, Mich., for $1 per case. GENERAL NEWS OF THE LABOR UNIONS

Ladies' Garment Workers Open Annual Convention In Boston To-morrow.

With a membership of 80,000 to-day as against 6,000 of only twelve months ago, the annual convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union will open in Berkeley Hall to-morrow under the most favorable circumstances ever known in the history of that organization. Fully 100 delegates are expected to be present, coming from all parts of the United States and Canada.

There will be at least seven women among the number. Miss Rose Schneiderman, the leader of the New York shirt waist strike, heads the list. Miss Pauline Newman, whose recent visit to Boston resulted in union-made shirt waists being placed on sale by four of the leading department stores, and Miss Mabel Gillpile, local secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, will also attend as delegates.

Chief among the public events in connection with the convention, which is expected to last from three to four days, will be a mass meeting of all the Jewish unions in Boston in Faneuil Hall Tuesday night. All general officers of the organization will address the meeting. It also is expected that the proposed Hebrew Trades Council, to be formed in this city on the afternoon of June 12, will be indorsed by the convention. While in Boston the visiting delegates will make their headquarters at the Castle Square Hotel.

A Hebrew Trades Council will be formed in Boston along the lines of the Hebrew Trades of New York and Philadelphia. The formal organization will take place one week from to-day in Odd Fellows' Hall, No. 31 North Russell street, West End. The new council will be composed of delegates from the various Hebrew trade unions of the city. It will be an adjunct to the Central Labor Union.

Such great success was attained during the recent organizing campaign of the Steam Engineers' Union [illegible] Commonwealth, that plans for its conference will be made a special order of business at the State Convention in Lynn next Sunday.

BUSINESS BLOCK ON OLD DUNBAR ESTATE

Famous Roxbury Property Will Be Improved by J. P. Collins, Purchaser.

IN A DESIRABLE LOCATION.

Offices and Store Room in New Block Almost All Taken by Tenants Now.

DURING the past few years many old estates of Boston and suburbs have given way to the march of progress in business and real estate improvements and the latest addition to the long list to the well known Dunbar estate at Washington and Cliff streets, Roxbury. This property was in the hands of the Dunbar family more than a hundred and thirty years and was one of the most famous estates in the Highlands.

A few months ago it was purchased by J. P. Collins, president of the Roxbury Storage Exchange, Inc., and within a month following the passing of the deeds Mr. Collins had plans made for the improvement of the valuable corner. A large four story brick block, two stories high, with frontage of 145 feet on Washington and extending back fifty feet on Cliff street, is now in process of construction and will be completed within the few months.

The building which is estimated to cost $45,000 with the land, directly adjoins the Dudley Street Opera House, near the Dudley street terminal of the Elevated, and though it is not yet finished, Mr. Collins has rented almost all of it. One-half of the lower floor has been leased for a long term of years by the American Express Company and the Roxbury Storage Exchange, Inc., will also have its offices in the building, removing from its present quarters at No. 2111 Washington street, Roxbury. The upper floors will be divided into eighty offices, while the lower floor will be arranged to accommodate eight stores.

The new block, which approximately 7,000 square feet, is in fact a large part of the old estate left by the old Dunbar family, in the hands of the Collins family. It is now practically constructing a large storage house. The demand for improved property has been so great that the entire block of the Dunbar estate is very large, and this demand is shown in the results of the building before it has been completed.

The passing of this old estate denotes the rapid changes in properties as real estate has in years past proved, as nearly the excellent values that can be gathered from a good piece of property. Mr. Collins' estate was leased for $45,000 with Mr. Collins' name added. The lot is 145 feet Dunbar street, which is now going to be used as a storage house.

BIG BATCH OF LAND SALES PUT THROUGH

DESPITE the unfavorable weather which kept at home many of those who anticipated attending some of the big land sales on the holiday, last Monday, the day was not entirely without good results, for a large batch of sales was put through by the operators in the suburban sites.

The volume of business was not as large as expected, but the brokers report that the next few days will be busy ones. Some of the sales were larger than was anticipated, while in other ways the sales were of a smaller nature.

The rest of the week bore very, brought better results and yesterday closed with a fairly good record for the week. Many of the operators will be on hand to-day and they expect the effects of the popularity will soon be forgotten in the case of prospective buyers and what is to be done in the next few days. Another good day. If it does not be late, and will be better on that score than it was last Monday.

Plans Are Now Under Way for Work on Roxbury Structure to Cost $100,000.

Roxbury Hibernians are following over the success which has attended the work of the members of the Boston Highland Hibernian Building Fund Association, an organization composed of representatives of twelve divisions of the order and several ladies branches, in raising funds for a new structure to be known as "A. O. H. Building." The organization has an option on [illegible] feet of land at Nos. 185 and 194 Dudley street, near Winslow street in the Mission district, and is now in negotiations for the purchase of the property.

Since the organization of the divisions of the Hibernians in the Roxbury district there have been many meetings and entertainments held in order to speed building work. These meetings were held in Hibernian Hall, Roxbury, and were well attended. The proceeds of the several entertainments were held, all which netted substantial sums.

THE CIVILIZATION THAT TURNS OLD AGE OUT TO STARVE

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

HERE is a clipping from a New York newspaper, published, not a century ago, but last month:

ENDS HIS LIFE IN OLD AGE

Carpenter Lost his Job and Learned He Was Too Old to Get Another.

Three notes found in his gas-filled room on the fourth floor of a boarding house kept by Mrs. Mary Dodger, at 323 West 124th street, when the other boarders broke into it last night, told the little tragedy of Everett L. Britton, 63 years old, a carpenter, who lay dead across his couch there.

The notes were much alike. One was addressed to his landlady, enclosing $3 and acknowledging a further debt of $15, which he regretted his inability to pay before he died. The second was addressed "To the Coroner," and the third to an undertaker, whom he had known for nearly twenty years.

"I am an old man," wrote Britton. "I tried to save for my old age. But sickness lost me my job, and they tell me I am too old to get another. I have no money and no work. The new generation cannot bother about me, and I have no wife or child to miss me when I am dead."

To the undertaker he willed his chest of tools and a life insurance policy for $156, which he had paid for at the rate of a few cents each week. He asked his friend to pay for his burial with this and to turn over whatever might remain to his landlady in settlement of what he owed her. Britton's friend said he had known him as a sober and industrious man.

When this despairing old man wrote "THE NEW GENERATION CANNOT BOTHER ABOUT ME," he brought a terrible indictment against civilization.

Why in the name of all that is Christian could not, the new generation bother about him?

Through his life he had done his utmost to contribute to the comfort of that heedless new generation. With his hands he had created wealth. With the money he earned he had helped to enrich other men.

He had paid rent, board, the cost of clothing and the necessaries of life. And out of every cent he paid out somebody made a profit.

He tried, he said, to save. But the paltry savings that can be put away out of the wages of a mechanic soon melt swiftly when illness comes to interrupt the wages and bills for doctors, medicine and hospital attendance begin to come in.

So this man, once a useful citizen, "a sober and industrious man," came face to face with starvation at the age of sixty-three. Too old to get another job, too self-respecting to apply for the cold charity that is offered in a home for the aged, who can blame him if he preferred suicide to a death from hunger?

Do you think that this is an unusual case? Do you imagine that any man who has been honest and industrious is able to put away during his early lifetime enough to keep him from want in his old age?

Look about you the next time you walk abroad in a great city. Here on the corner is an old man selling pencils. One glance at his eyes—pathetic empty sockets—will convince you that the sign "I Am Blind" that he wears speaks the truth.

All day long he will sit there, handing out a pencil now and then when he hears the jingle of a penny in the tray by his side. At night a little boy will come to lead him home to his lodgings. They are dark and cheerless, but what is that to him? He cannot see. But he can FEEL, for he is human, and sometimes, even in his misery, he must feel a fine contempt for the civilization that has turned him out to care for himself—with the alternative of starvation.

A little further along is an old, bent Italian woman staggering under a big load of boards, the fragments of broken boxes, poised on her head.

She is carrying them home for fuel. They mean heat to her and a fire in the cook stove. And perhaps at home is an invalid husband, old like herself, and unable to earn anything, whose continuance of life depends on the little she is able to earn by scrubbing and cleaning, and her possession of sufficient strength to find and bring home these scraps of fuel.

But "the new generation cannot bother" about such people as these. The new generation is busy with the pursuit of happiness, that savage, nerve racking pursuit in which our Constitution guarantees them the freedom to take part without interference.

The new generation is making money, if possible—spending it if there is enough, working, laughing, playing, bothering itself as much with age and misery as a puppy bothers himself with the old blind house dog that comes nosing about the garbage can for his evening dinner.

Tell the new generation that it was only half civilized and it would reply by calling you an idiot. Tell it that it has a duty to the old generation, a real duty, which it ought to work days and nights to pay, and it would call you a revolutionary fanatic.

Tell it that it is cruel, merciless, unnatural, and it would laugh pleasantly in your face and inquire why you didn't hire a hall.

But some day this new generation will take its place with the old generation. Then it will begin to bother. Then there will be another new generation to succeed it in the pursuit of happiness and to crowd it among the gray-haired, work-weary veterans who find the pursuit of misery is also uninterfered with by our great Constitution.

We are aware that to appeal to a human being to do something for wholly selfish motives is not appealing to his better nature. But we are also aware that most of the successful appeals that have been made to human beings, collectively and as individuals, have been appeals that interest their selfish sides.

And so we call attention to the almost universal neglect of the aged in the hope that the new generation will form the habit of caring for the old generation in time to share some of the benefits of the bettered conditions that will result.

The best that any man can do is to strive for independence. His chances of gaining it are not brilliant. His abilities may not command a wage that will make saving possible. He may be saddled with the support of others whose needs require all he can earn.

He may save and prosper for a time, and then a period of illness, which he could not possibly foresee, will sweep away all that he has laid by.

You have known of many such pathetic instances. You will know of many more in the future. Men who are bravely working to educate their children, women who by miracles of economy lay by enough to begin to buy their own homes—none of them can know that some day all their plans will not go awry, all their hopes be frustrated.

And then, in the autumn of their lives, with the winter of old age approaching, they will appeal in vain to the new generation, for the new generation "will not bother about them."

A remarkable civilization is this that we have built up. Converse with the average intelligent citizen and he will talk endlessly about the tall buildings, the magnificent railway trains, the telegraph, the telephone, the aeroplane and a thousand other developments of mechanics that have made our modern life more comfortable and more enjoyable than that of the ancients.

How he will pity the ignorant Indians, who lived in little deer hide wigwams, smoked a very inferior grade of tobacco and were never so happy as when they were tomahawking one another or removing scalps to decorate their belts!

How he will sneer at the Chinese, with their foolish customs, their refusal to adopt modern improvements and their lack of all enthusiasm for anything that is Occidental and new.

We shall not indulge in any rhapsodies about the Indian, for we believe that, despite his unquestioned original right to American soil, it was very much better for civilization that he was supplanted.

Nor are we enthusiastic about the Chinese. Those that were imported into California by capitalists in search of cheap labor proved a very serious detriment to that State.

But the Indians, with all their faults, did care for their old men and their old women—cared for them and venerated them, and did their best to see that the debt that was owing to them by the younger generation was paid.

When the braves were too old for war they were considered to be fit for counsel, and even doddering old age was respected and provided for.

The Mildest Punishment for the Crime of Outliving One's Usefulness Is Life Imprisonment in a Home for the Aged. The Extreme Penalty, Often Inflicted, Is Death from Hunger.

And the Chinese, although until very recent times their national development was about where Confucius left it, carry provision for old age to the point of ancestor worship.

The Chinese opposition to railroads is due to the fact that no railroad can be built through China without desecrating the graves of the dead, and to the Chinese the old generation and all the generations that have preceded it are sacred.

The Congressman who would to-morrow introduce a bill providing for a comprehensive system of old age pensions would be ridiculed by three-quarters of his colleagues.

Congress is too busy making arrangements to pension the Coal Trust and the Beef Trust and the Sugar Trust and the Steel Trust to bother about the old age of the men and women who have made this country a great nation.

Too many of its members are engaged in taking care of their private future to care for the future of men and women of whom they have never heard and hope never to hear.

But some day there must be old-age pensions—not pittances paid grudgingly by cold-blooded, suspicious organized official, but a liberal, adequate a given to all who deserve it, freely questioningly, like the reward of i it really will be.

Then we can think of our own in with real pride, and the thought that after all but little better than the wol leave their aged to die or fall upo your them will not come so often t our peace of mind.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE GIVES MESSAGE

To the Women of America Through the Sunday American

Written Expressly for the Sunday American. Copyright, 1910, by American Journal, Examiner.

WE must all live in the present, whatever our age may be. Let our motto be "Up to Date!"

There are some women who are like forgotten anchors that hold back the ship; do not be a forgotten anchor.

I would have every girl who wishes to go to college make every effort to do so. Education is the great preparation for life.

Beware of the treadmill of domestic duties, for that is what they may become if at the right and proper seasons you do not spread your wings and rise above them.

The legitimate claims of home and family are never to be neglected or postponed.

Do not think that you must resign all claims to the higher education because it may not be possible for you to go to college.

Study Greek. It's better worth having than a diamond necklace.

Remember that education is the key with which the door of the mind is opened.

I do not think it lessens a girl's chance to marry if she goes to college, but I do think she is likely to attract a different sort of man.

I think as a whole women are nearer to a general good taste in dress than they were fifty years ago. We should try to avoid the two extremes of giving too much or too little time and thought to the matter of dress.

I pray this generation of women to guard its high post as guardian of the future. Let it leave to its children a noble standard of womanhood, free, pure, and, above all, laborious.

The figure of the infant Christ dwells always in our mind, accompanied by that gracious mother who gave Him to the world. Let the fact of this great gift prefigure to us the august office of Woman.

Remember that education is the key with which the door of the mind is opened.

I do not think it lessens a girl's chance to marry if she goes to college, but I do think she is likely to attract a different sort of man.

I think as a whole women are nearer to a general good taste in dress than they were fifty years ago. We should try to avoid the two extremes of giving too much or too little time and thought to the matter of dress.

I pray this generation of women to guard its high post as guardian of the future. Let it leave to its children a noble standard of womanhood, free, pure, and, above all, laborious.

The figure of the infant Christ dwells always in our mind, accompanied by that of the gracious mother who gave Him to the world. Let the fact of this great gift prefigure to us the august office of Woman.

E must all live in the present, whatever our age may be. Let our motto be "Up to Date!" The epoch we live in now is our age, as well as that of our youth. We must not cling to the outworn past, for that is to hinder progress.

There are some women who are like forgotten anchors that hold back the ship; do not be a forgotten anchor. I would have every girl who wishes to go to college make every effort to do so. Whatever future lies before her, education is the great preparation for life. I think a college education gives a young woman a better chance to develop some good taste, and perhaps some talent. If she is clever, education is doubly valuable to her as it will give her something to admire besides herself.

Uneducated people, men as well as women, often suppose that they have invented everything that they learn in life. An illustration of this is the case of the young Scotch shepherd, quite an ignorant man, who by studying the heavens learned directly from the book of nature a great deal about astronomy. He did not know that printed books had been written about these very things that he had learned for himself, and when he claimed to have discovered certain natural laws, he was dreadfully laughed at. He afterwards, however, succeeded in getting an education and became a distinguished scientist.

And this brings us to the important fact that we should never forget that many of the greatest geniuses have been of the peasant class. Luther was a peasant, and so was Carlyle. The great Giotto was a shepherd lad. On a piece of stone he drew a picture of a sheep. This was shown to Cimabue, the most famous painter of that time, whose pupil Giotto afterward became.

I do not think it would be wise or good for all girls to go to college. We must remember Saint Paul's admonition, to consider the diversity of gifts. In the last century when the Greeks were first emancipated from the iron rule of the Turks they all wished to become lawyers, doctors or philosophers; the learned professions were overcrowded and no one remained to carry on the necessary business of life.

After the War of the Rebellion we had in our country something of the same situation. History repeats itself. The emancipated negroes all wished to study metaphysics and the more abstruse branches of knowledge. The great law of supply and demand, however, quickly sets such difficulties straight.

So with us women, we must remember the importance of the diversity of gifts. A very ignorant woman came to me once and asked me to teach her how to write poetry. She did not know how the thing was done and wished to learn!

Real success for a girl is to be of service to her day and generation, and to understand it. This is not so easy as it appears. How she can best serve depends upon her taste and upon how she may be placed. It may be of vital importance to her family to have her follow one specialty, such as housekeeping and domestic economy.

The legitimate claims of home and family are never to be neglected or postponed. The individual will lose more morally by neglecting them than she can possibly gain in taste or intellect.

Do not think, however, that you must resign all claims to the higher education because it may not be possible for you to go to college. People who love study will study under very adverse circumstances.

When I was in Santo Domingo I was once at the house of a man who was a carpenter and I saw there some Greek books.

"What are these books doing here?" I asked the carpenter's wife.

"My husband is studying Greek," she said. "He felt he must read the New Testament in the language in which it was written."

I myself did not learn Greek till I was fifty years old, so let no girl think that it is too late for her to begin this study. I say to you all what I once said to a young friend:

"Study Greek! It's better worth having than a diamond necklace!"

Remember that education is the key with which the door of the mind is opened. It is the way of escape from the cares that, unrelieved by some intellectual effort, may become benumbing and sordid cares. Beware of the treadmill of domestic duties, for that is what they may become if at the right and proper seasons you do not spread your wings and rise above them.

I do not undervalue the domestic cares and duties, but I would remind you of our dual nature, and when all our time and power are put into the purely material care for the physical wants of the family, the spiritual needs must suffer.

I do not think that it lessens a girl's chance to marry if she goes to college, but I do think she is likely to attract a different sort of man.

I have been asked my opinion as to whether the women of our country to-day as a whole are too extravagant in the matter of dress. This is a difficult question to answer, but I can say that I think as a whole our women are nearer to a general good taste to-day than they were fifty years ago. Dress is very important because it is one mode of expression.

We like to see in the most poverty-stricken dress a nice attention to propriety of form and color. We should try to avoid the two extremes of giving too much or too little time and thought to the matter of dress. One young woman, who was heard to boast that it only took her ten minutes to dress, received the merited reproof:

"You look as if it had only taken you ten minutes to dress."

To be suitably and becomingly dressed is surely one of the duties of life, but to make dress our chief care is a grave mistake. Love of ornament is by no means synonymous with love of the beautiful.

The taste which overloads dress is often quite in opposition to the true sense of beauty. The reason why education is usually so poor among women of fashion is that it is not needed for the life which they elect to lead.

With a good figure, good clothes, a fine carriage, with a little reading of the daily papers and of the fashionable reviews, and above all with the happy tact which often enables women to make a large display of very small acquirements, the woman of fashion may never feel the need of true education. We pity her none the less, since she will never know its peace and delight.

I pray this generation of women, which has seen such enlargements of the old narrow order, to deserve its high post as guardian of the future. Let it leave to its children a noble standard of womanhood, free, pure, and above all, laborious. In training and in education, the woman's influence comes before that of the man and outlasts it.

The figure of the infant Christ dwells always in our mind, accompanied by that of the gracious mother who gave Him to the world. Let the fact of this great gift prefigure to us the august office of Woman.

Here be it also to preserve and transmit from age to age the Christian doctrine and the Christian faith. And, in order that she may fully realize the glory and the blessedness of giving, let her remember that what is worthily given to one time is given to all time.

I was very happy on my recent ninety-first birthday (and on other days), in experiencing to such a degree the good will of my many friends. What more can I wish for? To deserve it!

BOSTON COLLEGE'S EXERCISES JUNE 19

Bishop Anderson Will Preach Baccalaureate Sermon to the Seniors.

The Commencement exercises of Boston College will be held this year during the week of June 19. The three students of the senior class will finish their examinations next Wednesday, and the members will not meet after that until Sunday evening, June 19, when, clad in their caps and gowns, they will gather in the Immaculate Conception, Harrison avenue and East Concord street, where the baccalaureate sermon will be preached by the Right Rev Joseph G. Anderson, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, and an alumnus of the college.

After the services the seniors will hold a reception for their friends in the music room of the college.

On Monday, June 20, the seniors will meet at the banquet table for the last time before the commencement exercises. The banquet at the college will be on Wednesday, June 22. The exercises will begin with a meeting in the evening at the College of the Holy Cross, James street. An invitation has been extended to Archbishop O'Connell to be present, and it is expected that he will be the principal speaker on that occasion, as he was in former years.

Among the speakers will be Louis F. Post, of the class of 1887, Mr. Koellner was also a member of the class of 1887, and will be one of the speakers. Mr. Koellner was a member of the class debating team that defeated the team of the first women's college in the United States—Smith College, Northampton, Mass.—in a debate held at Symphony Hall, Boston, in 1888, and prize orators at the college. Mr. Koellner was also a member of the Harvard debating team that defeated the team of Yale university in a debate held in Sanders theatre, Cambridge, in 1889.

Among the speakers will be Rev. Joseph F. Delany, S. J., president of Woodstock college, Woodstock, Md., and a member of the class of 1887, and Rev. Joseph F. Whitty, S. J., president of Weston college, Weston, Mass., a member of the class of 1888.

Besides the graduates, the members of the class of 1910 will attend the exercises in a body. The members will have their caps and gowns, which they will wear at the commencement exercises. Its members will also wear the class pin, which has been designed by a member of the class of 1910.

On Thursday, June 23, the class will have its last annual outing to Nantasket, and here will be a clambake and athletic sports.

DEDHAM ELECTION.

Town Meeting To-morrow for Sewer Board.

A town meeting will be held to-morrow for the purpose of choosing a member to the sewer board to succeed that by the death of the late Wilson.

The polls will be open from 6 a. m. till 4 p. m.

Wonderful Development Shown by Woman's Clubs

THE woman's club of to-day and the woman's club of a generation ago—forty-two years between—but what a development!

Forty-two years ago—ridicule and condemnation.

To-day a woman's club in every city and village, and the leaders in every municipal movement for good.

Few of the younger generation realize that right here in Boston the woman's club movement originated, and that from a Boston club, founded by a Boston woman, across the great growth of women's clubs all over the country and eventually the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Howe the Original.

That club was the New England Women's Club and the woman was Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.

A few days ago that club celebrated its forty-second anniversary, four of the original members being present. They were Mrs. G. T. Perkins, Mrs. R. S. Rhinesom, Mrs. A. H. T. Codman and Mrs. R. A. Bradford.

"Mrs. Howe originated the idea," said Mrs. Perkins to the Sunday American, "and like everything else she ever undertook she put her mind and hand to, it grew like a mushroom. At the beginning there was all kind of ridicule and contempt. A woman's club! The idea! Who ever heard of such a thing and what good would it be anyway! Women had better stay at home instead of running around attending club meetings! Clubs were all well enough for men, but women—never!

Had Able Lieutenants.

"But with Mrs. Howe were such women as Lucy Stone, Louisa Alcott, Lucia Peabody, Alice Gould Woodson, Julia Sprague, Abby May and Caroline M. Severance. They knew women who could not be frightened by ridicule nor deterred from their purposes by opposition.

"The attitude then was much the same as that on which is being made now about women's suffrage, only in those days carriages were used instead of automobiles and the men did not have much chance to smoke on the street car. Just as the suffrage question, not only here but some women were opposed to the idea and could see no sense in it.

"We used to meet in Tremont place and the meetings were very informal for the most part. We had lectures then as now and teas and socials, even dancing in those days. The question of abolition was the burning one then, and much work was done and many speeches given in that direction.

"The purpose of that original club was for the betterment of women, and most of the present laws affecting the hours and work of women, women in marriage and in every other particular in this State were planned by our club and fathered by its members. Lawyer Sewall, or Judge Sewall, as we called him, although he wasn't a Judge, went to the State House for us and got our measures through.

Men Were Honorary Members.

We had men with us, too, men as honorary members and men as advisers, because Mrs. Howe always felt that that was accomplished by the combination of men and women than by either sex alone. Ralph Waldo Emerson was an honorary member, as were also Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Joshua Kendall, Frank B. Sanborn and Thomas Cushing of Chancey Hall School.

"Shortly afterward the Socials was formed, and after that we were fairly besieged with letters from various parts of the country asking questions about how to start clubs and how to run them. Mrs. Howe was kept busy going from place to place organizing clubs and getting the work started. Mrs. Caroline M Severance, who now lives in California, was the first president, but since then Mrs. Howe has been president practically all the time, with the exception of the part of the time she spent abroad.

"It seems perfectly remarkable now to look back and think that there were no women's clubs, for nowadays even the smallest town boasts a thriving woman's club."

DEDHAM'S BIRTHDAY.

Town Plans Celebration of Its 275th Anniversary.

A boom has been started already in the old white town of Dedham to celebrate its 275th anniversary, that comes next year.

Moderator George Granville Darling has appointed a committee of fifteen for the purpose of preparing plans for a suitable observance of the anniversary of Dedham and report at a future town meeting. Committee is made up of some of the most prominent men of the town.

Dedham was made a town in 1636 and two years later the old Fairbank's house, one of the oldest in the country, was built and it still stands as the corner of East street and Eastern avenue and is managed by the Fairbanks Association of which former Vice President Fairbanks is a member.

A special act was passed by this year's Legislature allowing the town to appropriate a suitable sum of money for the celebration.

The committee of fifteen is made up as follows: John S. Riley, Laurence H. Burbank, Frank Mahoney, Fred C. Cobb, Thomas F. Tierney, Julius H. Tuttle, John H. Hirsch, Fred K. Grant, Warren W. White, Harry L. Kreck, Charles H. Shiver, Joseph W. Hartsporn, William E. Patenaude, Robert C. McQuillen and Thomas P. Murray.

WESTFIELD WOMAN IS 101 ON MONDAY

Mrs. Lavina Parks Was Born in Blandford on June 6, 1809.

WESTFIELD, June 4—Mrs. Lavina Parks of Russell will on Monday observe the 101st anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Parks was born in Blandford, June 6, 1809.

For about sixty years she has resided here, and at one time was a school teacher in that village. Mrs. Parks has been twice married. Her first husband was Horace Culver of Blandford. He died in 1846. Her second husband was Lyman Parks of Russell who died about seventeen years ago. Mrs. Parks has one granddaughter, Miss Mary Louise Culver, a teacher in the public schools of New York city, and a grandson, Frank S. Parks of Boston.

Mrs. Parks retains her faculties to a remarkable degree, although her sight is failing and she is somewhat deaf. She makes her home with Miss Minnie Boyden, 69 Noble street. Yesterday friends and relatives called to offer congratulations.

TECH NIGHT AT "POPS."

Conductor Maquarre Promises to Be Popular Leader.

The fifth week of the Pop concerts in Symphony Hall brings one of the great nights of the year on Tuesday evening, "Tech Night," when, however, the entire hall has been taken by the Institute of Technology for its students, its alumni and its friends. Mr. Maquarre's tenure of the position of leader of the Pops promises to be exceedingly successful. He began last Thursday night and straightaway won both the approval of the audiences. With four and a half weeks now to exhibit his skill there is no doubt that Mr. Maquarre will become one of the most popular conductors the Pops has ever had. The programme for Monday night brings novelties, Massenet's "Phedre" with Mr. Brooks first time, and M. Weidig's "Bacchanale Nuptiale" for the first time. The programme in full is as follows:

1. March, "Pandora Nuptial" ..... Missenet
2. Overture, "Phedre" ..... Weidig
3. Bacchanale Nuptiale ..... Weidig
4. Scherzo, "The Witches' Dance" ..... Bucalossi
5. Song, "Phedre" ..... Massenet
6. Mr. Brooks.
7. Suite, "Les Millions d'Arlequin" ..... Drigo
8. Introduction and Ballet.
9. Valse Lente.
10. Waltz.
11. Mazurka.
12. Marche Militaire ..... Schubert

G. A. R. to Meet.

The quarterly meeting of the Norfolk County G. A. R. and W. R. C. associations will be held in Dedham Friday, June 17. The veterans will meet in Memorial Hall and the Women's Relief Corps will hold its meeting in the Ames School. An entertainment will be given by the school children in the Ames School in the afternoon and the G. A. R. quartet of Weymouth will be the feature of the program. Dinner will be served in Memorial Hall at noon.

ROXBURY PARENTS DEMAND PLAYGROUND

Complain of City's Delay in Improving the New Dearborn School Property.

Unnecessary detail and too much red tape on the part of school officials in not tearing down the old school building adjoining the Dearborn schoolhouse at Orchard Park and Ambrose street is charged by Dr. J. P. Toomey of No. 370 Dudley street, Roxbury, who is heading a movement to bring about a change.

Business and professional men in Roxbury declare that the Dearborn is the only schoolhouse in Boston which has no yard. Parents want the extra space for their children to play during the morning recess. They say that the old building should be removed after school shuts down for the Summer season.

"It's perfectly ridiculous for the children to be denied fresh air during the morning recess," said Dr. Toomey. "I have attended a number of pupils and I find them suffering from nervousness, catarrh, tuberculosis, adenoids and contagious diseases for want of fresh air. The children are compelled to stay in the building all morning. What a contrast with the High O'Brien school on Dudley street, where the children romp in the yard in the sunshine and air for half an hour!

"It is my intention to wait on Mayor Fitzgerald with a number of public-spirited citizens of the district and point out to him the need of a yard for the children."

MEMORIAL SUNDAY.

Hyde Park Police and Firemen Plan for June 12.

The police and fire departments of Hyde Park will observe memorial Sunday June 12, the arrangements having been made by committees from these organizations.

They will form at 9 a. m. at the veterans' headquarters on Harvard street.

Chief John H. Weatherbee of the fire department will be in charge of the firemen, while Captain Robert E. Grant will have the policemen. The line of march from the Hyde Park Road they will march to Fairview cemetery, where they will hold services, decorate their late comrades' graves.

Dr. Charles Bluetreant will officiate as chaplin at the services, and there will be singing by a quartet.

Open Air Meetings.

Sunday open-air meetings under the auspices of the Evangelical Alliance of Boston will be held on the Common at 7 p. m. until the first Sunday in September. The location will be the third tree north of the tide walk. Different speakers will take part.

The sixteenth annual Summer meeting of the Ministers' Union will be held in King's Chapel to-morrow at 10:30 a. m. Rev. Albert P. Fitch, D. D., president of Andover Seminary, will give the address.

New York fashionable women quite commonly keep special French maids for their pet dogs. Mr. Dog's life is one of sybaritic luxury. He has a special room of his own, his French maid puts him to bed at night and brings him his breakfast and rubs him down when he gets up in the morning. The dogs of one wealthy New York woman sleep every night on fresh linen of the finest quality.

A French poodle that is prominent in the most fashionable circles has a special automobile built for him. His mistress noticed that he enjoyed his rides in her automobile very much, and so she had a miniature machine made for him alone. He steps into it and then it makes a long circle round the grounds of his mistress's magnificent house up the Hudson River. He enjoys it in his languid, blase, Parisian way. He has become so used to luxuries that nothing surprises him or pleases him greatly.

It would be a cruel shock to a fashionable dog to put his feet on a wet pavement, and so little shoes are made for little canine feet.

It is one of the French maid's numerous duties to put the little shoes on, to take the wearer for his walk, and to remove them when he comes back.

The most exclusive dogs never go out walking without their maids, who have to take care that common dogs offer no insults to their charges. Sometimes the maid carries the dog in a comfortable bag made for the purpose, but many fashionable dogs do not care to be carried by a woman.

While John Bull Has to Eat Three Pounds of Roast Beef to Get the Same Benefit.

AN PIER champion of the simple table has come forward to the person of Earl Van Meter Long, a Harvard football player, baseball player and all-round strong man, who comes out with the statement that now standing his active life in the gymnasium and in the football field on fourteen cents a day.

How this young physical giant, who stands six feet in his socks and weighs 195 pounds without, manages to thrive on such a simple and inexpensive diet, he describes in another column [illegible]. It will be seen that his preparations are even more simple than the Russian peasant eaten by a beautiful Countess of Warwick and her children, although that is far less pretentious than the daily fare of the average laborer's family.

Of the many unique exponents of simplicity in diet, these two examples stand out conspicuously—the case of the Harvard young man because it shows that it is possible to live on a frugal fare and yet undergo the various feats of physical prowess and at the same time [illegible] because it shows that such a diet is sometimes followed not from necessity or economy, but from choice.

The principal difference between the meals of these two simple lifers and those of the average person is that the former includes no meat at all, while in the latter meat forms the principal element. The nutriment which the average person derives from meat Mr. Long receives in a much cheaper form and to a greater extent from cereal rice and eggs. All of these foodstuffs are eaten because of the protein compounds which they contain and which are used only to build tissue and furnish energy.

Mr. Long [illegible] comes from Central Illinois, a [illegible] years old and [illegible] years in the world. Putting the Shirt Boxes Into the Home-Made Case.

By Edith Griswold.

AN everyday dialogue in an unsuccessful household runs something like this:

"Where's my brown tie with the pink rosebuds in it?"

"I don't know, dear, have you looked in the top bureau drawer?"

"Yes, and it isn't there."

"In the closet?

"Yes."

"In the trunk?"

"That's what I'm doing now, and I've fumbled everything out and it isn't there."

"Why, Tom, here it is, just where you left it, under your coat on the hat hook."

Then the exasperated Tom puts on the brown tie with the pink rosebuds in it and departs to his daily toil all out of sorts. His day has been spoiled, his serenity completely disturbed.

Meanwhile his wife at home spends the entire morning trying to bring order out of chaos and has done it countless times before, but succeeds in putting everything away neatly, but as there is no system or order in her method, the next time Tom wants anything the same tumbling process will have to be repeated.

And all because she lacks the intention or the ability to adapt handy boxes in which things can be kept separately.

There are hundreds of boxes in every conceivable size and shape; they can be bought for a song or acquired by the process of saving, for into every household come yearly dozens of good boxes which are thrown away. They have to be worked over, as we say, but this is fun, and the results bring a large amount of happiness.

I made a delightful case to hold my Summer waists veils, gloves and all the rest of the small things out of five pasteboard shirt boxes. Because I had been wasteful I had to buy the boxes and pay five cents apiece for them, but you may have four or five of them saved up ready for just such use.

The frame was made of lining boards and some small strips for cleats, which I got for twenty cents at a second-hand box factory. These lining boards were originally used to wind cloth on in a dry goods store, and are smooth, straight, well-seasoned hard wood lumber a quarter of an inch thick, and besides these virtues they are rounded on both edges so that they give the case a finished look which the straight edges of plain lumber never can. The frame required one and one-third lining board and three inches of another for each side. The top extends over the edges an inch all around, so the extra piece required for the top is four inches wide.

The success of this piece of furniture will depend upon your being exact in measuring and marking the joints and lines for the cleats. If they are not perfect even the whole case will warp and the boxes will not slide smoothly, and the result will be worthless from every point of view. You first have to be sure that the cleats and side pieces are sawed straight—use a miter box to saw them in. Then you have to be sure that the cleats are nailed on perfectly straight lines, allowing half an inch on all sides of the box for leeway. The shirt boxes are twenty-one and a half inches long, ten inches wide and four and a half inches deep, so the cleats are twenty-two and a half inches long and nailed five and a half inches apart. The side cleats are ten inches long.

I finished the boxes by papering them with wall paper, shellac and varnish (one coat clear varnish). You can use cretonne or print, but wall paper is the least expensive and comes in the prettiest patterns and is the easiest to put on. You cut strips the length of the four sides of the box and wide enough to turn down inside the box and underneath the bottom. Lay down enough newspapers on the floor to allow you to paste the whole strip at once. In papering the tops of the boxes paper the "flap" first, using a long strip just wide enough to reach over the edge on top and underneath the bottom edge. Then you cut a strip the size of the top and paste it on.

I put on the finishing touches with a ten-cent pot of white paint for the frame. A very handsome case can be made from one bandbox, two small boxes and two large boxes. This case is fitted to hold a complete Summer outfit, as the lower boxes are large enough for skirts and jackets.

I have made a beginning on this pattern by preparing the hat box. I used a box which I had and made it strong by nailing narrow strips of wood to the top edges on the inside of the box before putting on the wall paper. The light weight cardboard boxes which suits come home in can be strengthened in this way and made to serve well as receptacles for furs in Summer time or for use where they will be opened constantly. The cleat at the top gives it sufficient strength.

Hat stands for the bandboxes can be made of blocks of wood left over and covered with cretonne or silk.

But it isn't the big things which count in the economy of things—it is the thimble which cannot be found, or the needle in the haystack. Large drawers without partitions are the despair of the orderly person. They are always like the minds of the unsuccessful—full of facts and knowledge which the owner can never find when he most needs them. It was to provide myself with convenient holding-places for the little things which when needed became necessary that I next applied myself.

Cigar boxes make adorable little receptacles for small cases. They come in a great variety of sizes and are easy for sale (empty), so you will have to watch and wait to get them in some way. I used four cigar boxes for my small case. They are each two and a quarter inches deep, five and a quarter inches wide, and eight and a quarter inches long.

First you soak the paper labels off in a pan full of warm water, and if you wish to leave them in the natural wood you sandpaper the burnt-in labels and smooth down all the rough edges. The hinges which were strips of cambric glued on come off in the washing process and you clean the lid thoroughly and put it to dry under pressure to keep it from warping. After ward you nail two little cleats to the under side of the top to keep it in strength and keep it straight.

In making my case I discovered the deception of the world, for my cigar boxes were not cedar wood—only one end—the end which was not papered, the rest is white wood marked with a stencil to make it look like the grain of cedar. This decided me to cover my cases with cretonne. So I made a double hinge in the lid. First I sawed the board through in the middle and glued a piece of strong cambric to the top side. Then I turned the lid over, opened the hinge at right angles by bending one half over the edge of the bench and glued on a second strip of cambric. Fit it down perfectly even and smooth to the two edges. This will make the hinge work smoothly and last a long time. To prevent the lid from opening at this double joint, nail a small cleat to the inside of the end pieces of the box.

If you are going to use these drawers for articles which may soil the inside of the box, get some old negative glasses from the photographer, wash them clean in hot water and have them cut the size of the box, and fit him into the bottom of the box after you have lined them with cretonne.

Use heavy paste for putting on cretonne or white glue. Cloth is much harder to apply than paper because it pulls when it is wet. Run some basting threads in to show where the corners come before you put on the paste and they can be taken out when the work is finished.

Make all the drawers first, paper them and adjust the lids. If you don't finish the drawers first the frame will undoubtedly be either too large or too small. If you have ever worked with tools much you have learned that shavings have an enormous thickness. You will have nights when you forget to allow for it, and cretonne and cloth much more. But it is a thickness which you cannot estimate without much practice and unless you go into the business, or have a large family to provide for, you will not have time to learn just how much to allow for the thickness of the covering you put on the drawers.

The [illegible] I tried to make I made the frames I covered the boxes, and as there was a perfectly good frame in the small [illegible] can't make over these. The nail holes show and [illegible] are liable to split the wood. So after [illegible] have the boxes for the drawers you make the frame apart, drawing out the nails carefully so as not to crack the wood. Use the boards for much work from piece of two inches for the bottom of your new bed and [illegible] of the drawers [illegible] boards to make the of the front edge so that your box will [illegible] chest. It can be [illegible] Nail a partition across [illegible] place of [illegible] at sides of the long [illegible] cleats underneath. Cover the [illegible] with the other hand [illegible] top outside and in with cretonne and also [illegible]

The frame inside the outside of the box, leaving simply a [illegible] ing the inside the natural wood. This [illegible] with is better for hair pins, which are more or [illegible] less oily.

[illegible] which the [illegible] At the second hand box factory you [illegible] can find boxes of [illegible] dimension, some [illegible] of them in beautiful [illegible] and a little cretonne or wall paper, and a little [illegible] cambric of tile paper for lining, and you [illegible] the bottom of [illegible] have something which you can use.

What it Cost Me to Marry a Millionaire

"Have you seen your mother-in-law and your sister-in-law lately?"

Artists' Wives Unhappy, Musicians', Too; and Now Even Money Fails—What CAN One Do? Asks Mrs. Wells, Whose Experiment Cost Her Both Her Fortune and Her Husband.

WHAT becomes of the verities of that intensely hopeful and still popular song "When I Marry a Millionaire?"

Mrs. J. Raynor Storrs Wells, wife of a son of one of the most exclusive and oldest New York families married one. Young Mr. Wells is a millionaire; the only unfortunate thing about it was that he couldn't control his money. Mrs. Wells had quite a hard time of it. To be literal, it cost her, she says, just $a,000 and much sorrow to marry a millionaire. She was received and recognized by her husband's friends -because, in fact, a part of "society"—but says Mrs. Wells, her husband, by the way, is the so... of William Storrs Wells, president of the Fairbanks Scales Compa...—"Never again!" And here she tells why.

By Mrs. J. Raynor Storrs Wells.

IT has been a most expensive experiment to marry a millionaire. I wrong. I would never again sing "When I walked for a time in society, but H I marry a millionaire," but "When I cost me just $10,000 and years of agony of body and soul. It cost me the life of my child and has made me resolve never again to marry. Instead, I'm going back on the stage from which I stepped into that millionairish and, incidentally, nightmareish life.

The trouble with Mr. Wells was that he was a millionaire and a society man at the same time and that he had never gotten out of apron strings. It is against a combination like this that I warn other ... girls. The risk of giving up the ... for any other honorable means of earning ... her living to marry.

If such a girl should come to me and ask my advice, I would say: "No, no! Stick to your work. Be independent. Work and wait. Wait until you find out whether he has a heart-beat or whether he is human, bangle-dang ing on the arm of ... as an ornament to society." ... I should ... her ... ... if deeply in ... and ... Yes, and it would, for if the world of a millionaire would have started if it had not been for a faithful maid who slipped money under my pillow when I ...

Six years ago I had a good start on the stage. True, I was only a show girl, but I had health, and I was told I had talent and good looks. Certainly I had great ambition. I had a dramatic soprano voice, and I had built air castles about cultivating it. I had standards of refined living, inherited from my family, the Dabneys, of Richmond, Va. My father and uncle were eminent physicians. We had what was considered a comfortable fortune in the South. My past was that of a girl of good family in the South. My future I had planned was to be grand opera. My present was that of the many thousands of hard working, self-respecting, ambitious girls in New York. Then I met J. Raynor Storrs Wells. We met at a luncheon. After the luncheon Mr. Wells said to me, "May I call on you?" I answered, "Certainly not. I have just met you. I don't know you."

It happened that we met often for a next two months. He happened to know persons I knew and we were always meeting—at luncheons and suppers, and at the homes of friends. About five months after we met we became engaged. A year after that we were married.

The engagement was a long one because I wanted to be sure we were making no mistake in marrying. I said to him: "My family is as good as yours, but in spite of that I feel that your people won't want me in the family, because I have been on the stage." He told me he was sure they would welcome me once they had met me. Then I used to say to him: "But, how shall we live if they don't?" He would answer: "You are the most matter-of-fact girl I ever knew. Why talk of these things?" "Because," I would say "we must live, and you won't want me to remain on the stage."

"Even if my mother should not like you—and I'm sure she will—I have lots of money in my own right," he said.

I had supposed from various little hints and remarks that this money, if not a million dollars, was as close to it that it was practically the same. In time I allowed myself to be influenced by these promises and by my love for him. If I had not loved him I would not have married him, even if he were a Rockefeller.

We were married. He told his mother of the wedding, and she said, he told me: "I shall never receive a stage woman as my daughter-in-law. You must leave her."

He told of this and I tried to comfort him.

"She won't give me a cent," he said. There was no time ... to telephone to our agent. half crying.

"But the money you have in your own right," I said. "Surely we can live comfortably on that ... ment. The landlord said ... here for a month.

"But you know the circumstances. You saw the cable. You took me to the steamer yourself. You kissed me goodbye." I broke down and leaned against the deck rail.

Well, what do you suppose happened? You, I mean, who know your human nature? We made up, for the time. He was transferred to Portsmouth, Va., and went to our apartment. Deserted. He had gone, leaving part of his clothes behind. Even a shirt, from which he had not taken the studs, lay across the bed. There was no word from him. It was quite plain that this male bird had flown the nest.

Our friends knew nothing of his whereabouts. I could get no word from his mother. My letters were unanswered. When I telephoned the house an impertinent maid snapped at me and hung up the receiver.

Having heard him speak sometimes when he was desperate of enlisting, I wrote to Washington to ask whether he had enlisted in the army.

He had not. Then I wrote the Naval Department. They were very courteous. They said he had and that he was just then stationed at Newport. I hurried over to Newport to see him.

I went aboard the vessel and asked for him. I was conducted up a narrow gangway, and a man was pointed out to me. His head was shaved, and he wore overalls. It was my husband.

I picked my way across the sudsy deck, lifting my skirts to keep them dry. I walked over beside him, and stood looking down at him. He looked up and turned white

"I," he said. He always called me "I."

"What does this mean?" I said.

"Well, I've enlisted," he answered.

"So I see. But why?"

"Because I was told you had gone to Europe with another man."

"But you knew the circumstances. You saw the cable. You took me to the steamer yourself. You kissed me goodbye." I broke down and leaned against the deck rail.

Well, what do you suppose happened? You, I mean, who know your human nature? We made up, for the time. He was transferred to Portsmouth, Va., and I visited him every week. Once ... he came to New York on leave to see me. He looked so odd in his seaman's ... garb with his sailor's kit that my landlady was suspicious and wouldn't believe we were married. So I moved at an hour's notice. Well, he overstaid his time. We didn't think a few hours would matter, and when he returned they put him in the brig, the navy guard house, as an insurgent.

I tried to get my husband out of the navy. I used all the influence my family had. I went to Washington several times. I called on Mr. Roosevelt twice, and he was very pleasant to me. But other influences wanted him to remain in the navy. I failed.

And in something else I failed, that was in keeping the little fortune mother had left me. My husband spent it all in a year. It slipped between his fingers as sand. He simply threw it about. He gave one dinner alone that cost six hundred dollars of my money.

The time came when affairs were at their worst for me. My husband was stationed at Portsmouth, and frequently under discipline for drunkenness. My health was failing. Torture of body and mind had weakened me. My child would soon be born.

He could do nothing for me. I would not ask his family. I could not bring myself to ask my friends of the old times, and the friends of new I had soon found were shallow and vapid. A few of his friends might have stood by in time of trouble, but for the most part I found that after they had inquired, "Have you seen your mother-in-law and sister-in-law lately?" and I had answered simply, "No, I have never seen them," they always looked at me through their lorgnons, if at all.

I had sold and pawned everything when my baby came. If it had not been for a faithful maid who slipped money under my pillow while I slept I would have starved. My baby died when it was a day old, a victim to its mother's sorrows. That was my first brief, bitter experience as a mother.

Yet I had done all I could to keep him and his family friends. One morning we were awakened by the telephone, and I answered it. Emily, his mother's maid, said: "Mr. Wells's mother is very ill and wants to see him." I told him, and what he answered? He turned over on the pillow and yawned and said:

"Oh, what's she bothering me all for now? Let her die first!" I said: "You must get up and go to see your mother." He said, "I won't." I said: "You will." And I had my way. I went with him to the St. Regis and went to the reception room downstairs. "Now," I said, "You go up and see your mother." He said: "You must come along." I said, "Not until she asks me. You go."

In the end he remained in the navy and was sent to China. We corresponded after that in a fairly friendly fashion. I always advised him not to drink and to try to be a man—a man's man, not a woman's. The final rupture came about a matter of money. He wrote me that his family sent him $2,000. I wrote him if that was so, he ought to give some of it to his wife. He answered that he wouldn't.

That was the last communication we had. The subsequent ones were through our lawyers.

I have never seen him since, except in passing once, when we did not speak. It happened at the St. Lazare station in Paris. Some friends of mine intended sailing that morning, and I had promised to be at the station to bid them bon voyage. As I walked about the station waiting for my friends to arrive I noticed a very big man leading a very small dog. The big chap looked so silly leading such a tiny dog that I glanced at him, half laughing. My eyes hadn't traveled up from the big feet to the broad shoulders before I recognized the lines of my husband's figure. At the same moment my eyes must have fallen on me. He must heard him say to the [illegible] with him. "[illegible] I will [illegible]

"Proofs that I Am Edward VII.'s Oldest Son."

(From the Unpublished Memoirs of Prince John de Guelph.)

THE legal status of the lineal descent and succession to the royal titles of John Edward Rex Wettin de Guelph is determined under the provisions of the following laws, to wit:

1. Under the provisions of the Marriage acts of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Ecclesiastical and Civil Disabilities.

2. Under the provisions of the Royal Marriage act the 12 George III. C. II.

3. Under the restrictions of the Morganatic Custom followed by certain of the reigning families of Europe

4. Under the provisions of the law governing legitimate genealogical descent and succession by which legislative measures it is provided that legitimate offspring ONLY possess the legal right to bear, and to transmit to posterity, the family name of the paternal house

5 Under the provisions of the legislature governing legitimate lineal succession to titles of descendants of the house of Guelph and Saxe-Cobourg-at-Gotha. * * *

The first marriage of the present Prince of Wales (recently proclaimed King George V.), contracted contrary to the provisions of the Royal Marriage act * * * without the previous consent of the Sovereign under the great seal, had to be set aside by regular process, by royal proclamation, which was done by her late Majesty Queen Victoria, before the Sovereign could legally issue a royal proclamation under the great seal in conformity with the provisions of the Royal Marriage act formally consenting to his second marriage with the present Princess of Wales (now Queen Mary).

(This instance refers to the well-known report that the present King, George V., contracted a first marriage with a daughter of Admiral Seymour, of the British Navy.—Ed.)

With reference to the first marriage of His Majesty King Edward VII., contracted without the formal consent of her late Majesty Queen Victoria, with the most beautiful daughter of one of the most noble families in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and therefore duly qualified by birth and title to have become the Queen of England, there is no record of a royal proclamation under the great seal to set aside the said marriage. * * *

Legitimacy of offspring is legally established in a person who bears, and who is publicly known by, the family name of the paternal house. A paternal parent by recognizing the right of his offspring to be known and called by his family name, legitimatizes and thereby legally recognizes and protects the rights and privileges of such legitimate offspring to bear and to transmit to posterity the family name of the paternal house. * * *

Confirming the foregoing statement of facts relative to the legal recognition and protection of the legitimate lineal descent of John Edward Rex Wettin Guelph, it may be stated that while the said John R. De Guelph, for political and state reasons, during the early years of his life lived in seclusion, his identity was made public in India, during what was thought by his physicians to be a fatal illness, in the year 1893, and was confirmed at that time by his father, then Prince of Wales.

From the above-named year the subject of these memoirs continued to bear, and has been publicly known by, the family name of his paternal parent of the house of Guelph. The legitimacy of John R. De Guelph is legally established by virtue of such public recognition of his identity as a legitimate member of the House of Guelph.

His legitimacy was further confirmed by His Majesty King Edward VII. immediately following the coronation of His Majesty in 1902 by a command to the War Office to entertain official relations with the business house of Guelph & Son, under which firm name and style John R. De Guelph was then and is at present conducting his financial business. * * *

The legitimacy of John R. De Guelph is further established by extensive documentary evidence of private correspondence of an affectionate and filial nature between him and his father, King Edward VII., and the mass of official correspondence between him and the various departments of the British Government covering a period of many years. * * *

Bearing in mind that the Royal Marriage act was the creation of the whim of George III., to prevent, if possible, the forming of mesalliances in the royal family, can it be supposed that had George III. considered the Royal Marriage act to be constitutional he would have been a party to what he could only have looked upon as "mock marriages" between his brothers, the Dukes of Cumberland and Gloucester, with Mrs. Horton (Lord Lanham's daughter) and the Dowager Countess Waldgrave?

Can it be thought that he would have connived at a "mock marriage" by his own son? Can the world think that the royal Dukes of Cumberland and Gloucester, brothers of George III., and George IV., and, during the last reign, the late Duke of Cambridge, Edward VII., when Prince of Wales, and George, Prince of Wales, and others of the royal house, would be guilty of going through "mock marriages" with the ladies whom they loved and whom they wished to make their wives?

The idea is too preposterous to be entertained for a moment. And yet should we hold the Royal Marriage act to be constitutional, "mock marriages" would be the only explanation of the alliances contracted by those royal princes contrary to the provisions of the Royal Marriage act. * * *

The omission of her late majesty to set aside by legal process the marriage of my father and mother contracted in 1860 contrary to the provisions of the Royal Marriage Act was a grave error of judgment and is unfortunate for all concerned. It must be stated, however, that, as in the case of George IV., the omission was by design, and not through ignorance of the unconstitutionality of the Royal Marriage Act.

Evidence is not wanting, either in England or in Denmark, to substantiate the fact. Former members of the royal household of the late King Christian have testified to having been present at animated discussions in 1862 on the proposed marriage of the then Prince of Wales and the Princess Alexandra

The late Prince Consort (husband of Queen Victoria) strongly disapproved of the proposed marriage:

1. On the ground that the rank of the Prince's living wife was too high, and the exalted station of her family too important, to admit of the marriage being set aside by royal proclamation, without raising a storm of public indignation throughout the Kingdom.

2. That the issue of the existing marriage being a Prince, the position of the children by the Princess Alexandra, should the Queen persist in carrying out this alliance * * * would be very insecure; while the position of the Princess Alexandra would be no better than was that of the princess Caroline, the plural wife of George IV.

The late King Christian of Denmark supported the views of the Prince Consort, and was likewise averse to the proposed matrimonial alliance

The autocratic will of the late Queen Victoria, which, as is well-known, in matters of matrimony in the royal family was more pronounced even than that of George III., was brought to bear with all the diplomacy of a woman upon Queen Louise of Denmark. As usual in such cases, petticoat perversity prevailed against the sound judgment and wise counsel of the Prince Consort and the King of Denmark, and against the divine decrees of the King of Kings

The parental recognition and protection accorded to me by my father, in the face of much unpleasantness, has proved that he has religiously kept his royal word. * * *

It is not for me to say what animus prompted my grandmother, the late Queen Victoria, to adopt such extreme measures against my mother and father, or why she omitted to issue a royal proclamation to annul the marriage which was so distasteful to Her Majesty.

It is said that while the love affair between my father and mother was generally known throughout the Kingdom, the late Sovereign (then Victoria) resented the disobedience of her Sovereign Command, an offense which her pride and sense of Sovereign will would not overlook—a hasty and unjust decision of which she later repented in sackcloth and ashes. It is also said that Her Majesty was of the opinion that the best interests of the nation could be served by suppressing all knowledge from the public of the consummation of the marriage of the Prince of Wales.

In order to carry out this policy it was imperative that drastic measures should be adopted to separate the young couple, and so, in the late Summer of 1869, the domestic trouble in the royal family was brought to a head by sending the Prince of Wales on a visit to Canada and thence to pay a visit to the United States as the Baron of Renfrew. In the meantime care had been taken of the young bride, who, as I have been reliably informed was, by the Royal Command, directed to remain in residence at Windsor Castle until after her accouchment, which occurred, I was informed, at Windsor Castle on the eighth day of January, 1961. * * *

From information given to me in childhood, and which is corroborated in life, I was committed to the care of a maid in infancy, who was to treat me as her own son, on the understanding that I was never to be informed of my true parentage.

This plan, I understand, was adopted by my grandmother, the late Queen Victoria, with a view to suppress all knowledge of the secret marriage of my father and mother and to protect my heart-broken mother from being made the subject of court gossip. * * *

The first event of my life which was to shape the course of my destiny occurred shortly after my removal from Tunbridge whiter I had been taken from Maidstone

My foster mother came down from London one afternoon for the purpose, as she said, of calling on a lady friend who was herself making a call on friends in the neighboring town of Malling Her friend, she said, had expressed a desire to see John, and she wished me to accompany her when making the call * * *

When en route my foster mother appeared to be nervous and excited; she frequently readjusted my collar and groomed me down On arrival at the house at which her friend was calling the final touch was given to my toilet; we were then shown up to the drawing room. * * *

A number of ladies, who had risen from their chairs as I entered the room, stood seemingly at a loss what to do * * * My attent on was on the ladies further in the room. My gaze scanned the face of each lady from left to right of the room until, in the centre of the party, my eyes looked for a second into the eyes of a lady, eyes which spoke to mine as the eyes of a tender, long-suffering love can speak.

Simultaneously each bounded toward the other, drawn by the irresistible law of love. In the centre of the drawing room my mother lifted me up in her arms and embraced me as I never was embraced before or since.

The memory of my mother's heart-breaking sobs is too sacred to admit of publication to an unsympathetic public * * *

With the last shower of kisses sealed with tears of a broken heart my mother put me down. * * * I resolved as I was leaving that I would never pain her again with my presence until I had avenged her wrongs by the achievement of some great work, through my own personal effort, for the good of the nation, in recognition of which my country would be bound to honor her, as is her right before God and man

How Wicked Old George III. Instigated an Immoral Law Encouraging Royal "Mock Marriages"—And the Train of Tragedies That Has Followed.

IT is an extraordinary fact that the Princes of England, any one of whom may be King and also the head of the Church of England, are the only persons in the Empire privileged to commit bigamy enter into mock marriages and indulge in matrimonial vagaries that would send a subject to jail speedily.

This sinister condition was created by wicked old George III., who instigated what is known as the Royal Marriage Act to prevent the forming of "mesalliances" in the royal family—as he considered had been done by his brothers, the Dukes of Cumberland and of Gloucester.

This act, which is in reality not a bar but an invitation for British Kings and Princes to contract mock marriages, has been taken advantage of by every male ruler since George III., and has made tragedy of the lives of the first wives of at least three Kings and two Princes.

On this page are printed a proclamation by and excerpts from the unpublished memoirs of John Edward de Guelph, now a resident of Brooklyn, New York, supporting his cause as the legitimate oldest son of the late King Edward, and therefore the present rightful sovereign of England, owing to the lack of any royal proclamation setting aside his father's first marriage in favor of the alliance contracted with the Princess Alexandra of Denmark. This was done privately by Queen Victoria. Although the Crown Prince pledged for [illegible] first love, his mo[illegible] ignored!" she told Edward's unhap[illegible]

There are now living in unhap[illegible] late King Edward and of the present [illegible] is stated to be the daughter of Admira[illegible] de Guelph withholds the identity of his [illegible] in the hope of first being able to [illegible] official recognition as such History shows that King William IV. recognized the beautiful Mrs. Fitzherbert as the first wife and widow of George IV., his immediate predecessor on the throne, notwithstanding her second public marriage to Princess Caroline and that she never lost her position in Court society. Had George IV. possessed children by Mrs. Fitzherbert a most formidable contender for the throne could have been reared. George V. had no children by his first wife, either, so the succession issue in that quarter.

John de Guelph can be a dangerous claimant if he so decides

George III.'s brother, the Duke of Cumberland, married a daughter of Lord Ianham, who had been Mrs. Horton, wife of a commoner, the Duke of Gloucester married the Dowager Countess Waldegrave.

Some of the unhappy consequences of this immoral "royal custom" are set forth on these pages, together with the remarkable story of Prince de Guelph

The Tragic Romance of England's New Ruler.

WHAT George, Duke of York, now King George V., already had a wife when the death of his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, left him heir presumptive to the throne and direct heir to the hand of his late brother's fiancee, Princess May of Teck, was plainly intimated in English newspapers of that period. Notwithstanding the strict English law of libel, the names of the Duke of York and of Mary Seymour, daughter of Admiral Sir Michael Culme Seymour, were constantly associated in print as those of man and wife.

The existence of that marriage was a matter of general public belief. It was the Royal Marriage Act, created by George III., that saved the day. All that the Archbishop of Canterbury had to do, and what he did, was to proclaim from the altar steps of the Chapel Royal, St. James, that there was no legal or ecclesiastical obstacle to the [illegible] of York's union with Princess May of Teck

The British public was not deceived by this proclamation—the Royal Marriages Act was operating just as old King George III. intended it should, and the last doubt was removed that poor Mary Seymour was in reality the discarded wife of the heir presumptive to the English throne.

The marriage some years later of Mary Seymour to Captain Napier, of the British Navy, the splendid wedding gifts sents by members of the royal family, and the subsequent rapid promotion of Admiral Seymour — whom Queen Victoria decorated with the grand cross of the Order of the Bath—simply had the effect of further fortifying evidences that Mary Seymour had been the wife of the Duke of York

The story of that romantic marriage is curiously complete, considering the deliberability of its suppression by the royal family. Young Prince George was a cadet in the British Navy, lately promoted to a lieutenancy. Eventually his ship brought him to the important naval station of Malta, where English naval society is at its gayest, and where Admiral Sir Michael Culme Seymour was stationed.

Struck by the beauty and charm of Mary Seymour, the Admiral's daughter, Prince George used his royal "pull" to keep himself until further notice attached to the Malta station—and to pretty Mary Seymour. There is no doubt that it was soon a case of genuine love on both sides

Mary Seymour, however, proved to be a young woman of spirit. She loved George, but they must part because his rank forbade their marriage. George was already so deeply in love that his rank appeared a very small thing in his eyes. He was even less than heir presumptive to the throne, anyway. His elder brother, the heir presumptive, was a healthy young heir, and in Princess May of Teck would have a sturdy and wholesome wife from a race famous for large families.

So one day Prince George went to Admiral Seymour, told of his love for the Admiral's daughter, demanded her hand in honorable marriage and handed to him a paper containing the following written renunciation of his rights of succession:

"I, George Frederic Ernest Albert of Wales, hereby renounce all my claim to the throne of England for myself and my heirs forever, and became a simple English gentleman, amenable to all such laws as are made for citizens of Great Britain

"GEORGE FREDERIC ERNEST ALBERT."

Admiral Seymour looked at the ardent lover and then at this remarkable document

"Wilt your consent," he said, "the Queen could repudiate this paper"

"But I am a gentleman," Prince George answered with dignity

Admiral Seymour talked with his daughter. He found that he had a very desperate case of love on his hands. The accounts agree that it was only a few days later that the young sailor Prince and Mary Seymour were married by a young clergyman of the Church of England in the presence of the Admiral's household and several of the Prince's sailor comrades

The honeymoon was hardly over when the Duke of Clarence suddenly died Prince George was now heir presumptive to the throne, but committed to an unroyal wife and a written and signed renunciation of the succession. There were no evidences that these drawbacks cut any figure in the royal family. George's sailor days were over. As the oldest living son of the Prince of Wales the whole course of his life was changed. He was put into training as a future sovereign, and Princess May of Teck, still Victoria's choice as a future queen, was literally thrown at his head.

Mary Seymour saw her royal husband slipping away from her. She was heartbroken and had confidantes who did not conceal their knowledge of the facts in the case. They got into print. It was not necessary for George to confess either his marriage or the existence of the document he had signed—that fortunate Royal Marriage act of George III. settled everything.

More and more George was thrown into the society of Princess May, who regarded him with even greater favor than she had the Duke of Clarence. Worse, who wanted to get back to his wife, and could get no opportunity to discuss his position with either the Queen or the Prince of Wales, one day managed to

George IV., "Mrs. Fitzherbert's Husband."

VOLUMES have been published to support the contention that Mrs. Fitzherbert, the first wife of George IV. was the rightful Queen, and that the then Prince of Wales's second marriage to the Princess Caroline of Brunswick, accompanied with much pomp and ceremony, was bigamous

That George was legally married to Mrs. Fitzherbert, according to the rights of the Roman Catholic Church and the records of that marriage deposited in Coutts's Bank in London show that the Prince loved her to distraction and detested the Princess Caroline, and that Mrs. Fitzherbert was recognized by King William IV. as his predecessor's widow and correspondingly honored, are details of accepted history

Mrs. Fitzherbert was the daughter of a country gentleman, Walter Smythe Esq., of Hambridge, in Hampshire. When George Prince of Wales and heir apparent to George III. met her she was a widow and a celebrated beauty. George made violent love to her, but she was an honest woman and a good Catholic she avoided him. George fell seriously ill of pure lovesickness. His intimate companions warned Mrs. Fitzherbert that if she were not kinder to him the Prince would die. George sent envoys offering marriage.

At length Mrs. Fitzherbert yielded. There was a secret, but legitimate church marriage. Mrs. Fitzherbert immediately became the prize beauty of the social circle which surrounded the "first gentleman of Europe." When George built the magnificent Pavilion at Brighton —where he spent most of his time during the Summer season—Mrs. Fitzherbert lived nearby, mistress of a handsome mansion which he built for her. Within the Prince's intimate circle it was known that she was his wife. George III knew it, and behaved very decently to Mrs. Fitzherbert, until the Princess Caroline alliance was planned

As he was to be forced into this political alliance, George tried to gradually break with Mrs. Fitzherbert. He was a terrible spendthrift, and had to apply to Parliament for a grant of money with which to pay his debts. The Government approved of this grant, but urged the marriage with Princess Caroline. Meanwhile the reports of a marriage with Mrs. Fitzherbert had become so general that Parliament had to have a denial. Under the marriage act instigated by George III., a marriage with a Roman Catholic would have rendered him liable to forfeit the crown.

Prince George's astute friend Fox, though knowing all the circumstances came to the rescue and informed Parliament that the "rumor of the Prince of Wales' marriage was a miserable calumny, a low and malicious falsehood, a monstrous invention."

This satisfied the House, and the Prince got his grant—the inference accepted being that Mrs. Fitzherbert was not George's wife, but his mistress. The situation was not altered, officially, when Sheridan—a friend of both the Prince and Mrs. Fitzherbert—without mentioning names—rose in the House and delivered a panegyric upon "one whom he would not otherwise venture to describe or allude to but by saying it was a name which malice or ignorance alone could attempt to injure, and whose character and conduct claimed and were entitled to the truest respect."

One of the most esteemed authorities regarding this whole affair was John Fyvie, whose data and arguments first appeared in the Nineteenth Century, and later in his volume, "Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty"

It is recorded in these writings that the Royal Marriage Act was highly unpopular with the public, who regarded it as not only intolerably insulting to British birth and beauty, but as a violation of one of the first laws of our being. It was lampooned in published pamphlets, of which the following verses were a popular specimen

"THE ROYAL MARRIAGE ACT"

Says Dick to Tom "This Act appears
The oddest thing alive
To take the crown at eighteen years,
The wife at twenty-five

The thing a puzzle must remain
For, as old Dumbleswell said
So easy if one's fit to reign
One must be fit to wed

Says Tom to Dick: "True man's a fool
Good friend, 'tis easier far to rule
A kingdom than a wife"

It is history that George became king, reigned and came to his natural end feeling only detestation for the Princess Caroline—whom he brought to trial before Parliament accused of unfaithfulness—and unswerving love and devotion for Mrs. Fitzherbert. This first wife, however, never for a moment forgot her dignity or self-respect

It was a significant fact that Mrs. Fitzherbert never lacked respectful treatment at the hands of the royal family. Her position in society remained unaffected to the day of her death. While on trial before Parliament Princess Caroline testified that "if she ever had been guilty of misconduct, it was with nobody else than Mrs. Fitzherbert's husband."

Distinguished authorities have testified that undoubtedly if it had not been for the Statute of William and Mary, or the Bill of Rights (repudiating Roman Catholic royal marriage services) Mrs. Fitzherbert would have been raised to a rank by which she would have become qualified to be the Queen of George IV. Even with this disability, the popular favor enjoyed by Mrs. Fitzherbert and her cause forced the royal family and court society to treat her with the utmost respect while she lived and to honor her memory after her death.

Walking Dresses

Graceful Gowns Ma... in Tunic Effects A... the Mode, Says Lady Duff-Gordon. Smart Street Wear Dull Colored

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous Lucile of London and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes to-day upon walking dresses.

Lady Duff-Gordon writes each week the fashion page for this newspaper, illustrating it with photographs and sketches from her American and English establishments.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American headquarters are at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile".)

THE street suit need not be the synonym for ugliness. It may be quite the opposite, though I must admit as truthful writer to truthful readers that the street gown is never so intrinsically lovely as the evening gown. But at both times she should wear good fabrics, good and almost no one looks as well in the street suit as the ball gown. The few who do look as well in a street costume are not favored by nature as to beautiful figures and complexions, and they are glad to hide these defects which the night toilet reveals.

The costume for the street must be simple. It must be an appropriate and becoming setting for the type of the wearer. It should enhance, but not too glaringly enhance, her charms. Citizens of the world know that the line between the gentlewoman and the lees than gentlewoman is drawn by the clothes they wear upon the street.

The English, and for that matter the American, gentlewoman has a fancy for appearing as the lowly milgnonette by day and bursting upon view in the glory of her charms in the evening, as a full-blown rose. Woman is a flower that blooms by gaslight.

Another reason for this choice is that when a woman goes out during the day the eyes of many who are not of her own friends, nor of her own class, are upon her. She does not wish to attract their bold glance to her beauty. At night when she meets her own carefully culled coterie she feels that she is at liberty to turn upon that favored few the full batstery of her charms. She looks her best, for she knows that only the best will look upon her. This is logical.

A woman should dress well by day and dress better in the evening. But at both times she should wear good fabrics, good as to genuine material, not shoddy makeshifts. She should wear subdued colors. Gray and tan and black are the colors worn by the most tasteful dressers for the street. The really smart folk depend for their effects in street costumes upon the material, the cut and the fit, never upon color. Blues and reds and greens are taboo.

But until you have studied a really smart street costume you will not realise what elegance is in the lines of a well-cut gown. I disagree basically with the American conception of good lines in dressing.

The American woman wants to show her waistline. She thinks it is beautiful. It is not. Moreover, it is far from youthful. If you want to look young avoid the ugliness of the girdle at the waist line. Raise that waist line in your gowns two inches and you will not have the matronly aspect. The high girdle is the sign manual of youth. It is the relic, so to speak, of the youthful apron.

The most graceful street gowns I am making for Summer wear are those of tunic effect. One very girlish-looking gown which will subtract from any woman's matronliness is of natural color

A black hat with the drooping brim, slightly padded. The square, turn-down collar is of black silk embroidered in gold-colored silk. From this collar hang narrow ribbons of black satin from which depend three small tassels of purple silk like the silk of a thistle bloom. The coat is fastened by small frogs and tassels of the silk. A broad pocket gives a distinctive touch to a costume that is at once serviceable and, unlike many coat street costumes, feminine.

With this gown is worn a hat of dull red crush straw, draped with silk of the same shade, and having a tuft of feathers shading from dark to light red.

The girl who wears the walking suit must be most careful about dressing where may be careless about her boots and hosiery, for with the modified in her long skirts, but the girl who walks must be in those respects immaculate. I like the dainty pumps that are just now making a struggle for their existence. Lovers of dainty foot dressing are clinging to them, despite the efforts of some manufacturers and dealers to banish them

A "Lucile" Walking Gown of Tussore. Princess Effect.

The pumps are comfortable because they are so short over the toe that they permit the foot to comfortably spread, while preserving the neatness of the high heel. Especially attractive are these pumps if they are in suede and are finished with tiny buckles. A large buckle makes the foot look large. A small one dimpishes its appearance.

With the tan and natural colored Tussor walking suit I advise suede pumps or ties. With these should be worn silk or Lisle hose that match the color of the gown and shoes. Never, never, never wear brilliant colored stockings on the street. Those are for evening wear alone, and poising should tempt you to wear them at any other time. The scarlet stockings and pumps worn with black gowns and with white ones last Winter were admirable at evening functions, but on the street, where every eye surveys you, ugh! horrible!

The gloves worn with walking costumes should be of soft kid or silk of the same shade, or black to match the hat, or white. Brightly colored gloves are as bizarre for street wear as brightly colored shoes and stockings. Quietude should be the keynote of dressing for the street.

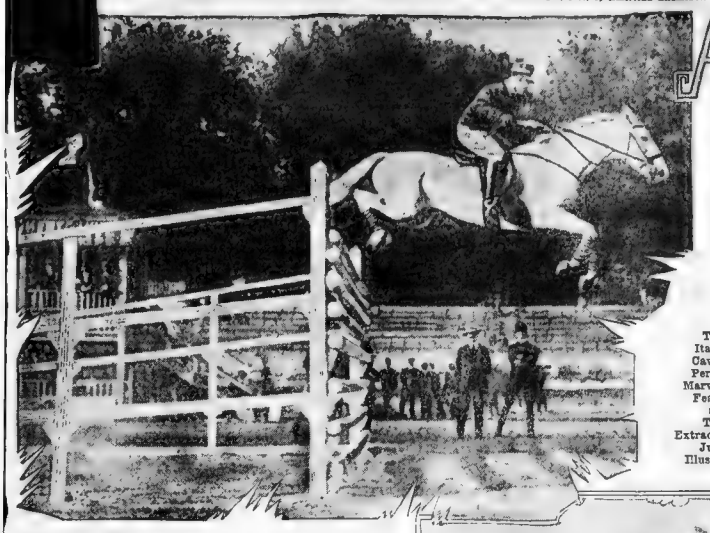
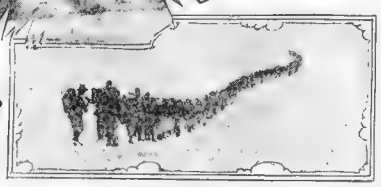
AN ARMY THAT WORKS



The Italian Cavalry Perform Marvellous Feats—as This Extraordinary Jump Illustrates

Odd Photographs Illustrating the Remarkable Training of the Italian Soldiers, the Most Perfectly Drilled Forces in the World.



An Italian Regiment Drilling Over Alpine Snows.

ALTHOUGH it is only the fifth in point of size and equipment, the Italian army has long been recognised as first in point of efficiency. There is no department of the service in which the Italian soldier does not excel. The cavalry are by far the most expert horsemen to be found in the armies of the world; the infantry, particularly the corps known as the Bersaglieri, are the best drilled and most capable of sustained marching, while the artillery is not only exceedingly accurate, but more mobile and active than the same branch of other armies.

These facts are the more remarkable because the Italian army of to-day is the youngest of European armies, dating back only fifty or sixty years.

One of the most ancient branches of the Italian army is the Bersaglieri, which was organized in 1836. It is a body of light infantry or riflemen. They attract the attention of every foreign observer by their soldier-like bearing, unusual evolutions and general smartness. Their uniform is of dark blue with red facings, and they are really distinguished by the fine long plume of cock's feathers which droops from their characteristic hats.

There are now over twenty-five thousand of these well-trained and loyal troops and they are equipped with all the latest devices for military service. The corps was organized by General Alessandro Lamarmora, who was in command of the Sardinian troops in the Crimean war. While he formed only two companies, as they were, as they are now, picked men of athletic build, capable of sustained endurance in long marches and of the quick, flexible, earthquake and vesuvius running step in field evolutions.

While various changes in drill and equipment have been made since Lamarmora's time, the principles he established are still followed.

A bicycle corps has been added to the Bersaglieri and its members are not only expert bicyclists, but trained athletes. When not mounted their machines, which are [illegible] for the purpose, are easily taken apart and strapped on the men's backs.

The Bersaglieri saw active service in principality from the inhabitants of the Crimea and acquitted themselves with great credit, and more recently, in the trouble in Africa in 1900, they showed themselves to be the first troops in the [illegible] out of frequent occurrence. They contended with a force which outnumbered them three to one, and under Colonel Comparini led the top of Monte [illegible] from midday until evening, despite the fact that the greater [illegible] In the many other [illegible] equally [illegible] and so against their adversaries the greater number of them went to their doom with their [illegible] at Balaklava was hardly more heroic than the conduct of the 5,000 Bersaglieri, who fought 30,000 natives without any chance of overcoming them.

But in peace as well as war the Bersaglieri have distinguished themselves and earned the gratitude and admiration of their countrymen. In the many disastrous earthquakes and volcanoes which have at one time or another oppressed Italy, this well-trained body of men has rendered most valuable service to the afflicted, and have justly earned their general popularity. There is no single body of soldiers in the world which excels these green-plumed warriors.

Another very efficient branch of the Italian army is the Alpini, a corps [illegible] of the younger [illegible] those most capable of withstanding fatigue and hardship. They are selected principally from the inhabitants of the mountains because it is among the hills and precipices that their main duty is performed. In the slippery Alps landslides, of course, are of frequent occurrence, and it is not infrequently cited as evidence of the possession of temperament on the part [illegible]

The Italian army, [illegible] the [illegible] by most of them as [illegible]. Their officers are [illegible] and [illegible] they have [illegible] machines to give instruction in engineering. Although the most [illegible] the Italian [illegible] corps from a military standpoint the technical efficiency of its [illegible], the factor which appeals most to the people is their splendid appearance and the adept horsemanship displayed by them in covering difficult roads.

Heavy guns are pulled by sure-footed horses up hill and down dale with such abandon that it seems as if the guns and ammunition must inevitably tumble down on the horses' haunches when they are descending and drag the horses down [illegible] the [illegible] ascending. The artillery have developed marvels of [illegible] long-range shooting and compare favorably in that respect with the gunners of other nations.

The Italian mountain artillery is even more remarkable than the main body of the corps. Every [illegible] is a picked man, selected not only for his skill as a gunner, but for his physical strength and agility. It is necessary for these soldiers to traverse the precipitous mountains [illegible] shouldering their cannon. These guns of course, are only light artillery, but never which anywhere from two to three [illegible] pounds apiece. The artillerists are trained to manoeuvre with these heavy pieces of armament in their hands and their powers become so well developed in time that they can handle the guns with comparative facility.

But the pride of the Italian army has always been its cavalry. Without any exception, the Italian mounted force is without a peer. For hard riding and feats of daring these riders are far ahead of any that the other armies of the world have ever produced. Owing to the hilly nature of their country, it was, of course, necessary that the cavalry should be well trained and sure-footed, but the enthusiasm of the corps has led them to acquire far greater skill and adeptness than any natural conditions of the country might be thought to require. Photographs of these horsemen descending almost perpendicular cliffs are familiar in this country, and these feats have always been the marvel of horsemen all over the world.

The Italian cavalry officers are enthusiastic sportsmen, and indulge in cross-country riding and steeplechasing by way of diversion. Their horses are trained to take fences over eight feet high, and the ordinary obstacles met with at fixed steeplechase meets present no difficulty.

At the horse shows in London and Paris the Italian cavalrymen have always made a fine showing, repeatedly taking the first prizes for jumping and similar events. Last year at the Horse Fair at San Sebastian in Spain four-fifths of the prizes were won by Italian riders, although cavalrymen from all nations participated.

A portion to the average height of Italian soldiers, and they are most conspicuous whenever they appear in public.

Military service is compulsory in Italy between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-three, except where relatives are entirely dependent upon a man's earnings, or he is physically defective.

There is a most complete military academy at Modena, near Bologna, corresponding to our West Point, where the officers receive their training. If they are intended for the mounted branch of the service, they spend a year or two more at the well known cavalry school at Pinerolo, to complete their training. After they have been assigned to a regiment they, nevertheless, keep up their training at the hunts and exercises held every season at Tor di Quinto, in the Roman Campagna. Pinerolo is in a mountainous country about twenty-two miles from Turin, and the company's very difficult nature of the country is largely responsible for the efficiency of the men who receive their training there.

There can be no question that the standing army of 225,000 men which Italy maintains, would prove a very dangerous foe to any nation against whom its forces were pitted.

"Six Talks With the Stage Struck Girl."

Temper and Temperament, Number Two of David Belasco's Articles Upon Factors in Dramatic Success life whatsoever are prone to explain their success to the multitude as being largely—perhaps solely—attributable to hard work. Such an explanation does credit more to their modesty than it does to their common sense.

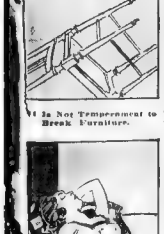
By DAVID BELASCO.

DAVID BELASCO, one of the greatest of playwrights and managers is writing for this newspaper a series of six articles dealing with the factors which make for success on the stage.

In this article, which is Number Two of the series, Mr. Belasco discusses the subject of temper and temperament.

There are a number of full fledged stage folk who might read it with profit, as well as aspirants.

"I Is Not Temperament to Break Furniture."



How a Disposition Toward

"Untoward physical violence upon some unlucky stage hand"

THERE is perhaps no subject associated with the art of dramatic representation and interpretation about which there is so much more or less hazy understanding as that attaching to the word temperament and all which that word connotes.

On the lips of the thoughtless and ignorant this word has assumed a meaning utterly foreign to its real definition, and so insidiously has this corrupt usage of the term crept into our common speech that even among the cultivated and educated we find the same curious misapplication.

Temperament has come to mean, in the vulgar parlance, anything and everything in the nature of a departure from normal mental or moral conduct on the part of any young and pretty woman. Temperament has come to mean temper—that is, bad temper. Temperament has come to mean lack of moral principle. It has come to mean a predisposition on the part of its putative possessor to make ducks and drakes of the social conventions which regulate the life and conduct of ordinary, sane human beings. And over and above everything else, it has come to be a synonym for laziness—just plain, common, old-fashioned garden variety of laziness.

Now, as a matter of fact, temperament is none of these things. It bears no relation whatsoever to any of the moods or tenses thus indicated.

When, for instance, I declare that Frances Starr is gifted with an inordinate amount of that rare gift, yclept, temperament—that she has Temperament spelled with a large "T"—I do not mean to infer that this charming and ethereal looking young girl has any predilection for breaking the furniture when things do not run as smoothly for her as she might like.

When I say that Blanche Bates has likewise temperament, I would not be misunderstood as intimating that the possession of this gift is likely to manifest itself in her by any untoward physical violence upon her leading man or perchance some unlucky stage-hand.

When I say that Nance O'Neil has temperament, far be it from me to have any one suppose that that artist tragic mien might prefer to sleep in a coffin rather than in a bed like a Christian.

Absurd as all these illustrations are, they have, nevertheless, a definite value here in this article, because they denote better than anything else, I might say, some of the many vagaries implied in the artistic temperament as manifested in dramatic artistes. And not only that, but every one of them, even to the sepulchral mode of slumber, has been predicated, of some one or other of our great actresses, and is not infrequently cited as evidence of the possession of temperament on the part [illegible]

What, then, is temperament? If temperament is not temper and an inability to control [illegible] if temperament is not a lack of moral responsibility, if temperament is not a disposition toward laziness and general "cussedness," what then, in the name of dramatic art, is it anyway?

Ah! What is it? What is it—this thing we call temperament? I only wish it were as easy to tell you what temperament really is as it is to tell you what it is not. It has been variously defined. Some would call it feeling, and I myself have frequently used that term in lieu of a more precise definition. But feeling is not the same as temperament.

I know, and so do you, hundreds of women who are veritable volcanoes of feeling, of emotionalism, but of temperament not an atom. Indeed I should perhaps, best define temperament as a condition, an attitude, a mental attitude—rather than any concrete emotional characteristic.

Asked for a precise definition, I should say that temperament is feeling tempered and controlled by reflection, and that it involves the possession of what—for want of a better term—I shall call an emotional memory. And this emotional memory I can best define by saying that it bears the same relation to the dramatist's art that a musical memory does to that of the musician. For, how ever much emotion, however much feeling one may possess on occasion, unless one has the ability to summon the memory of this feeling or emotion at such time as it is necessary to reproduce it, it avails not. This ability the woman of temperament has to an almost unlimited degree, and unless she has in she ought in justice to herself, to say nothing of the public at large, keep off the stage.

For temperament and temperament in large abundance, is the prime requisite of the successful dramatic artiste. If one be never so richly dowered with youth beauty, talent and [illegible] and temperament is lacking, all the other qualifications shall avail not beyond certain very narrow limitation.

If only I could impress this fact upon the hundreds, yea, even thousands, of young women who in the course of a year importune me for an opportunity of [illegible] on a stage career! Youth, beauty and talent hundreds of these young women have to a very great degree. Many—very many of them—have a no inordinate capacity for hard work. All of which is very good indeed. For industry is, of course, a most important factor in the success of the young dramatic aspirant, just as it is in every other department of life; but I would like to say right here, that we have here in America a certain tendency to overestimate the importance of industry. We have made a fetish of it. People who have succeeded in any walk of My Secrets of Beauty.

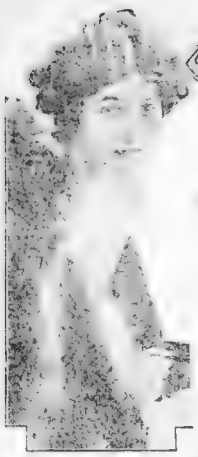
No. 75—The Crowbar Cure for Fat—by Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.



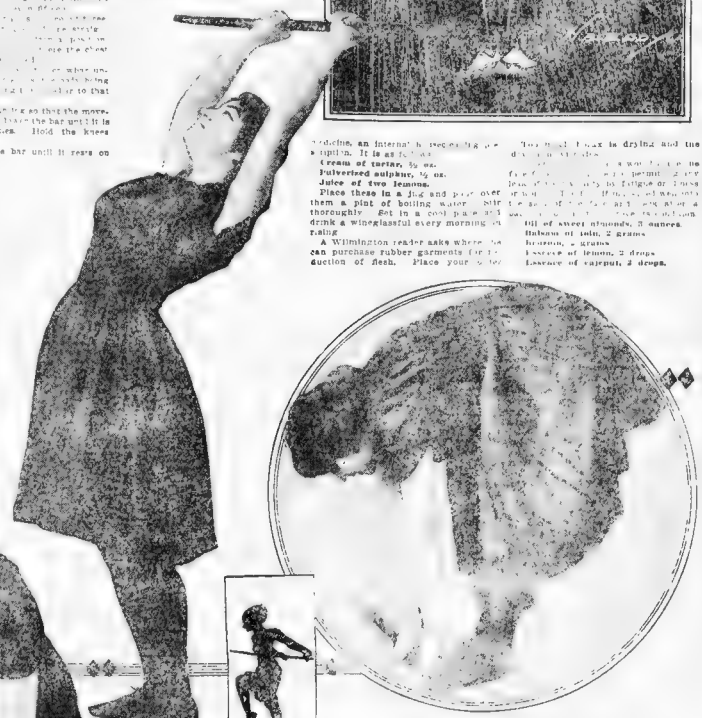
Mme. Lina Cavalieri

MME. CAVALIERI'S theme to-day is the new and severe crowbar exercises for reduction. Mme. Cavalieri informs her readers that the cowbar is a formidable weapon in the hands of beauty, and says that often a wand or a broomstick has been substituted for the weighty instrument without the knowledge of the fashionable physician who has made the crowbar treatment the fad. She describes these exercises in detail and adds more than the usual number of her valuable recipes.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri will present exceptionally interesting advice in "Loose Those Tightened Muscles."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

"Hold the crowbar straight in front of you in an horizontal position"



"Raise the crowbar as high as you can reach above the head"

"Lower the bar until it rests on the floor at your feet, still holding the knees straight"

"A complex exercise is holding the bar diagonally, crossing the legs and resting your first one foot then the other on it"

My Favorite Pie.

Some Fascinating Recipes from Mme. Tetrazzini's Own Private Cook Book.

Mme. Tetrazzini Making Puff Paste.

By Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini.

IN Europe we have fallen into the improper habit of calling pies tarts. The real tart is made of fruit inside a ring of dough. In the "derived tart," as some authorities have classified it, the fruit is placed on top of the baked dough. A pie is a quantity of fruit or other ingredients, most baked in a dish and [illegible] supported, by a layer of dough that is heaped with it.

To make good pastry be sure that the shortening that is, the butter or lard—is sweet. The flour should be of the best quality and sifted. Use cold water as [illegible] for making dough. I prefer ice water. Roll out always one way, bake in a hot oven. After lining your pie tins with [illegible] to paste will prevent the fruit juice from [illegible] through the dough. Also [illegible] burning. Sprinkle sugar and last add [illegible] over the upper crust. [illegible] with a knife [illegible] into flour. [illegible]

Plain Pie Crust.

MIX one half of a cupful of lard and one-half cupful of butter together and work them into four cupfuls of flour. Add the white of one egg, beaten to a stiff froth, and enough cold water to make it roll smooth. Some good cooks use baking powder instead of the egg.

Puff Paste.

ROLL out one and a quarter pounds of sifted flour and a pound of fresh butter. Rub one-third of the butter well into two-thirds of the flour, and add a teaspoonful of salt. When thoroughly mixed, add a beaten egg and enough ice water to moisten the mixture so that it will be possible to roll it. Sprinkle part of the remaining flour on the board. Cut the remaining butter into small bits and about a half inch thick for the upper crust. Bake in a quick oven until of a light brown color. If you see that it is browning before the fruit in the pie is cooked, cover the crust with thick white paper.

Orange Pie.

ADD to the grated pulp and skin (excepting the bitter, tough centre skin) of two oranges a cup of sifted sugar. Into this stir the yolks of three eggs and a half cupful of sweet cream. Bake in one crust as a custard. Beat the whites of the three eggs to a stiff froth, using just enough sugar to make the froth stiff. Place this upon the pie as a meringue and put into the oven long enough to slightly brown.

Potato Pie.

BOIL fresh or sweet potatoes until they are well done. Mash them and sift through a coarse wire sieve. Pour three pints of milk into a pint of pulp. Add a third of a teacupful of butter that has been melted, two eggs that have been well beaten, a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and rolling pin. As fast as the butter is rolled out place each in a pan by itself, the pan having been first well floured. Cover the pastry with the rolled butter. Sprinkle on a little of the reserved flour and roll the crust up. Continue rolling out the crust and adding the butter and flour until all is used. Roll out lightly as thin as you can. Sprinkle that have been well beaten, a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and rolling pin. As fast as the butter is half a teaspoonful of salt. Bake with an under crust of rich paste.

Lemon Pie.

WARM one tablespoonful of butter. Beat it with one cup of sugar and one cup of water. Add two eggs and the juice and rind of one lemon. Add a heaping cupful of flour. Bake in a crust. Make a meringue of the whites of three eggs and sifted sugar. Spread it on the top and brown slightly in the oven.

Plum Pie.

STEW plums for a half hour, with equal quantities of sugar, to prepare them for the pie. Place them between two crusts and bake, puncturing the upper crust with regular holes to let the juice escape.

Rhubarb Pie.

STRIP the skin off some fine rhubarb; cut the sticks into pieces an inch long; fill a deep dish with them, cover them with white sugar and squeeze into it the juice of a lemon, if preferred use tart [illegible] on; place the dish in the oven; the sugar will shrink into a considerable [illegible] place it in a smaller dish [illegible] needed add more sugar and [illegible] cover with a crust [illegible]

Apple Pie.

WORK into a large cupful of light bread dough a half cupful of butter. In a deep dish arrange thin slices of tart apples. Pour over the apples one cup water to cover them. Roll out enough crust to cover the dish. Bake until the apples are tender. Lift the crust off and turn it upside down on a plate; cut in a little hole in the crust. With a tablespoon mash the apples in the dish in which they were baked. Place among them a piece of butter the size of a hickory nut. Add sugar to taste. Stir all together. Spread them on the crust. Grate nutmeg over the apples. Serve with cream.

Raisin Pie.

SEED and chop fine a heaping cupful of raisins. Stir a heaping tablespoonful of flour into a cupful of sugar. Pour into this one and a half cupful of molasses, then a cupful of cold water, the rind and juice of two lemons. Last add the raisins. Stir thoroughly. Bake with lower and upper crust.

Peach Pie.

COVER the pie dish with half puff paste; place a layer of peeled and quartered peaches in the dish, sprinkle sugar over the peaches. Pare

Cherry Pie.

WASH the cherries. Remove the stones and stew them for ten minutes or less on a quick fire, with an equal quantity of sugar. Line a pie dish with the crust. Cover well and make deep, long slits in the upper crust for the escape of the juice. Bake for a quarter of an hour in a quick oven or even a half hour in a slow one. Bake until the top crust is a delicate brown.

Green Tomato Pie.

WASH and slice as many green tomatoes as are required for the number of pies you wish to make; place them in a deep, earthen dish and pour over them New Orleans molasses and sugar in equal quantities; let these stew over a slow fire until the tomatoes are clear; cover a pie plate [illegible] puff paste and arrange the toes thickly upon it, pouring the syrup in which they have been stewed last; the cover is to be sprinkled over it the juice of [illegible] sift flour over the tomatoes, a tablespoonful to each pie; cover with a thick crust; make slits in the top crust with a knife to let the juice escape; after the pie has [illegible] add powdered sugar thickly.

Pumpkin Pie.

WASH and peel the pumpkin and cut it into pieces an inch or less in diameter. Place them in a [illegible] kettle and cover with cold water. Let cook for [illegible] hours, or until most of the water has disappeared

Cutting Off the Edges of the Crust Before Putting the Pie in the Oven.

Let the pumpkin drain through a colander. To do this thoroughly cook the pumpkin in the afternoon and let it drain over night. Next morning press the pumpkin through a colander, using a large wooden spoon or a potato masher. For four cups of pumpkin pulp you will require a heaping teaspoonful of salt, four eggs, a heaping teaspoonful of ginger, half a nutmeg grated, a third of a cupful of molasses, a third of a cupful of butter, a cup and a half of mixed milk and cream. Line a pie plate with crust. Pour in the mixture till the pan is well filled. Make the edge of the crust even by trimming it with a knife dipped into flour. Bake in an even at even heat, and bake thoroughly, for a pumpkin pie is an abject failure if not well done.

Sour Cream Pie.

FOR each pie beat an egg well into a cupful of sour cream. To this add a cup of raisins that have been seeded; better if they have also been chopped. Bake with upper and lower crusts until very well done.

Boston Cream Pie.

PUT two-thirds of a pint of milk to boil. Stir five tablespoonfuls of sugar and three of flour into a half cupful of milk. When the milk is boiling stir in this paste and leave on the stove until thoroughly cooked. Set aside to cooling and vanilla or lemon to taste. For the crust of the pie beat three eggs separately and add two small cupfuls of flour, a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and a cup of granulated sugar. Bake this crust and bake in a quick oven. [illegible] a bright yellow color. Take [illegible] from the oven, split the crust into halves and spread the cream between.

How the Weather Changes Temperaments.

THE man does not live who has failed to notice in himself a certain feeling of irritability attendant upon a sudden or pronounced change in the weather, or in climate or altitude. No doubt many people sense this feeling and know not what to ascribe it to. Others are more analytical and are never satisfied until they have found causes for certain effects. It is learned that this indescribable and unpleasant feeling takes possession of us when the changes mentioned occur.

While irritability is no doubt an outspoken and visible manifestation of a disturbance of nature's equilibrium consequent on pronounced atmospheric changes, the effect on the nervous system is probably comparable with that of quick transition from the northeast [illegible] to the [illegible]. The bewildered system does its best to respond to the changes, but fails, and in many cases on the nervous system as a whole.

There are certain sections of this country where these climatic changes are more evident than in others. In some sections [illegible] along portions of New England [illegible] and forty-seven different [illegible] of weather, and New England by no means sits alone in the matter of modifications of temperature, [illegible] is probably [illegible] in the United States.

Along the northern Atlantic seaboard [illegible] the weather bureau, and [illegible] be the weather man, and often [illegible] it as well as physical reasons. For instance, a man might start out in the shine of a warm, fair morning and in a new suit, and a few hours later have to make his way home in a pelting rain, with the suit in a [illegible] and-no-town." Or he [illegible] out on a cold, bitter morning [illegible] in the coat, warm and satisfied with [illegible] and find, when he starts to go home, that the temperature has risen about thirty degrees, driven away the [illegible] scantily. I prefer the flavor brought out by using brown sugar. Over the sugar place more peaches, thus sprinkle more sugar until the dish is filled; cover with a top crust; puncture the crust in the middle with a fork; press the crust lightly down over the lower one; trim with a silver knife that has been dipped in flour; bake in a quick oven.

The greater number of a child's waking hours after he reaches the age of six, are spent in the schoolroom. The greatest care must be exercised in making these rooms healthful, attractive, beautiful. Physicians and sanitarians who have given the schoolroom careful investigation and deliberate consideration charge many of the more serious ailments among school children to unsanitary wall conditions. So plainly is this the case that educators and school boards the country over are exerting every effort to have the classroom environment the best possible. Their first attention has been given to the improvement of the treatment of the walls, from a sanitary as well as decorative viewpoint, and the consensus of opinion is that is the most healthful, the most economic, the most satisfactory wall covering for the classroom. Manufactured from Alabaster rock, it is chastened by a process of heating and is rendered a perfect germicide. The thousands of poisonous germs which find a place in kalsomined walls find no habitation in the Alabastined wall. Alabastine is a pure white crystal, and when mixed with the proper color pigments produces the richest tone effects. By the use of proper stencils the classrooms may be decorated in a way pleasing to children of all ages. Every schoolroom walls should be in a color which is soft and restful. Bright, glary walls are harmful to the sight and dull the child's natural love for harmonious color effects and make the walls unattractive and cold.

should read our literature on the decoration of the schoolroom wall. Two of our booklets particularly cover the matter in a most comprehensive way. "School Hygiene" and the "Alabastine Book" sent free postpaid to any address. Send us the names of your school directors and we will mail them copies of our literature. Every parent should be interested in seeing that their school directors are fully informed upon this most important subject.

Please do not confuse Alabastine with cheap common kalsomine under whatever name it is offered to you, and remember, too, that there is but ONE brand of Alabastine—it is of the highest grade and most satisfactory. FOXY GRANDPA & LITTLE BROTHER

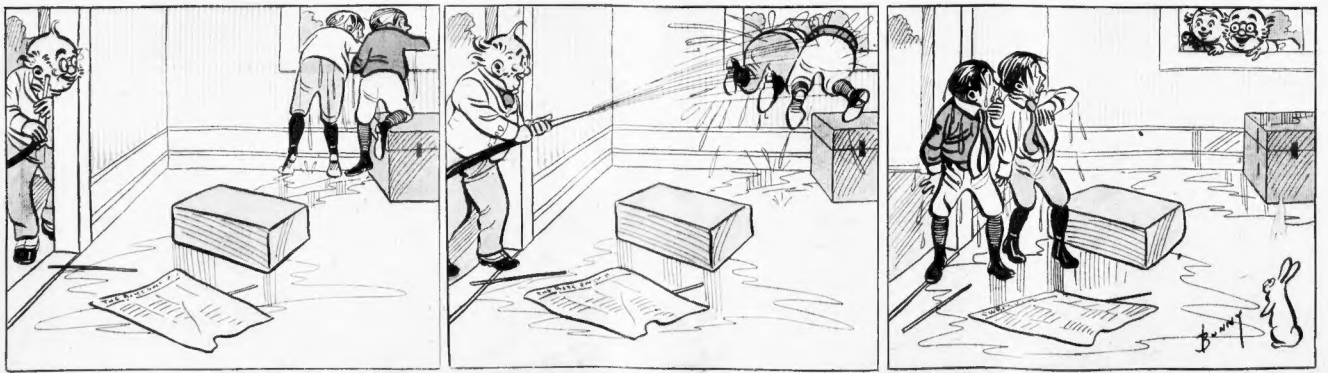
The Boys Pepper Foxy Grandpa and Little Brother with Their Putty-Blowers, but Soon Wish That They Had Not Done So.

1. GRANDPA—Goodness! What is that?

2. BOYS—Listen! Grandpa's at the window. We will pretend to be reading.

3. GRANDPA—I'll take a shot at those young mischiefs with the garden hose.



4. BOYS—Say! Oh, that was Grandpa, all right, and he's skipped around the corner.

5. GRANDPA—I'll just give them another little dose for good measure.

6. GRANDPA—Hello, boys! Is that you? Come on out and help us water the grass, it's lots of fun.
